Drastic Bill For Inflation Of Silver Up To President

Executive's Intervention Only May Be Able to Halt Passage.

Backers United For First Time

Big Economic, Political Issue Is Presented in Measure.

By Elliott Thurston.

Only President Roosevelt's intervention may be able to stop the drastic silver inflation bill on which hitherto divided silver groups in Congress united yesterday and reported unanimously from the Senate Committee on Agriculture.

The silverites, long formidable but unable to agree among themselves, at once presented an economic and political issue of the first magnitude by getting behind a composite measure which includes:

1. The Dies bill, recently passed by the House, to exchange all agricultural surpluses for foreign silver at a premium of not less than 10 per cent, nor more than 25 per cent above the world price of silver.
2. Nationalization of all domestic silver, in effect putting the United States on a silver standard.
3. Issuance of paper dollars, backed by silver acquired, and used to pay the debts of the Government.
4. Purchase by the Treasury, beginning January 1, 1935, of not less than 50,000,000 ounces of silver a month in world markets.
5. Continuance of silver operations until the 1926 price level is restored or the world price of silver is driven up to $1.29 a fine ounce

Up to President.

Since the Treasury already has registered its disapproval, President Roosevelt is presumed to be opposed to such sweeping silver legislation, but leaders in Congress predict that the omnibus silver bill will pass Congress readily unless Mr. Roosevelt strenuously opposes it, and some of the more ardent silver enthusiasts predict that it will pass anyway. They even conjure with the possibility of enacting it over his veto.

The inflation drive in Congress remained quiescent for some time after Mr. Roosevelt cut the gold content of the dollar, but the growing belief that the Administration is turning to right-wing policy, that recovery is not coming along rapidly enough and that the Administration might move to adjourn Congress abruptly combined to reanimate the inflationists.

They wish to force the silver issue to a conclusion in advance of

Franklin Bank Opening Near

Mechanics Savings Will Take Over Firm; Stock Being Sold.

Reopening of Franklin National Bank, in the consolidation with the old Washington Mechanics Savings, is expected by April 23. Officials said yesterday Mechanics Savings, which absorbed Mount Vernon Savings Bank March 5, will take over Franklin Bank as soon as enough stock in the latter is sold to permit the merger.

Washington Mechanics stockholders in annual meeting yesterday at Alexandria, Va., approved changing the institution's title to City Bank of Washington. The new name is expected to be approved Saturday by the Virginia Banking Commission. An increase in capital stock of the parent institution from $200,000 to $250,000 was voted also.

Stockholders added Francis E. Pope to the board of directors and reelected Walter K. Bachrach, M. H. Buckingham, Clarence F. Burton, Gustave Bugniazet, Fred Hewitt, Frank W. Lee, Jesse B. K. Lee, A. Scott Offutt, Edward F. Pickford, J. B. Prewitt, J. C. Pyles, Arthur O. Wharton and F. P. Williams.

Directors reelected as officers Clarence F. Burton, president; A. Scott Offutt, Frank W. Lee and F. P. Williams, vice presidents; M. H. Buckingham, cashier and secretary; Joseph M. McCarthy, William B. Mehler, jr., Bernard M. Grant, T. Eugene Elgin and T. Edward Norris, assistant cashiers.

Assassins Attempt Life of de Rivera

Spanish Fascist Leader Is Unhurt by Bombs.

Madrid, April 10 (AP).—Enemies of Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera, 32, Spanish Fascist leader and son of the former dictator, failed today in an attempt to slay him.

Alleged extremists threw two bombs at Rivera's automobile and then fired several shots at him.

De Rivera jumped out of the car and fired at his assailants. He pursued them several blocks and captured two persons. He was unhurt.

Pneumonia Is Fatal To 'Teddy' Robinson

Little Falls, N. Y., April 10 (AP). Theodore Douglas Robinson, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and for many years prominent in New York Republican circles, died today of pneumonia.

He was ill only a few days at the Robinson ancestral home, Cruger Mansion, in the Mohawk Valley town of Warren. He would have been 51 years old on April 28.

"Teddy" Robinson, as he was known to his intimate and political associates, returned from a several months' European trip on April 1. He arrived at Cruger mansion last Friday night, and was stricken the following day.

Survivors, besides his widow, the former Helen Roosevelt, to whom he was married on June 18, 1904, are a son, Douglas, of New York; three daughters, Mrs. Helen Hinckley, of Ottawa, Canada; Mrs. Elizabeth Mary de Sidour, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Alida Walker, of New York; a sister, Mrs. James Alsop, of Avon, Conn., and a brother, Monroe Douglas Robinson, of New York.

His first political service was in the New York Assembly in 1912, after which he became a member of the Progressive party. He was its State chairman for more than a year.

Returning to the Republican ranks in 1916, he was elected to the Senate for two years and returned again in 1921 to serve four more years.

During the Coolidge Administration he served four years as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

He was a nephew of the late President Theodore Roosevelt and a first cousin of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President.

His death followed closely his decision to reenter politics, after an absence of several years, as a candidate for Congres from the Thirty-Third District, comprising Oneida and Herkimer Counties.

Linke Wild After Following Filley Into Box; Klumpp Is Batting Hero.

By Frank H. Young.

Skipper Joe Cronin led his Nats back to their home heath yesterday and their return must have made them reminiscent of their last series here—the lamented October skirmish against the New York Giants—for they played the same type of game, good on defense, but practically helpless at the plate. As a result, they lost their 1934 home debut against the Boston Braves, 5 to 2. A disappointingly small crowd of about 1,500 turned out for the homecoming.

Five pitchers were used and, as is always the case, some of them failed. Mark Filley, given the starting assignment as a sort of job-test by Pilot Cronin, twirled well for the Nats, as did Lefty Ed Brandt and Ben Cantwell for the aliens, but Ed Linke and Fred Frankhouse threw their mates down.

Linke, the reformed fat boy, blames his downfall on the number 13 he toted on his back. He went through the sixth in fine style but the jinx started working in the seventh, which saw him suddenly lose everything in his pitching repertoire.

Seventh Unlucky.

Moore, first up, singled, Whitney doubled and then Linke walked three in a row, the first of these passes filling the sacks and the next two forcing in runs. Pinch-Hitter Thompson singled home two more and the fifth of the round was registered after Harris' catch of Urbanski's long fly. Linke then settled down, but by that time it was like sending for the doctor, instead of the coroner.

The Nats tried to do the almost impossible of winning the game on

Col. David Flynn Dies.

Baker Heads Body to Probe Army Flying

Former War Secretary Will Investigate Mail Deaths.

A committee of 11 members headed by Newton D. Baker is prepared to undertake the task of determining "what's wrong with the Army Air Corps."

The former War Secretary, who, during the World War, saw the air branch of the Army spread from an embryonic state to one of the greatest of the allied powers, accepted the chairmanship of the committee yesterday.

Secretary of War Dern made Baker's acceptance announcement and at the same time made public the names of others of the committee.

This is the same board on which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh refused to serve because of what he termed the "un-American" manner in which air-mail contracts were canceled. Orville Wright also declined to serve because of illness.

The committee will be made up of six civilians and five military members. Dern said the group was expected to meet here shortly to outline procedure.

The board, according to Dern, is entirely free of politics.

The investigation, planned by the War Department itself, stepped into National focus following a list of tragedies suffered by the Army Air Corps in flying the mails. The tragedies will play an important part in the commission's studies. However, Secretary Dern emphasized that the survey was designed to be of the widest possible scope and to make recommendations which he hopes will make the air branch as near as possible the best in the world.

New York Broker Held in Alleged Roosevelt Threat

New York, April 10 (U.P.).—Alfred L. Savage, wealthy Fishkill, N. Y., insurance broker, was held in $1,000 bail today for a hearing April 18 on a charge of uttering threats against the life of the President of the United States.

Merchants Fight Parking Ban For Three Downtown Streets

Proposals to abolish all parking on three downtown streets met strong opposition yesterday at a two-hour conference between traffic officials and representatives of various civic and business organizations.

Downtown merchants, it was pointed out, would suffer business losses should parking be prohibited in the suggested area. Streets on which Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer would ban all parking include F street between Fifth and Seventh and Ninth and Fourteenth streets; G street from Fifth to Fifteenth streets and Seventh street between Pennsylvania and Massachusetts avenues northwest.

"Streets are primarily for the movement of traffic," Van Duzer declared. "Under present conditions, with parking on both sides of crowded throughfares, the only result can be continued congestion."

Several compromise suggestions were offered at the conference. One was to ban all parking during rush hours and another was to prohibit parking on only one side of the streets in question.

Van Duzer declared his proposal would ban all parking between the hours of 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

"Something must be done," he said. "I intend to confer further with the District Commissioners. This meeting has left us just where we started."

The conference was attended by Wallace Robinson, chairman of the traffic committee, Washington Board of Trade; E. J. Murphy, Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Frank R. Jelleff, Merchants and Manufacturers; C. L. Marlow, of the Hecht Co.; Sylvan King, King's Palace; Louis Levey, Washington Chamber of Commerce; George Marks, merchant; J. A. Buete, merchant; A. C. Mayer, merchant; A. E. Van Hagan, Board of Trade: Ed Shaw, Merchants and Manufacturers; Harry Redell, Chamber of Commerce; William Friel, Chamber of Commerce, and Inspector B. A. Lamb, commanding the Traffic Bureau.

Business representatives said most of their customers are dependent on downtown parking spaces. A depreciable loss of business would result from the parking ban, they argued.

Income Tax Rise Beaten; Plea Pushed

Harrison Changes Stand and Blocks 10 Per Cent Increase.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Confident that he may yet persuade a majority of the Senate to support his proposal to require Federal income tax payers to add 10 per cent to their payments next year, Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, yesterday decided to move for a reconsideration of the vote of 44 to 46 by which his amendment was rejected earlier in the day.

Actually, the vote was 45 to 45, insufficient by one vote for approval of the amendment to the pending tax bill, but before the result was announced Senator Couzens changed his vote from "yea" to "no," in order to be in a position to move for reconsideration. Only one voting with the majority can make such a motion.

It effect, it might be said that Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Committee, in charge of the bill, was responsible for rejection of the Couzens proposal. Harrison voted "no," and spoke in opposition to the amendment.

Harrison Switches Stand.

His action was regarded by some of his colleagues as one of the clearest demonstrations of political acrobatics seen on Capitol Hill at this session. Last Friday Senator Harrison announced he would accept the Couzens amendment, termed it "fair," and predicted the Senate would approve the proposal.

Since that time House leaders warned they would not accept the amendment unless it were indorsed by President Roosevelt or Treasury officials. Some of Harrison's Democratic followers also chided him for trying to bind them in favor of the proposal.

Senator Harrison Monday declared that in his Friday announcement he was expressing only his personal feeling. He said he meant he was willing to accept the Couzens proposal and take it to conference to see whether the House would accept it, but that he had not intended to make it an Administration measure. He added that "all Senators were free to vote as they choose."

Congress Called "Cowardly."

In urging adoption of the amendment, Senator Couzens pointed out that the Senate recently spent but seven hours to appropriate $950,000,000 and already has consumed seven days on a tax bill which will not raise more than one-half that

"New Deal" Gets First Polls Test

Illinois Voters Pick 900 Candidates at Primary.

Chicago, April 10 (U.P.).—Democratic administrations today received their first test of strength in State and Nation since the 1932 landslide as Illinois voters selected more than 900 candidates from a field of 5,000 office seekers.

It was the first major primary election since 1932. Indications were that approximately 2,000,000 votes were cast, a record for off-year voting here.

Both parties regarded the election as a test of "New Deal" strength. Republicans sought to pile up a huge vote in their primaries and make at least a gesture of still being the State's major party. Democrats sought to poll a large vote as proof that their administration had been popular. Among 12 Democratic Congressmen who were contested for renomination was Speaker Rainey, but he was virtually conceded victory over J. M. Kirby, a farmer.

Ireland Mourns American Envoy

Dublin, April 10 (AP).—Memorial services will be held tomorrow for William Wallace McDowell, brilliant and popular American Minister to the Irish Free State, who died during an official banquet in his honor last night.

Officials, diplomats and citizens streamed in and out of the American legation all day. The 67-year-old envoy, since he presented his credentials March 27, had won popularity throughout Ireland.

Definite funeral arrangements have not been made, but the body may be sent to the United States on the S. S. Manhattan Friday.

The capital was in deep mourning today. Newspapers expressed the sorrow of the nation.

Judge Sentences Pair To Sit in Wrecked Car

Denver, April 10 (AP)—To try to impress motorists with the danger of driving while under the influence of liquor, Municipal Judge A. H. Pickens sentenced a man and a woman to sit for two hours in a smashed, blood-smeared automobile which had figured in a crash.

Cannon Paid Own Debts, Aid Reveals

Lawyer Asserts Bishop Borrowed Money for Anti-Smith Drive.

By Frank Getty.

Fervent ghosts of a lost cause which rent the politically "Solid South" in 1928 were conjured up in Justice Peyton Gordon's courtroom yesterday, as counsel for Bishop James Cannon, jr., and Miss Ada Borroughs made known to the jury, not without histrionism, their defense against the Government's charge of violation of the Federal corrupt practices act.

Overshadowing even the appearance on the witness stand of Edwin C. Jameson, "angel" of the anti-Smith campaign five years ago to the tune of $65,300, was the story unfolded by Robert H. McNeill, chief of the defense attorneys, of the battle to "break the South for Hoover" in the name of prohibition.

"The outpouring of indignation against what had happened at Houston," the decision to break with the Democratic party fostered by Bishop Cannon, the defendant's personal campaign for funds—some of which the Government alleges he diverted to personal needs—and the bishop's "zeal to see something accomplished that was the climax of a lifetime of labor," were described to the jurors in vigorous language by the swarthy, emotional attorney for the defense.

Was Taught to "Abhor" Liquor.

The story of how Cannon, "taught to hate and abhor the liquor traffic," left his mother's knee at the age of 12 to carry on the fight that was to be climaxed by the rift in the Democratic party in the South and the defeat of Al Smith, was impressed upon the jury in fiery phraseology and with vigorous gesture.

Seemingly in better health than on the opening day, when Prosecutor John J. Wilson lashed him unmercifully for alleged misappropriation of funds in addition to the offenses charged in the indictment, Cannon listened attentively and beamed approval when his attorney cried that "fear is not in the bishop's dictionary." Miss Burroughs bent characteristically over her senographer's pad.

The somewhat unusual procedure of opening statements on behalf of the two defendants was resorted to yesterday to offset the impression left by Wilson's blistering introduction of the previous day, and to attempt to explain away the failure to report to the Clerk of the House of Representatives some $48,000 contributed by Jameson, which is the main bone of contention in the case.

Holds No Report Required.

"If Bishop Cannon had reported the expenditure of this $48,000, we wouldn't have been in this embarrassing position today," McNeill declared. "But that couldn't be done, because the money was spent by the Virginia anti-Smith committee in that State, and no report was required by law."

The defense attorney revealed, however, that Cannon "paid himself

Discouraged Man Saved in 50-Foot Plunge Off Bridge

Hugh P. Melton, 42, was in his Riverdale, Md., home last night, recovering from a cold dip in the Potomac River which, park police said, was preceded by a 50-foot plunge from Arlington Memorial Bridge.

He was rescued by two bridge guards who spied a man clinging to a concrete pier near the draw span. Park Policeman Mark Raspberry, who applied first aid measures while an Emergency Hospital ambulance was on its way, said Melton told him he was tired and discouraged.

Melton is an auditor at the Department of Justice, according to hospital records. He is unmarried, police said. There were no eyewitnesses to the leap, so far as could be learned.

Soviet Envoy Holds Brilliant Reception

U. S. Officials Guests as Embassy Flies Flag.

(Associated Press.)

The refurnished Russian Embassy last night was the glittering scene of its first social event since the days when it housed the envoys of His Imperial Majesty, the Czar.

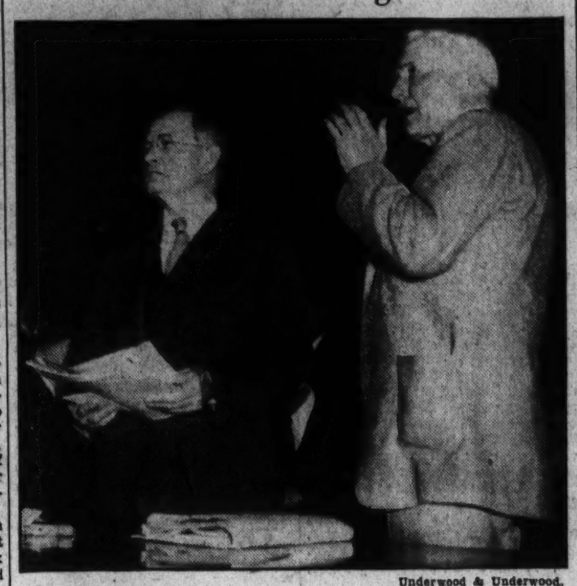

At noon yesterday it was formally opened as the Soviet Embassy with the raising of the red sickle-and-hammer flag by the staff of Ambassador Troyanovsky.

Later Washington's Governmental and diplomatic set gathered for a reception given by the Ambassador and Mrs. Troyanovsky.

Cabinet officers and ranking members of Congress were included, as well as a long list of lesser personages, many of whom were friendly to the cause of recognition before it was extended.

Speaker Rainey Also Is Brought Into Sift by Gary Man.

By Felix Bruner.

Six persons named by Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary (Ind.) educator, yesterday as having been present at a dinner last September, when an alleged plot to overthrow the social order of the country was revealed, will be summoned to testify before the House Special Investigating Committee next Tuesday.

Appearing before the committee, Wirt named in all 16 persons, most of whom he quoted directly or indirectly. Wirt made it plain that he believed Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, was the man responsible for plotting revolution.

Wirt testified that most of the statements which he characterized as revolutionary were made by three persons at a dinner party in Virginia attended by himself and six others.

Wirt Names Informants.

The three were Laurence Todd, correspondent to Tass, Soviet news agency; Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, chief of the Division of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture, and Miss Mary Taylor, an employe of the Farm Administration.

The other three who attended the dinner and who have been summoned to testify are Robert Bruere, chairman of the textile code advisory committee; David C. Coyle, PWA employe and Alice Barrows, attached to the office of education of the Interior Department. The dinner was at the home of Miss Barrows.

To Todd, Wirt attributed the statement that President Roosevelt was only a "Kerensky" and that he would be followed by a "Stalin." He said Miss Kneeland and Miss Taylor concurred in this statement. To the same source he attributed the statement that "we believe we have Mr. Roosevelt in the middle of a swift stream and that the current is so strong that he can not turn back and escape from it."

Wirt also brought into his testimony the name of Speaker Rainey.

Margin Plan In Stock Rule Bill Doomed

Senate Group Is Expected to Eliminate 60 Per Cent Proposal.

Elimination of the rigid 60 per cent margin requirements from the stock market control bill will be voted today by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

This was indicated late yesterday after the group spent several hours discussing a proposal by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

The Glass amendment would strike from the bill the present Section 6, which sets up minimum marginal requirements. In its place Senator Glass would provide that the proposed Federal Securities Exchange Commission, decided on Monday, should have full authority to prescribe minimum marginal requirements for brokers.

Jurisdiction over minimum marginal requirements for loans by banks affiliated with the Federal Reserve system would be given to the Federal Reserve Board. This would leave control over general credit conditions in the hands of the Reserve Board.

At present the board has authority to limit loans on securities by those banks indebted to the system. The new provision would apply irrespective of whether member banks owed Reserve banks.

Due to large excess Reserve balances, few member banks are discounting with Reserve banks and consequently the check in the existing law could not be effectively invoked, Senator Glass pointed out.

The Senate committee spent a large part of yesterday discussing the Glass amendment, which was drafted by Reserve Board technicians and has the indorsement of Gov. Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board. The discussion was so prolonged that a vote was deferred until today.

It appeared that the same majority which amended the bill Monday to provide for a new independent agency to control the stock markets also would vote the Glass proposal into the bill.

The only action by the committee

'Brain Trust' Critics Hit By Richberg

'Stuffed Shirt League' Is Flayed as Ones Who Hinder Recovery.

Miami, Fla., April 10 (Spl.).—America must "sustain a mental recovery from the depression," Donald Richberg, general counsel of NRA, declared in a speech here tonight.

In a scathing attack against critics of what he termed "a mythical brain trust," Richberg charged the opposition seemed to be organizing what "might be appropriately called a 'League of Stuffed Shirts.'"

His speech, transmitted by telephone to a New York dinner of the Trade and Commerce Bar Association, was regarded as the Administration's answer to Dr. William A. Wirt, Indiana educator, who appeared before a Congressional committee in Washington to expound his views on a reported coup d'etat.

"We are not in the slightest danger of a political revolution so long as we preserve our national sanity," Richberg said. "We cannot possibly escape from an economic revolution because that is in process throughout the world, brought about as the inevitable product of the industrial revolution.

Only One Danger.

"The only present menace to our National sanity—and consequent danger of a political upheaval—lies in the spread of that insanity which animates the League of Stuffed Shirts—that fear of brains that have already exposed the incompetence of their postwar leadership, brains that will always oppose their return to power, and brains that are seeking to establish a new morality for the conduct of public and private affairs in order to prevent those irresponsible uses of economic power for private gain that destroy the economic and political security of all the people."

The NRA counsel likewise attacked those who oppose the brain trust's presence in government.

"This hostility to the use of brains in government has its historic par-

Fete Queen Picks Attendants As Cherry Tree Buds Bloom

The first of the Japanese cherry blossoms made their appearance yesterday as the District Commissioners were officially proclaiming Cherry Blossom Week and Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, queen of the festival, daughter of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, was announcing the names of her twelve ladies-in-waiting.

Horticulturists predicted last week that the delicate buds would open between April 12 and 15. Warm weather, however, has speeded the blossoms along. Park officials declared yesterday there should be a beautiful display next Sunday.

"The Commissioners hereby proclaim Cherry Blossom Week in the National Capital, Saturday, April 14, and continuing to and including Saturday, April 21," asserted the proclamation.

"Saturday and Sunday, April 14 and 15, and the early days of next week will be marked by the full height of the blooms of the hundreds of Japanese cherry trees around the Tidal Basin. There will be blossoms throughout the week of April 16. During the last three days of Cherry Blossom Week, April 19, 20 and 21, the Washington public and the many visitors will be favored with an elaborate parade program, including two parades, a notable horse show, great fireworks display, boat regatta, outdoor presentation of "The Mikado," a sunrise ceremonial, the crowning of the Cherry Blossom Queen and the grand ball and reception.

"This entire week, marked by the full height of the blossoms in the earlier days and the elaborate program of the last three days, is one that we believe will attract the attention and admiration of Washington people and hundreds of thousands of visitors.

"We therefore extend a cordial invitation to all people of the National Capital and of the entire Nation to see and enjoy the natural pageantry and the elaborate festival program."

The proclamation was signed by Melvin C. Hazen, President of the Commissioners.

Default Taken By Shoemaker

Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, of Minnesota, permitted a default verdict to be returned against him yesterday in the District Supreme Court in the $100,000 suit filed against him three weeks ago by Charles Newman, taxi driver.

If Shoemaker appears in court within the next few days and shows good reason for failure to answer the fourth count of the action, which was merely a repetition of former counts, he can have it reopened. The defaulted count asked for $25,000 damages.

The suit now goes into the regular calendar for assignment.

Newman charged the Minnesotan with having beaten him when their machines collided at New Jersey and Rhode Island avenues northwest three weeks ago. He swore out an assault charge against Shoemaker. The Minnesotan still has to face this charge in Police Court, for a jury last week, voting "guilty," 11 to 1, was hung.

U. S. Now in Need Of Rubber Stamp Maker, Not User

Wanted—A rubber-stamp maker. Apply to Uncle Sam.

This appeal went out yesterday from the Civil Service Commission. It seems that one of the rubber-stamp makers down at the Government's rubber stamp factory in the Department of Agriculture quit, and as rubber stamps are still badly needed in the Government a man or a woman is needed.

The applicant must be an experienced maker of rubber stamps with at least two years' practice. He must be not less than 18 years of age and not more than 50. Applicants are advised to apply to the Civil Service Commission. The job pays $1,680.

Dr. Wirt's Testimony on His "Brain Trust" Revolt Charges

High "New Dealers" Are Named at Inquiry

Dr. Wirt stated that he had lived in Gary 26 years, that he was superintendent of schools there and that he had been a teacher and a superintendent for 40 years. He said he had given to James A. Rand, jr., chairman of the Committee for the Nation, permission to read to the House Interstate Commerce Committee his statements that certain members of the "brain trust" and their satellites were planning to overthrow the social order.

Dr. Wirt told the committee that he had sent copies of his statement to about 100 individuals and newspapers, asking for their comment. The section of the statement read by Rand was placed in the record. Dr. Wirt said he had known Rand for about a year and a half and that he had submitted four or five similar statements to him.

The Chairman—Doctor, if you will examine that portion of the manuscript which I have marked, you will note that you stated, on page 13, that you "asked some of the individuals in this group what their concrete plan was for bringing on the proposed overthrow of the established American social order." Is that correct, sir?

Dr. Wirt—It is.

The Chairman—Who were those persons?

Dr. Wirt—They were a group of individuals present at a dinner in Virginia, near Washington.

The Chairman—When was that dinner, Doctor?

Dr. Wirt—As I remember it, it was on Friday evening, September 1.

The Chairman—Who was present then?

Dr. Wirt—Robert Bruere, chairman of the Textile Code Advisory Board, or some such name as that; David Cushman Coyle, member of the Technical Review Board of the Public Works Administration, as I remember it; Laurence Todd, representative of the Tase Agency Press for the Soviet Government, as I understand it; Hildegarde Kneeland, from the Home Economics Department of the Department of Agriculture; Mary Taylor, an economist in the Triple A division of the Department of Agriculture; Alice Barrows, of the Department of Education. As far as I remember, that includes the entire list.

The Chairman—Where was this dinner?

Dr. Wirt—In the home of Alice Barrows, across the river in Virginia, not very far from Washington. It was a sort of country home.

Says He Questioned Group to Learn Main Idea of Government Program

The Chairman—Are those that you name here, the six, the ones that you referred to on pages marked from 13 to 15, inclusive, when you refer to "they" in the entire statement?

Dr. Wirt—Not exclusively. That is only a part of the persons with whom I talked at that time. I have my evidence divided into three parts. I consider that part 1. Part 2 is significant, not from the standpoint of those Government employes, but it is significant from the standpoint of finding out what the main idea is.

The Chairman—What was said on this occasion at the dinner in Virginia on Friday, September 1, and by whom?

Dr. Wirt—I made a statement concerning the recovery that the American people had had from April 18 until the 1st of August. I stated that that recovery was three times as great as any similar recovery in the entire history of America in a similar period; that the condition of business during the middle of August of that year had reached the point of 83 per cent, which was only 17 per cent below normal. I agree that I did a great deal of talking, because I was making a futile effort to try to put over to this particular group, as I had before to many other groups, and had referred at this particular time to the fact that I had had conversations with rather representative groups of the executives of the American Federation of Labor in their building here in Washington, and that I had discussed the matter with those gentlemen for an entire afternoon, and with others at other times, that the great purpose in America during that period was to get back our jobs and get back business activity; and then after we had secured that type of recovery that we should go on with our industrial reforms. I am in favor of social reforms. I am not a Bourbon. I believe that these statements ought to be brought out.

Now, these particular people, when I presented that statement regarding the American Federation of Labor, replied, "Are you the man who committed the crime of trying to convert the leaders of the American Federation of Labor to the idea that we should go back to the conditions of 1920?"

The chairman—Who said that? Who made that statement?

Dr. Wirt—Hilgarde Kneeland. The thing I am trying to say relates specifically to these particular sections which your honorable committee has just pointed out, and concerning which you just asked me. I was trying to give you my answer to the statement of Miss Kneeland at that particular dinner concerning those particular matters. I tried to point out to that group as I have pointed out in the manuscript that agriculture in this country had had this tremendous increase so that on July 15 Collier's Weekly published an article by a special correspondent with the title of "The Farmer is Whistling." My point in answering that question was: What is your purpose, therefore, and what is your ideal of what the main purpose is of the Government program in relation to the fact that we had had this recovery in such a marked degree up until that time? The answer was that our group takes the leadership and recognizes the leadership of Dr. Tugwell. We are in the Department of Agriculture and Henry A. Wallace expressed the viewpoint that we believed in.

Tugwell Quoted as Wanting to Close Commodity and Stock Exchanges

The chairman—Miss Kneeland said that?

Dr. Wirt—Yes; and in the opinion of Dr. Tugwell the so-called recovery was an illusion, it was a speculation, and if he had had power he would have closed the commodity and the stock exchanges.

The chairman—Did she identify anyone else in the group at that time?

Dr. Wirt—No one other than Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, and his first assistant, Dr. Tugwell. Then the question leads to what is their viewpoint as you understand it, what is the thing for which you stand. My purpose is to find out what the main ideal is, and I would like to know what the purpose, and what the plan is. These are the things that were referred to, and I will follow the pleasure of the committee. I know that I can make a pithy, concrete summary of an elaborate scientific statement that will appeal to the emotions, but I do not want to do that. I would like to read just a cold, bare, scientific statement if you will give me that permission, to which they referred at that time. Do I have it?

The Chairman—Who said it, Doctor?

Dr. Wirt—Miss Taylor and Miss Kneeland. We were trying to find out what the main purpose of Henry A. Wallace and of Tugwell was at that time, and they referred to statements of this type.

According to Dr. Tugwell, if we begin to plan we shall be changing once and for all and it will require the laying on of rough, unholy hands, on many a sacred precedent, and doubtless it would call for a greatly enlarged police enforcement department of the Federal Government.

The next series of statements, as I remember it, by the same person, was that the changes would have to do with industry itself and that Dr. Tugwell had suggested that business logically will be required to disappear; that he also had pointed out definitely in these statements that this statement that business will be required logically to disappear was not an overstatement for the sake of emphasis, but was literally meant.

Another statement made by the same person was this—and it was referring to Dr. Tugwell—that it is a logical impossibility to have a planned economy and to have business operating the country's industries, just as it is also impossible to have one—referring, as I understood it, to a planned economy—within our present constitutional and statutory structures.

Then the statement was added, still quoting Dr. Tugwell or referring to him—my check shows that it was a very exact quote—modifications in both, so serious as to mean destruction and re-beginning, are required.

Economic Planning Would Revamp All U. S., Witness Says He Was Told

At this same meeting the statement was made, "Why don't we do something really worth while? The things we are doing so far are rather trivial."

Miss Kneeland replied, "Yes, why don't we? There are so many people of our group here now in the Government and many of them in key positions. Why don't we do something worth while?" And I pressed the question to find out what is the main idea that we ought to be doing. Where are we headed?

Some of the other things brought out as given by Dr. Tugwell and by Henry A. Wallace—

The Chairman—Who is talking now? Who is talking at this meeting now?

Dr. Wirt—Still Miss Kneeland. Most of us—trying to quote Dr. Tugwell, and I am trying to summarize the substance of that statement to me concerning Dr. Tugwell's philosophy as representing this group—the reference was made that many people (I think the actual words were "most of us") have been quite free to predict that the institutions of Soviet Russia would break down because of their failure to have a profit motive in the management of their business and their industries, and that even today some of us go on saying that in the face of the real evidence in the matter.

Another similar statement that was made was this—that the people who are advocating planning should realize——

The Chairman—Who made that statement?

Mr. Wirt—Still Miss Kneeland—quite finally that everything will be changed if the linking of industry can finally be brought to completion in a plan.

And then it was pointed out that we had gone quite a long way and that we now had approached the final step in that development, and that that final step was relatively a short one, and that we were now considering crossing that threshold.

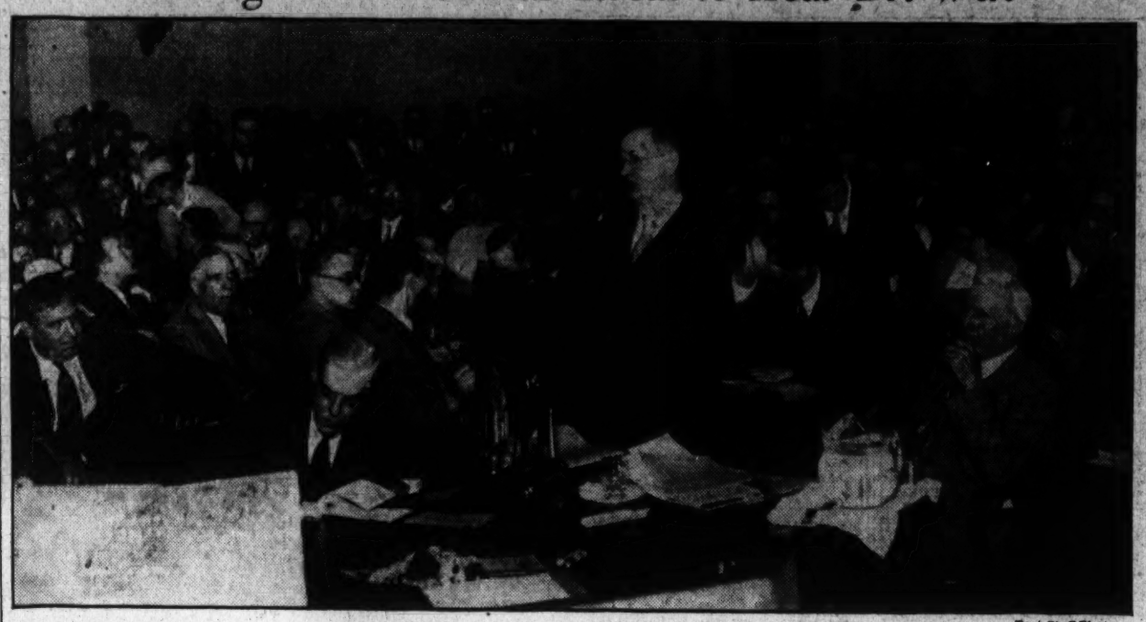

Those were the words quoted by this person from Dr. Tugwell's statement.

The Chairman—Miss Kneeland still quoting?

Dr. Wirt—Miss Kneeland, yes. Another statement was:

Planning will have to be a function of the Federal government, or, if it is not, the planning agency will have to take over the government.

Wallace's Name Enters Hearing; Dr. Wirt Cites Views in Recent Book

He also has stated, along with that connection, according to her report, and I know it was accurate, because I have read that thing myself many, many times and was perfectly familiar with it, that there would come a time when those people who had welcomed in the beginning this planned economy would be faced with this discipline that would have to be forced upon the American citizen, and that then there would be tremendous opposition.

A reference was made at that time to a similar statement by Henry A. Wallace, and that statement has since been published and has been made many times in public addresses by Henry A. Wallace. It is in the book published by him, "America Must Choose," only a couple of months ago.

The statement as quoted then was this, that Henry A. Wallace agreed with his assistant, Tugwell, that these things which we are now doing we must go on doing, much as we dislike them; that it was impossible to turn back.

I have here quotations that bear out those similar statements published recently in a book called, "Our Economic Society and Its Problems," sent out for high school instruction, of which I received a copy about six weeks ago. Do you want to go into that?

The Chairman—Later on we will take that up. Doctor, who made the statement to you that "we believe that we have Mr. Roosevelt in the middle of a swift stream"?

Dr. Wirt—The statement was made by three people.

The Chairman—Name them.

Dr. Wirt—Lawrence Todd, Miss Kneeland and Miss Taylor.

The Chairman—All made the same statement to you?

Dr. Wirt—Practically, and it was made in this connection: that we were all forced to go through with the things that we were then doing, starting to do, and we could not turn back any more than you can turn back the flight of time; therefore, not only Roosevelt, but all of us were in the middle of this swift stream.

The Chairman—I understand you to say that this Lawrence Todd and this Miss Kneeland and this Miss Taylor are the "brain trusters" that you refer to.

Dr. Wirt—No. I stated here the "brain trusters" and their satellites at the beginning of this chapter on futile effort. I also stated that in this manuscript which was filed. Is it a figment of my imagination? And I refer to Ernest A. Lindley's statement that President Roosevelt probably would be faced with the resignation of 75 or 100 of these so-called intellectual radicals.

I want to refer again to this statement that I made that the statement was made to me by Miss Kneeland that they had a large group in the employ of the Government, many of them in key positions, and why could they not do something worth while? Then we will go on.

The Chairman—Now, we will go to the second occasion. When was it and where was it, and who was present?

Dr. Wirt—It was at the same time I came to Washington, at that time at the request of Dr. Robert Kohn, who was the head of the housing division of the Public Works Administration. He wrote me and said that he would like to have me come to Washington if I could arrange to do so for a consultation with him and Mr. M. L. Wilson, his assistant, who had recently been appointed as head of the Subsistence Homestead Department, which was one of the divisions in the Housing Department, of which Dr. Robert Kohn was chairman.

The Chairman—When was that?

Conversations on Homestead Plans As Recovery Measure Are Recalled

Dr. Wirt. Friday, September 1. The first conversation was in Mr. Wilson's office. Dr. Kohn asked me to meet him there, and they later invited Mr. Pickett, who is Mr. Wilson's assistant. Naturally, being invited, I wanted to know what the main purpose of the subsistence homestead program was, as they saw it. Dr. Kohn attempted to explain to me what that purpose was.

He made it clear that generally the housing program was interested in securing a richer life, as far as possible, for the American people, through something on the order of the Garden City development in New York, from where he came, and in the order of a suburban trend. To meet that is the thing that is usually referred to by the term "A movement to decentralize the cities of America." I felt that that could hardly be interpreted as a recovery measure. It might be as a relief measure. But if you start to decentralize American cities, vacating houses that are already there, you are going to lower the rental values, and you are going to make it impossible for those communities to pay their taxes.

They explained particularly that the $25,000,000 appropriated for the subsistence homesteads—and this explanation was made by Dr. Cohen and Mr. M. L. Wilson together—one talking and the other agreeing, or the other talking and the one agreeing—that that money probably was expended for some other purpose.

It had been decided that they would use that $25,000,000 for the particular projects that they had referred to in their letter to me, which was a planning of some communities in America as demonstration centers of what might be accomplished towards getting the richer life for American people.

In the Subsistence Homestead Project, which I up to that time had understood was a part of the general recovery and relief program of our Federal Government, they informed me that the Government would buy quite a large acreage of land, and later on, in conversations, particularly with Mr. Pickett, extending over a period of two months—the thing was realized. That is, the Government was to buy 1,400 acres of land and they named it Arthurdale, near Fairmont, W. Va.; that this would be subdivided into relatively large subsistence homes and that men would be moved from Morgantown, probably 200 of the 800 families there on the relief program; that there they would have a factory which would manufacture probably something for the Government or the Postoffice Department. These conversations extended not only there but with Mr. Pickett and during a dinner later on at which he presided and at which Mr. Schwartz was present, the lawyer of the Subsistence Homestead Division, and a very bright woman of that division—I do not know her name, but we could find it if you want it, and Mr. Glenn and Dr. Taylor and some other persons.

My question was this. In what way is the Subsistence Homestead Development a recovery program, if you are going to take 200 families out of Morgantown and transfer them to a new community that you are going to build? That means that those 200 houses that these men occupy with their families will be vacated in Morgantown. That will lower the rents in that town and it will make it more difficult for them to raise taxes to take care of the other 600 with their other Government expenditures, and it will leave on their hands the particular individuals that need most a chance to go back into private industry, and you will be putting these into a collective type of community.

Homestead Program Called Obstacle To Recovery Disguised as Relief

Mr. O'Connor—Doctor, the chairman has given me permission to ask you a question at this point. Will you point out what part of the Rand statement pertains to anything that you have said was said on this second occasion?

Dr. Wirt—I consider a very prominent part of the Rand statement my reference to the introduction of various measures under the guise of social reform that were in reality thwarting the recovery program, and this is a part of it.

Now, take a factory, for instance, the factory that they propose to locate at Arthurdale. That would mean that the 200 men who are now engaged in a factory in some other community, manufacturing those same things, would probably lose their jobs.

Mr. O'Connor—That is your theory. What we want is the conversation that took place between you and the people to whom you refer as the "brain trusters."

Dr. Wirt—My understanding always has been that Robert Kohn and M. L. Wilson are considered a part of the "brain trust." If you will give me a chance, I will come to something else concerning which there will not be any question.

Mr. O'Connor—I wish you would come to it.

Dr. Wirt—Before leaving, I would like to say this. I asked them if this subsistence homestead movement, as exemplified by this outlined experiment in Arthurdale, is not a recovery measure and is not a relief measure, then in this situation, what is it? I wanted to know if those men would be permitted in the near future to buy those homes and they said, "No, not for a long time." I wanted to know how that community would be operated and they said they were going to employ, and they did employ before these conversations were over, a man from the University of West Virginia, located at Morgantown, to supervise and direct that community.

I wanted to know who would be operating that fatcory, and they said the Government would or they would.

I wanted to know who was going to furnish the money for the schools, because that was a Federal problem I was being consulted about, and they said the Government would.

My statement was this: That that to me was a Communistic effort, to use this as a demonstration of a type of community of the collective type, as a sample of what might be done in America for the richer life.

Mr. O'Connor—Let me ask you this. The conversation you have just referred to, would you interpret that conversation as part of the statement, quoting your language, "of a concrete plan for bringing on the proposed overthrow of the established American social order?"

Dr. Wirt—I certainly would. The important thing to me was this, that $25,000,000, as I understood, appropriated by the Congress for another purpose, was now being diverted to establish certain demonstrations or experimental communities of a collective type as a sample of what we might do in America for the richer life of the American people.

I would like to go then to another statement.

Speaker Rainey, Frederick C. Howe And William A. Westervelt Quoted

At this particular occasion Gen. William A. Westervelt, who was, when these things happened, the assistant administrator of the AAA, was in my home, in Gary, Ind. His home is in Chicago. Gary is simply across the line from Chicago.

Mr. O'Connor—Was he a "brain truster?"

Dr. Wirt—Well, he was the assistant administrator to George Peek, in charge of the AAA program. He was a man who impressed me of being in an important position and of great responsibility. Otherwise Frederic C. Howe, to whom he referred, would not be coming into his office and consulting him. Dr. Tugwell, to whom he referred, would not be coming into his office and consulting him.

And Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of the House would not be coming into his office and consulting him.

He stated that Frederic C. Howe came into his office and was discussing the Federal relief program; that Howe asked him, Westervelt: "Is there any way by which we can stop feeding them? We are going too slowly. If we could stop feeding them, we would make greater headway toward what we are trying to accomplish."

He said that Rexford G. Tugwell came into his office and told him that he could get a million dollars from the Government for a special kind of school to which they could get the recent college graduates who are not employed to come, and because of their attitude to society, due to the fact that they had not been able to get employment following their graduation, it would be easy to innoculate them with the ideas that they wanted them to have concerning the new planned economy.

Gen. Westervelt also made that statement, so Lewis Douglas says, at the time, to him. And I suggest that you call Lewis Douglas and ask him about that matter.

Gen. Westervelt also said that Henry T. Rainey, Speaker of the House of Representatives, came to his office, as I remember it, some time last November and inquired about the progress that was being made concerning a project in the western part of Illinois in which he was interested for his constituents. He said that he asked Representative Rainey—I will be glad to tell you how he came to ask it, but will omit that at your request—that he asked Representative Rainey what is Congress going to do, and Speaker Henry T. Rainey said, "Congress will assemble, we will pass certain laws, and adjourn about the middle of May, and after we adjourn in a month or six weeks the Government will take over the operation of a certain number of industries, then within another month or two the Government will take over the operation of some other industries, and then I do not know what will happen."

Gen. Westervelt told me that practically the things referred to in my statement to Rand were as he knew them from his experience in his Government office, with the exception of one thing, and that was I made the statement in my communication to Rand that it was pointed out to me in the Virginia dinner that the plan of the economy advocates did not propose and did not want to take over the operation of agriculture.

Gen. Westervelt called my attention to the fact that was probably an error, and I had since, of course, noticed many statements where Dr. Tugwell has said in substance they are considering a plan by which they would see to it that the land control of the future would be operated for the benefit and interest of other people than just the mere owners of the land. So I probably was in error in taking the word of these people at the dinner as to what his real purpose was.

Mr. O'Connor—Have you substantially concluded the conversation between you and Gen. Westervelt on this occasion?

Dr. Wirt—I have. Gentlemen, due to the fact this has gone out, and the fact you have, as I really believe, the welfare of your country at heart, you have all of the resources of Congress to find the facts in this case, I do not believe it is worth while to continue my testimony any further. I thank you.

The chairman—Just a minute; the committee may want to ask you some questions.

Mr. O'Connor—Doctor, you quote a statement made to you to this effect, "We all think that Mr. Roosevelt is only the Kerensky of this revolution." Who made that statement to you?

Dr. Wirt—I have heard that statement made, of course, many, many times, but it was made at the Virginia dinner meeting by Laurence Todd and Miss Kneeland, approved by Miss Taylor.

Mr. O'Connor—They both made that exact statement?

Dr. Wirt—That is the substance of it. They may not have stated it exactly that way, and they did not state it exactly in the same words, either of them.

Mr. Lehlbach—They were planning to do with respect to the Government so as to make it conform with the political philosophy they entertained?

Dr. Wirt—The established social order would be overthrown.

Mr. O'Connor—When you speak of revolutions and revolutionists, are you talking about revolutions against the established social order, or revolutions against the Government?

Dr. Wirt—I used the term just as Ernest Lindley used it when he published this book on the Roosevelt Administration, and I use it as other people use it when we talk about social revolution.

Mr. O'Connor—Do you use it as revolution against the Government or the overthrowing of the Government, or a revolution to overthrow the social order?

Tugwell and Wallace Linked in Accusation

Three Federal Employes Are Quoted As Saying President Under Control

Dr. Wirt—I use it in the sense of a revolution to overthrow the social order.

Mr. Arnold—I see this language in your statement: "We are on the inside and we can control the avenues of influence, and we can make the President believe that he is making the decision for himself." When was that statement made to you and by whom?

Dr. Wirt—By those three persons, Todd, Kneeland and Taylor acquiescing.

Mr. O'Connor—Was there another occasion when you talked with people whom you describe as "brain trusters," that you were proposing to proceed to when you stopped?

Dr. Wirt—No; my opinion is I have performed my service in calling attention and complying with your request by giving the names of the individuals and giving information of what was going on, that was sufficient.

Mr. O'Connor—I understand you have now named every person in the governmental employ who talked to you about this recovery or this plan; is that correct?

Dr. Wirt—From this standpoint: I have talked with a great many other Government employes.

Mr. O'Connor—From the standpoint of the statement read by Mr. Rand?

Dr. Wirt—I would like to mention in that connection that I visited Charles Eliot, secretary of the General Planning Board, and we discussed the Harmes project in the City of Chicago, which was a housing project, and Charles Eliot agreed that the agreed housing program leading to a decentralization of cities, would obstruct recovery.

Mr. O'Connor—I understand now you have given us the names of every person in the Government employ with whom you discussed matters contained in the Rand statement, and that you have given us substantially the conversations you had with all of those individuals. Is that correct?

Dr. Wirt—Substantially so. I have talked with many Government employes, and I would not want to say I had forgotten they said something to me, because that is entirely possible.

Mr. McGugan—Speaking about the change of the social order, as I understand the quotation you gave from Dr. Tugwell arising in the conversation at the dinner in Virginia, one of those quotations expressed as Mr. Tugwell's philosophy was that there could not be a change in the social order that would not include such a great change in Constitution and States. Is that correct?

Dr. Wirt—It was, sir.

Who's Who of Those Involved By Dr. Wirt in 'Red Revolt'

(Associated Press.)

Brief sketches of some of the persons who figured, directly or indirectly, in the House committee's inquiry into charges that "brain trust" members were planning revolution follow, along with what they had to say about the charges:

Dr. William A. Wirt—Superintendent of the public schools of Gary, Ind., for over 20 years. Widely known for application there of new educational theories which include experimentation to determine what the pupils are best fitted for and of training to supplement that bent.

"The fundamental trouble with the brain trusters," he said, "is that they start with a false assumption. They insist that the America of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln must first be destroyed and then on the ruins they will reconstruct an America after their own pattern."

Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell: Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and professor of economics at Columbia University. Credited with originating many of the ideas which are incorporated in President Roosevelt's "New Deal."

"Some of the quotations that Dr. Wirt attributed to me," he said, "were from a speech I gave before the American Economic Society at Philadelphia during Christmas week, 1931.

Lawrence Todd: Newspaperman, representative of the Tass Agency, official Soviet new-sgathering organization; for 14 years Washington correspondent for the Federated Press and was with that organization at the time of the Virginia dinner referred to by Dr. Wirt.

"I did not say that President Roosevelt was only the Kerensky of this revolution," was his reply to Dr. Wirt's charge.

William I. Westervelt: Former Army officer and high official of the Farm Administration during its early months. At his home in Chicago, he said he had no comment to make on Wirt's statements that Westervelt attributed subversive remarks to Tugwell and Frederic C. Howe of the Farm Adminstration and quoted Speaker Rainey as asserting that the Government would take over some industries in the near future.

Alice Barrows: Employe of the office of Education. The dinner which formed the basis for Dr. Wirt's charges was held at her home in Virginia.

"Yes," she commented regarding the educator's testimony, "it's all perfectly ridiculous, perfectly absurd. The dinner wasn't a success."

Hildegarde Kneeland, economist of the Bureau of Home Economics since 1924. Working temporarily at the University of North Carolina:

"I have never met Dr. Tugwell," she said. "I will have nothing further to say on the subject."

David C. Coyle, New York architect now attached to the Public Works Administration:

"At the September dinner," he said, "Dr. Wirt talked for four hours on gold devaluation and no one else had a chance to say anything."

Dr. Frederic C. Howe, head of the consumers' division of the Farm Administration and former Cleveland attorney.

"All bunk," he said of Dr. Wirt's testimony, which quoted Westervelt to the effect that Howe expressed the wish that Federal relief could be dropped so "we would make greater headway toward what we are trying to accomplish."

Miss Mary Taylor, economist under Dr. Howe. She said she would reserve comment until she was called before the House Committee to testify about the Virginia dinner.

Robert Bruere, chairman of the textile code advisory committee. Newspapermen were unable to reach him for comment.

'Dinner Party Was a Flop;' So Says Miss Alice Barrows

The dinner party that Miss Alice Barrows gave for Dr. William A. Wirt—which promises to become as famous as that other American Revolutionary affair, the Boston tea party—was a flop.

Miss Barrows says so.

She added that she furnished the cocktails, food, coffee and cigars for the gentlemen, but that she didn't have to worry about the conversation, because Dr. Wirt supplied all of that.

"He's a monologist," is the way she summed up the evening.

Miss Barrows is a Vassar graduate, has blonde hair and is divorced. She was Dr. Wirt's secretary from 1914 to 1917, when he was reorganizing the New York City public schools. She now is in the Bureau of Education of the Interior Department here.

"The party was certainly not a success," Miss Barrows said. "It was informal and began with a get-together with a few chosen guests present. There were cocktails before dinner, a full course meal and cigars and coffee later."

A poll of the other guests produced a majority opinion that if anybody said anything like "President Roosevelt is only the Kerensky of this revolution," it must have been Wirt, because nobody else got in that many words.

"It isn't very interesting, you know, to hear a man talk for four hours straight and not get a chance to reply," said one.

Miss Barrows spent yesterday afternoon dodging photographers, but finally gave up, tucked a little black bag under her arm and retreated to the office of her boss, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes.

Small Lenders Issue at Quiz On Usury Bill

Firms Assailed, Defended at Hearing Held on King Measure.

Small loan companies were assailed and defended at a hearing on the King usury bill conducted yesterday by Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, member of the Senate District Committee.

Amendment of the bill so that criminal prosecution for violation of of theu sury laws could be more effective was urged by William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel, who proposed that the measure should provide a specific maximum for charges on small loans.

The Roberts amendments fixed the legal rate of interest at 8 per cent per annum. Lenders would be authorized to make additional charges for investigation, commissions and other things, but these would be kept within a specified maximum.

Maximum Proposed.

On loans up to $100 the maximum of these charges would be $10; from $100 to $200, the maximum charge would be $8; and over $200 the charge would be $6. Charges exceeding these limits would be regarded as a violation of law punishable by imprisonment up to six months and a fine of $500, or both.

The bill provides that the charges, even when within the limits, must be reasonable and a challenge by a borrower would place the burden of proof on the lender.

William W. Bride, former corporation counsel, appearing for four small loan companies, urged that if the usury laws were to be amended, as proposed by the measure, the existing law governing small loan concerns also must be amended. He urged that the small loan limit be raised from $200 to $500.

"The restrictions on small loan concerns should be more rigid in the District of Columiba than in any in other place," Senator McCarran said in a discussion of the amount of interest the loan concerns should be permitted to charge. "We should have a law which would afford an opportunity for the low-salaried person to borrow but the rates should be kept low."

A rate of 2½ per cent per month was necessary to permit the loan concerns to meet the cost of doing business and losses, Mr. Bride said, and read the higher interest rates permitted under the laws of 30 States.

Mr. Bride joined Mr. Roberts in urging amendment of the xisting small loan law if the usury law was to be amended.

"If it is not usurious to make certain charges under one law it is not reasonable to make it usurious under the other law," he said. Mr. Bride represented the Lincoln Service, Inc.; Fidelity Plan, Inc.; Columbia Service, Inc., and Southeast Service, Inc.

G. W. Arbaugh, of the Fidelity Plan Corporation, told of the growth of his concern from an initial investment of $45,000 three years ago to 70 stockholders holding $235,000 in stock, an earned surplus of $16,000, with $212,000 loaned out. His corporation had earned 9 per cent but had paid dividends of only 7 per cent and paid no salaries, bonuses or other rewards to its officers, none of whom received anything but his dividends from his stock.

Explains Operation.

Mr. Arbaugh testified under oath and explained in detail the operations of his concern, adding that he believed such small loan concerns as his performed a public service and were essential. A borrower, whose application had been approved and whose joint makers were acceptable, was loaned $110, he said, as an example. The borrower was charged $7.50 for investigation and receiver $102.50 for the $110 note. Interest was 6 per cent and this was charged on the declining balance as monthly payments were made. The total cost to the borrower for charges and interest was $13, he said.

Replying to questions from Senator McCarran, Mr. Arbaugh said there had been 20 per cent curtailment of loans in the last two years; that 70 per cent of borrowers are government employes; that 90 per cent of borrowers are men with families; that only between 20 and 25 per cent of these seeking loans were granted them.

Frank A. Hampton, attorney, who said he represented victims of usurious lenders, denounced the small loan companies. He opposed any increase in the rate of interest.

"These loan companies come here with very poor grace," he said. "They admit they have not taken out the licenses required by the present law, they have not posted the bonds nor filed the reports required by law. They have charged interest in advance, which is expressly forbidden by law and then they admit usury."

Mr. Bride jumped to his feet and interrupted the indictment.

"There is no statement in this record which would justify that statement and my clients do not admit that is true," he said.

Small loans should be made to low-salaried persons by the Government through Presidential postoffices, Mr. Hampton said.

Morris Plan Named.

"Why aren't these low-salaried persons entitled to borrow from the Government as well as the great financial institutions and businesses?" he asked. "The Government would collect a much greater percentage of its loans from these people than it will from the great business concerns which are getting so much from the RFC and other agencies."

"I believe that question is beyond the realm of the bill before the committee," Senator McCarran said.

The names of the Morris Plan Bank and of the Pennsylvania Railroad were brought into the record in the course of recitation of difficulties into which small borrowers fell. The Pennsylvania Railroad gave its employes no hearing at all, but simply withheld their pay and forced them to pay what was claimed on demand of lenders when they were in default, Mr. Hampton said.

whom he quoted as having told a third person that after Congress adjourns the Government will take over the operation of industry.

Fears for Future.

Under blazing Kleig lights, with movie cameras whirring and bulbs of cameramen flashing interminably, the grim-mouthed, spectacled school superintendent, standing and speaking in a voice that could be heard to the farthest corner of the big House caucus room, packed with people, told the committee of his fears for the future of America and of the reason for those fears.

Beside him sat white-haired James A. Reed, former Democratic Senator from Missouri, who appeared as his counsel. The appearance of Reed was a surprise. He asked permission for Wirt to make a complete statement, in spite of the committee's ruling thathe would be permitted only to state the source of his information and the conversations with persons from whom he obtained it.

The three Democratic members of the committee of five insisted they would stick to the rule, but before he was through it was evident that Wirt had succeeded in saying most of what he intended to say.

An hour before the hearing started the room began to fill. Four motion-picture cameras were set up at one side of the witness table. Microphones over which the proceedings were broadcast were scattered about. By 9:45 a. m. the room was jammed. Not even standing room was available. Hundreds of persons crowded the corridors unable even to obtain a glimpse of the proceedings.

Dr. and Mrs. Wirt and Mr. and Mrs. Reed came quietly into the room. The crowd did not at first recognize Wirt, who sat with Mrs. Wirt and Mrs. Reed in the front row. Even the cameramen missed them for a few minutes. Reed, dressed in a natty brown spring suit and blue shirt, went to the platform and greeted the members of the committee and the crowd of Senators and Representatives who had gathered for the "show."

At 10:05 a. m. Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, rapped for order. Reed, who had taken a seat next to the witness chair, arose, shading his eyes from the blinding lights. He first asked that the lights be turned off. They were off for a minute and then came back on. This was repeated all through the hearing. The cameramen were insistent and the committee members did not object too seriously.

"I am asking the privilege of appearing here in behalf of Dr. Wirt and to say that he is here and prepared to answer any questions that may be put to him that are pertinent to the resolution," Reed said.

Bulwinkle replied that Wirt was present merely as a witness and not entitled to counsel. Representative Harold McGugin (Republican), Kansas, a member of the committee, moved that Reed be allowed to appear. The committee entered into a long wrangle with Bulwinkle, Representative William W. Arnold (Democrat), Illinois, and Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, on one side and McGugin and Representative Frederick R. Lehlback (Republican), New Jersey, on the other.

After much talking and two votes on which McGugin demanded a roll call and which both stood 3 to 2, it was decided that Reed could remain and advise with Wirt.

Then the committee went into another argument about procedure and by another vote of 3 to 2 decided that Wirt should be asked only the names of his informants and to relate his conversation with them.

Then Wirt's statement, read before the House Interstate Commerce Committee, March 23, by James A. Rand, jr., chairman of the Committee for the Nation, was put into the record. It was this statement, charging that revolution was being plotted, that brought about the investigation.

Says Witness Gagged.

Reed again protested to the committee. He said he had sat in many Congressional hearings himself and that he never saw a witness denied the right of having his counsel sit with him. McGugin repeated his statement that an attempt was being made to gag the witness. The crowd applauded loudly.

Wirt was called to the stand. He stood as the movie cameras ground and the bulbs flashed. He smiled. He looked this way and that at the orders of camera men. He picked up papers and laid them down. A Phi Beta Kappa key gleamed on his vest.

Wirt identified the statement read by Rand. He said he had given him permission to read it to the Interstate Commerce Committee and that he had known Rand about a year and a half.

"You will note that you say you asked certain persons what their plans were," said Bulwinkle.

"That is correct."

"Who were these persons?"

Wirt said they were persons who were present at a dinner party at the home of Miss Barrows in Virginia on September 1, 1933. He named the six who have now been called by the committee. He said he had three distinct parts to his testimony and that the description of the dinner constituted part one.

Wirt constantly referred to a printed pamphlet and to several typewritten sheets. Reed sat quietly behind him. At first Wirt was seated but he had not proceeded far until he jumped to his feet and stood during the remainder of the two-hour hearing. There were beads of perspiration on his forehead. The crowded room was hot.

Wants Charge Disproved.

"If these charges of mine are disproved I shall be one of the happiest men in this country," Wirt said at one point.

Wirt said he had discussed the New Deal for three hours after dinner. He said he had told the guests that recovery from April to August of last year was the greatest in the history of America.

He said Miss Kneeland had said to him: "Are you the man who committed the crime of trying to convert the leaders of the American Federation of Labor to the idea that we should go back to the viewpoint of 1926?"

"Miss Kneeland said," he continued, "that in the opinion of Dr. Tugwell the so-called recovery was an illusion, and a speculation and if he had the power he would have closed the commodity and stock exchanges."

Wirt said Miss Kneeland told him "our group" recognizes the leadership of Dr. Tugwell. He said he asked her the purposes of Tugwell and Secretary Wallace.

"I wanted to know what the main idea was," Wirt said.

He said Miss Kneeland had told him that Tugwell said that much that had been done during the last century must be undone and that the undoing would be almost like dispensing with civilization itself.

Wirt quoted her as saying Tugwell had stated that business would logically be required to disappear. He said Miss Kneeland declared Tugwell meant this literally. Wirt said she told him Tugwell felt that it was impossible to have a planned economy and have business operate industry.

Are Doing Something.

Todd asked Miss Kneeland, Wirt testified, "why don't we do something worth while?" She replied, according to Wirt, that "many of our people are in key positions in the Government and we should do something worth while."

Wirt said Miss Kneeland quoted Tugwell's theories at great length. He said these theories were the same that Tugwell had expressed in books he had written. Bulwinkle interrupted the witness repeatedly to ask him if he was quoting Miss Kneeland or quoting Tugwell directly. He insisted that he was quoting Miss Kneeland's exposition of Tugwell's theories.

"Doctor, who made the statement to you that 'we believe that we have Mr. Roosevelt in the middle of a swift stream?'" Bunwinkle asked.

"Laurence Todd, Miss Kneeland and Mary Taylor," Wirt replied. He said they told him that not only Roosevelt, "but all of us are in the middle of a swift stream."

Wirt attributed to Todd directly the "Kerensky" statement, but added that Miss Kneeland and Miss Taylor had agreed.

"Miss Taylor said nothing but nodded approval," he said.

He said Bruere, Coyle and Miss Barrows did not enter into the discussion.

"Are Todd, Miss Kneeland and Miss Taylor the 'brain trusters' you referred to?" asked Bulwinkle.

"I would consider them the satellites of the brain trusters," Wirt replied.

Sees Recovery Blocked.

He said he had been called in to discuss school facilities in connection with the homestead projects, which have been backed by Mrs. Roosevelt. He said that he felt that the projects were blocking recovery because they made city homes vacant, reduced rents and provided industry in competition with industry already established.

He said he believed the homesteads were Communistic in nature and that they were intended to show what could be done in this connection.

"I consider them a part of a concrete plan to overthrow the established social order," he said.

He said he considered Kohn and Wilson a part of the "brain trust."

The third episode concerned Gen. William I. Westervelt, of Chicago, former assistant administrator of the AAA. He said Westervelt had told him of conversations with various persons in the Government.

Wirt said Dr. Frederic C. Howe had gone to Westervelt's office to discuss relief work. He said Howe asked Westervelt: "Is there any way by which we can stop feeding them? We are going too slowly. If we could stop feeding them, we would make greater headway toward what we are trying to accomplish."

"Westervelt," Wirt continued, "said that Tugwell came into his office and told him that he could get a million dollars from the Government for a special kind of school to which they could get the recent college graduates who are not employed to come, and because of their attitude to society, due to the fact that they had not been able to get employment following their graduation, it would be easy to inoculate them with the ideas they wanted them to have concerning the new planned economy."

Rainey Asked of Relief.

Wirt said that "Gen. Westervelt also said that Henry T. Rainey, Speaker of the House, came to his office and inquired about the progress of a project in the western part of Illinois.

Parley Likely To Halt Strike In Auto Trade

Stove Works Strikers Fight Detroit Police; Damage Is Slight.

Detroit, April 10 (AP).—Hopes for peace in the giant automotive industry, now in the midst of its highest production program in nearly four years, grew tonight as tool and die makers and employers planned a conference on demands for a 20 per cent wage increase and a five-day week of 36 hours.

The conference is set for tomorrow, a little more than 24 hours before the deadline fixed for a walkout by the Mechanics Educational Society, the tool and die makers' organization. An offer was being formulated tonight by the Automotive Tool and Die Manufacturing Association.

Sixty-two job shops are members of the association. Union officials have claimed that 18,000 men would obey a strike call.

Violence broke out anew in the strike at the plant of the Detroit-Michigan Stove Works when strikers, workers and police engaged in a 20-minute battle in front of the gates at the noon lunch hour.

Police reported only minor damage had been done. Three men were arrested.

Cheered by the settlement of a Motor Products Corporation strike that resulted in the return today of 1,000 strikers, 4,600 other employes of that factory and 18,000 workers in the Hudson Motor Car Co. plant, Federal mediation agencies were concentrating on the tool and die-makers controversy.

Edward F. McGrady, assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who figured prominently in the settlement of Motor Products strike, was generally believed to be taking an active part in the search for a solution of the tool and die difficulties.

The Mechanics Educational Society also has a wage and hours controversy with the Fisher Body Corporation, the Murray Corporation of America, the Midland Steel Co., the Ternstedt Manufacturing Co. and the Detroit-Michigan Stove Co. plant, where a strike is in progress.

Zanesville Mayor Acquitted.

Zanesville, Ohio, April 10 (U.P.).—William P. Wetherald, Mayor of Zanesville, was acquitted by a jury of five men and seven women in probate court here of charges of malfeasance in office in connection with appointments of party adherents to positions protected by civil service regulations.

Russians Ban Disarmament Without Japan

Grim Note Grips Geneva Preliminary Parley on Arms Cut.

Geneva, April 10 (AP).—A grim undertone, including an indication that Russia will disarm only if Japan does, and emphasis on the possibilities of armament races or war, characterized speeches during a short meeting today of the disarmament conference steering committee.

Boris Stein, Soviet spokesman, declared Russia will sign a disarmament convention "but only on the condition it is universally accepted and secessarily by all neighbors of Russia."

He stressed the troubled world situation and, with the remark that "now again the specter of war rises before all humanity," demanded an arms slash instead of stabilization at the present level. His stand received general support.

"Fundamental Condition."

Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal and leading arms expert, emphasized that a substantial reduction in war materials remains for Great Britain a "fundamental condition to her agreement on any arms convention," thus giving the impression that England expects French arms reductions in return for British security guarantees.

Delegates noticed that Rene Massigli, of France, did not reveal his government's eventual attitude, but confined himself to the statement that the "rearmament of Germany" changed the entire problem and that this course was incompatible with the disarmament of other nations.

Members of the bureau separated with some renewal of hope, they said, but also with the uneasy feeling that something must be done if disaster is to be averted.

Arthur Henderson, British chairman of the world disarmament conference, was empowered to postpone for a reasonable period the calling of the full conference, scheduled tentatively for May 23. The steering committee meeting was adjourned to April 30.

Pessimists Assailed.

Mr. Henderson called disarmament a world problem to be settled by a universal treaty and assailed those who believe the military situation hopeless.

"A new race for armaments has begun, although it has not yet gathered much momentum," he said.

Capt. Eden reported on his talks in various continental capitals on the subject and said he found a sincere and anxous desire in Paris, Berlin, and Rome to reach an agreement.

He warned that difficulties are still great, notably between France and Germany over the computation of effectives, how to count the French overseas troops, the trained reserves, German semimilitary organizations, and the date and extent to which Germany's new army is to be equipped with defensive weapons now denied her under the Versailles treaty.

Olson Denies Act Influenced

Governor Says Charges on Party Made by 'Conspirators.'

St. Paul, April 10 (AP).—Gov. Floyd B. Olson today described as "a conspiracy among conservatives" to overthrow the recovery program implications that the "brain trust" had influence adoption of the Farmer-Labor party State program.

The Governor commented on a request in Washington yesterday by Senator Thomas D. Schall that North Carolina, chairman of the Wirt Investigating Committee, call Olson "to ascertain what members of the brain trust influenced him to insert in the Farmer-Labor party platform a clause favoring confiscation of property."

Schall further asserted the Governor was the "personal representative of the President in Minnesota."

Gov. Olson said today he had never discussed the platform with "any Federal officer" and requested Schall to make public the names of those who directed him to write his letter. The platform included a plank calling for public ownership of all pubic utilities, factories and transportation facilities.

Olson asserted Schall's letter was part of a plot on the part of reactionaries to destroy the influence of those active in the Roosevelt recovery program. The Governor was head of CWA activities in Minnesota and former State NRA head.

Cannon "Paid Himself Back," Lawyer States

Bishop Went Into Debt to Start Campaign, He Declares.

back" out of Jameson's various contributions, for sums advanced to launch the campaign against Smith. The bishop, he declared, put up $45,000 in all—money he had borrowed, raised on mortgages, received as salary from his church—to start the ball rolling.

McNeill told also of the need of Cannon's keeping confidential accounts, for many of his contributors were "out of line" with the Democratic party, and didn't want the fact known.

As for Jameson, the slight, spectacled, grim, little man with a squeaky voice and prim manner, who took the stand later to tell of his contributions, there was no need for secrecy in his case, it developed.

"Use It As You Will."

According to McNeill, Jameson handed Cannon $65,300—in installments and after a few importunities—and said:

"Use it as you will. Use part of it for the 'headquarters committee' and part for the State committee in Virginia.

"Break the South for Hoover, that great candidate whom I favor. That's what I'm after."

Called as a witness by the Government, Jameson said this version of his part in the campaign was substantially correct.

"I was only the contributor," he explained, mildly.

McNeill promised to call members of the Virginia State anti-Smith committee to testify they spent the unreported money. He furnished reporters with a list of 14 defense witnesses, including Dr. S. C. Hatcher, president of Randolph Macon College; ministers, attorneys and prominent Virginia business men, as well as two character witnesses for Miss Burroughs.

The latter's attorney, M. J. Fulton, a Virginian who introduced himself to the jury as a political opponent of Bishop Cannon, alleged in an opening statement on her behalf that she had no knowledge of the Jameson contributions, other than what the bishop told her.

Claim Concurred In.

Cannon's attorney also concurred in this, indicating the defense against the conspiracy charge will be that Miss Burroughs did not know the New Yorker had contributed more than the $17,300 she eventually reported to the Clerk of the House.

Miss Burroughs, according to her counsel, was just a "saintly little woman" from Virginia, who had devoted her life to good causes, and was working for the "Headquarters Committee, Anti-Smith Democrats" after her regular shift for the Antisaloon League, and for "the insignificant sum of 75 cents an hour."

Four witnesses preceded Jameson on the stand. They were Dr. Arthur Barton, of Wilmington, N. C., who helped Cannon organize the campaign against Al Smith in the South; Mrs. Ruby D. Brooke, who was employed by the bishop's "Headquarters Committee;" South Trimble, clerk of the House of Representatives, who received what reports Miss Burroughs made, and Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission and former chairman of the North Carolina Anti-Smith Democrats. The last named told of a phone call during the heat of the fight to break Democracy's solid ranks in the South, in which Bishop Cannon inquired how things were going.

Were Short of Money.

"I told him things were going all right, but that were short of money," McNinch testified. "He said that perhaps he could help."

Cross-examination brought out that Cannon sent over $5,000 and that as recently as two years ago the bishop still was trying to get it back, explaining it was only an advance.

Jameson, whose answers were all but inaudible, told of how his interest was aroused in the anti-Smith Democrats of the South by a visit paid him by C. Bascom Slemp, who introduced Bishop Cannon early in the fall of 1928.

The witness, who identified himself as president of the Globe & Rutgers Insurance Co., said he "finally agreed" to support the movement to the extent of $50,000, to be paid in installments of $10,000 each.

"At Bishop Cannon's solicitation," Jameson testified, "I gave $8,000 more during the campaign."

After it was over, he said, he added another $7,300 to make up a reported deficit.

The checks themselves were brought out and passed from hand to hand along the opposing counsel tables. The bishop fingered them at length. Miss Burroughs did not even glance at them.

Income Tax Rise Is Beaten; Couzens Seeks Another Vote

sum. He wanted to know "what kind of statesmanship is that?" He said it was "cowardly" for Congress to continue appropriating funds and not to provide revenue to supply this money.

The amendment also was supported by Senators Robert M. La Follette (Republican) Wisconsin, and William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, who argued that the proposed levy would be a slight burden on taxpayers in a time like the present. Borah said he recognized it added to the load which the small taxpayer must carry. While preferring to increase the higher surtax rates, he said this objective seemed impossible and therefore the Couzens proposal should be approved.

The Couzens amendment was supported by 30 Democrats, 13 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite. It was opposed by 25 Democrats and 21 Republicans. The latter included Senator Couzens, who had switched his vote in order to be free to move reconsideration.

Roll Call on Proposal.

The roll call on the amendment was as follows:

For the amendment—44.

Republicans: Borah, Capper, Frazier, Johnson, La Follette, McNary, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Robinson (Ind.), Schall, Vandenburg, White.

Farmer-Labor: Shipstead.

Democrats: Adams, Bachman, Bailey, Bankhead, Barkley, Byrd, Byrnes, Clark, Coolidge, Copeland, George, Glass, Harrison, Lewis, Lonergan, McAdoo, McCarran, McKellar, Robinson (Ark.), Smith, Thompson, Tydings, Van Nuys, Wagner, Walsh.

Hope Rests in Absentees.

Of the six senators absent, it was announced Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, would have voted for the amendment and Senator Dieterich (Republican), Illinois, against it. The attitudes of Senators Pittman (Democrat), Nevada; Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma; Trammell (Democrat), Florida, and Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, also absent, were not revealed.

Senator Couzens hopes that in this group of absentees there will be sufficient votes for his amendment to result in adoption. He also is counting on bringing over to his side one or two of those who voted "no" on yesterday's roll call.

Before acting on the Couzens amendment the Senate, after a brief debate, rejected on a standing vote of 17 to 17 the King proposal for increased surtax rates in the higher brackets. This amendment would have lowered the surtax rates on net incomes under $30,000, but after that point would sharply increase surtax rates until they reached a maximum of 65 per cent on incomes in excess of $500,000.

Fight Over Processing Tax.

The Senate spent several hours fighting over the provision of the bill which would levy a processing tax of 3 cents a hundred pounds on cocoanut, sesame and similar vegetable and marine oils. The attack was led by Chairman Tydings, of the Insular Affairs Committee, who contended adoption of such a proposal would mean a repudiation of the contract entered into by Congress in the Philippine independence bill. He argued the tax would react chiefly on cocoanut oil shipments from the Pacific islands.

Senator Harrison, pointing out President Roosevelt was opposed to this tax, proposed an amendment exempting from the tax 520,000,000 pounds annually of cocoanut oil of Philippine origin or the product of copra of Philippine origin. Advocates of the tax, which is supported by the dairy industry, asserted such an amendment would make ineffective the proposed tax.

Marginal Plan In Stock Rule Bill Is Doomed

Senate Group Is Expected to Eliminate 60 Per Cent Proposal.

yesterday was approval of the revised Section 10, which deals with limitations on the functions of dealers, brokers and specialists. Under the provision approved the securities exchange commission was given power to formulate regulations to govern these classes of securities tradesmen.

Seek Roosevelt Aid.

Meanwhile the group of liberals and brain trusters who drafted the original versions of the Rayburn-Fletcher bill and other advocates of drastic regulatory legislation, devised ways of restoring to the bill some of the provisions struck out by the Senate committee.

This group has decided to ask President Roosevelt on his return to the White House late this week to appeal to Congress or to the country for support for a strict bill. Whether the President will throw himself into the fight to the extent this group wishes is not known.

Agitation for a strong bill also will be carried to the country by some of the members of this group. Ferdinand Pecora, counsel to the Senate group and one of the bill's drafters, will participate Sunday in a one-hour radio broadcast with Raymond Moley, former chief of the brain trust, and Father Charles E. Coughlin, the Detroit priest and inflation advocate.

Plan Other Appeals.

They will urge support for a bill "with teeth in it." It is expected that other appeals to the country to demand strict regulation of the stock markets will be made within the next two or three weeks.

The action of the Senate committee is subject to approval by the Senate as a whole and it has been demonstrated frequently in the last year that the committee is far more conservative than the Senate membership. Thus it is possible that some of the committee amendments may be rejected by the Senate and the bill restored to its original provisions.

House leaders also are confident that they can force through that body a bill more drastic than that which is now expected to come from the Senate committee. But in these developments, controversy over the measure may become so bitter and so prolonged as to endanger the passage of any stock market bill unless Congress stays here until June or later.

The House Interstate Commerce sub-committee revising the Fletcher-Rayburn bill is at work behind closed doors. It is understood no action was taken yesterday but that a majority of the committee appeared to favor a more flexible marginal requirement than the 60 per cent provision in the measure. The exact nature of the substitute was not revealed, but it was asserted the modification did not go as far as that proposed by Senator Glass.

This committee also appeared ready to simplify the provisions requiring corporations to file annual reports regarding earnings, expenditures and other fiscal matters.

Army Flying Quiz Headed by Baker

The nonmilitary members are Baker, chairman; Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. George William Lewis, director of aeronautical research, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flier; Maj. James H. Doolittle, flier and aeronautical engineer; Edgar S. Gorrell, president of Stutz Motor Car Co.

Military Members.

The military members are Maj. Gen. Hugh S. Drum, deputy chief of staff, executive vice chairman of the committee; Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, commandant of the Army War College; Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Army Air Corps; Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, assistant chief of staff, War Plans Division; Brig. Gen. John W. Gulick, and Maj. Albert E. Brown, War Department General Staff, as recorder.

Baker is expected to bring to the group invaluable experience from his work as secretary.

Dr. Compton has long been associated with the interests of aviation. He has been chairman and member of several committees dealing with communications and transit since 1931.

Dr. Lewis is an aeronautical engineer and has served with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics since 1919, principally as aeronautical research engineer.

Lew Cody Is Witness In Actress Balm Suit

Los Angeles, April 10 (AP).—A prominent actor and a director and a script girl came to the defense of Director Harry Joe Brown today in the trial of Actress Marjorie Whiteis' $100,000 breach of promise suit against him.

The suave screen villain, Lew Cody, testified that Brown and Miss Whiteis never had talked to him about buying his Malibu Beach home. Miss Whiteis charges Brown jilted her and married Sally Eilers instead.

Director Sid Rogell denied Miss Whiteis' story that he took her to Lake Arrowhead on Labor Day, 1933, at Brown's request.

allel," he declared, "in the decline of earlier civilizations wherein those who possessed wealth and inherited power rejected impatiently the counsels of mere thinkers who sought by constructive plans of public service to improve the general welfare."

Referring caustically to the "black shirts, brown shirts and red shirts" of Europe, he threw a taunt at the Committee for the Nation, which first revealed Wirt's charges, with the statement: "There is another class of business men, of bankers and politicians who have begun to conspire against a mythical 'brain trust'—who seem to be organizing what might be called a 'League of Stuffed Shirts.'"

Did Not Know Future.

"They will probably enroll in their ranks," he predicted, "most of the discredited economists and financial writers and oracles of editorial wisdom who helped to inflate the bubble prosperity that burst in 1929. These are the men who either did not know what they were doing when they mortgaged our future to create the illusion of wealth, or were sufficiently insane even then not to worry about the deluge of misery which they were preparing for us."

Richberg declared that the depression years have been "grave mental strain" for such men, who "have heard men who had fawned upon them jeer at their stupidities. They have seen their former associates stripped of fortune and honors, some giving up their lives in despair, some retiring to a well-earned obscurity, some becoming fugitives from justice."

"Thus we observe in many walks of life today men afflicted with what we may call a post-depression psychosis. They have a delusion that they are being persecuted by men who are using brains in public service. They have a nervous dread that they may find their control over other people's money, even perhaps over their own money, taken away from them through the conspiring of men whom they do not understand and whom they therefor dislike and fear."

As a closing blast Richberg said: "Of course, a thousand details of NRA operation can be criticised and the merits of specific measures can be fairly debated, but when any man questions the primary objects and essential methods of NRA he should be compelled to state his alternative or to confess the incompetence of his advice. And when any man ventures to scoff at the use of brains in Government, he should be asked to explain by what part of the anatomy he believes human affairs should be conducted."

2d "Relief" Legislature May Quit Without Result

Dover, Del., April 10 (AP).—Doubt was expressed today that a relief program, for which two special legislative sessions have been called, could be passed before adjournment of the present session Friday.

At the same time, State Senator G. C. Maull took responsibility for introduction yesterday of the concurrent resolution setting sine die adjournment for Friday.

Cahill to Quiet Post.

Cigars... like Wines

now selected by their "Vintage"

Look for the Grade A "Vintage" Band on White Owls—your guarantee of fine filler tobaccos

FINE WINES are known by their "Vintage" years. For instance, Château Haut-Brion '28 is a truly great wine. The '27 wine, from the same vineyards, was inferior . . . was not even bottled at the Château.

And tobacco crops vary, too. From year to year they change in quality. In Lancaster County, Pa., where much of America's fine filler tobaccos are grown, 1931 produced a "Vintage" crop. In 1930, there was a "Vintage" crop in the Ohio filler fields. We purchased only Grade A tobaccos from each of these "Vintage" yields.

Look for the Grade A "Vintage" band

The White Owl you now buy in Washington carries a Grade A "Vintage" band—your guarantee of finest filler tobaccos. Smoke the pick of the best American filler tobacco crops.

How White Owl Smokers are Protected

THE General Cigar Co., through a 10-year-old Crop Control System, knows the condition of tobacco-growing districts in Pennsylvania and Ohio—the two states which produce nearly all United States cigar filler tobaccos. The amount of rainfall . . . of sunshine . . . the condition of the soil—are all recorded. From these records, it is possible to forecast every "Vintage" crop . . . and only tobaccos from such crops are purchased for White Owls.

But "Vintage" crops alone are not enough. Under the control system—all filler tobaccos are classified into seven grades. Only the top three grades pass White Owl's strict requirements. That's why we can truthfully say—White Owls are made only from Grade A "Vintage" filler tobaccos.

At the present moment, there is enough Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco aging in our warehouses to make over 1 billion White Owls—more than a three-year supply. That is why White Owl never has to use non-vintage filler tobaccos.

Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco is aged from 2 to 4 years—an average of 3 years.

Today we are using in the filler of White Owls two famous "Vintage" Crops . . . the 1931 Pennsylvania and the 1930 Ohio. Look for the Grade A "Vintage" Band.

Democrats Hit Giving of Jobs To Republicans

Garber's Revenue Position Cited as Example in Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Making pointed reference to Jacob Garber, former Representative from the Seventh Virginia District who now holds a good position under the State collector of internal revenue, Charlottesville Democrats last night protested retention of Republicans in appointive offices under a Democratic regime.

Resolutions protesting this situation were adopted at a city convention, at which Mayor F. W. Twyman and Dr. W. D. Haden were nominated as party candidates for the two places on the local council to be filled at the general election in June. Both are up for reelection.

The resolutions were offered by Randolph Peery, of the city Democratic committee, who declared he had no "personal objection" to Mr. Garber, who is now an assistant to Collector of Internal Revenue N. B. Early. "I think it was correct," he said, "that he should have been given the office after he was defeated by Judge Fishburne for Congress in 1931, but I do not now see any reason for keeping him in office."

The twenty-four delegates present from the four wards of the city voted approval of resolutions which complained that "Democratic appointees to Federal offices in this State, whose appointment was advocated, supported and endorsed by the voters of this city and whose appointment is in no small way due to the influence exercised by the local Democratic party, have retained persons well known as Republicans in representative subordinate positions under them which have wide public contracts and consequently afford an opportunity for exercising political influence."

The delegates held this condition "contrary to the best interests of the Democratic party, both locally and in the State of Virginia" and asked it "be remedied without delay."

Copies of the resolutions were ordered sent to Senators Carter Glass and Harry Byrd and Representative Howard W. Smith, who represents this district in the House.

Apple Blossom March Planned

3,000 Frederick Students to Parade in Fete at Winchester.

Winchester, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Three thousand Frederick County school children, attired in gala holiday costumes, will march in the parade the first morning of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival here, it has been announced by J. Pinckney Arthur, director general.

Prizes are to be awarded the school children making the best showing. Miss Anne Preston Starling and Leslie D. Kline, rural supervisors and superintendent of schools, are to complete arrangements for the pupils' participation.

It was announced today by fete officials that Miss Elizabeth Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Rice, of Winchester, and Miss Virginia Cover Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Russell, also of this city, will be maids of honor to Queen Shenandoah XI, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Llangollen, Loudoun County.

D. C., Virginia Line Group Considered

Peery Studies List to End Boundary Dispute.

Richmond, April 10 (AP) — Gov. Peery studied possible appointments to a commission of Federal and State appointees, whose task it will be to settle the 200-year-old boundary dispute between Virginia and the District of Columbia.

The commission will decide the boundary line just as the recent Maryland - Virginia commission fixed the line between these two States.

Congress and the Virginia General Assembly created the commission, which is to include one Virginian, one member appointed by the President, and a third member to be chosen by these two.

Southern Heroes Buried 71 Years After Gettysburg

The bones of these soldiers were uncovered recently by CWA workers on Gettysburg battlefield.

H. D. Campbell, Noted Virginia Educator, Dies

Served W. & L. 47 Years, 26 as Dean; Born on the Campus.

Lexington, Va., April 10 (AP).—Dr. Harry Donald Campbell, venerable educator, died today at Washington and Lee University, where he has served on the faculty as dean of the university and in the chair of geology.

He was 72 years old, and had spent all of his life on the campus of the university, with the exception of the years spent obtaining his education in the United States and abroad. His death was attributed to heart disease.

Dr. Campbell was a member of the Washington and Lee faculty 47 years. He was dean of the university 26 years, having been relieved of those duties two years ago. He retained the chair of geology, however. At the time he was relieved of duties as dean he was named official historian of the university and had been working on a detailed history of the institution, since that time. He had dealt especially with the period when Gen. Robert E. Lee was its president, then known as Washington College.

For six months in 1912 Dr. Campbell was acting president of Washington and Lee. He held degrees from a number of universities, both in America and Europe. In 1930 he was president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. He was a member of the Geological Society of America and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In addition, he held membership in Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Tau Omega Fraternities.

Dr. Campbell was born on the university campus, then Washington College, July 29, 1862.

D. A. R. Plans Special Program

Maryland Chapters to Present Book at Congress Honoring Memory of Former Regent; Replica of Sixteenth Century Art in Binding.

Leonardtown, Md., April 10 (Spl.) The Maryland Chapters of the D. A. R. will present a special program before the society's National Congress in Washington next week.

In honor of the Maryland Tercentenary, the State chapter will contribute a Book of Remembrance, to be placed in the Maryland room at D. A. R. headquarters.

This book is considered a magnificent example of ancient bookmaking craftmanship. It is bound in calf, with silver and gold clasps. The metals were contributed by members of the chapter to be traced with a design from a rare book in the Walter's collection.

Fly pages are done in blue silk, diagonally crossed by the badge of the State regent. The oil painting of the Maryland coat of arms on the cover and the illuminations were done by Helen Bartlett Ashbury. A. Ruperti bound the book.

In order to reproduce authentically the form and lettering of books of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, Miss Adelphine M. Hall spent a year examining old volumes in the Congressional and Folger Libraries at Washington.

The Maryland Chapter has dedicated the book to the memory of Mrs. John G. Lilburn, late regent of the State chapter and of the Maj. William Thomas Chapter of St. Marys County. Mrs. Maria Briscoe Croker, St. Marys County author, wrote the dedication.

Other activities of the State chapter include placing of a brass railing in Continental Hall in honor of Mrs. Henry Zoller, retiring State regent; and the hanging of two memorial portraits in the tercentenary memorial State house being constructed at St. Marys City.

Roanoke Aids To Visit Parley

Several to Attend Social Science Meeting in Charlottesville.

Roanoke, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Roanoke City and County will send several representatives to Charlottesville for the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Virginia Conference of Social Work and the eighth annual session of the Virginia Social Science Association, which meets Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Miss May Hankins, director of the Roanoke Social Service Bureau, and several workers; Superintendent T. A. Graves, of the Lutheran Orphanage of the South, Salem; Miss Frances Southall, Roanoke County welfare superintendent and members of her board, will attend.

Miss Gene Smith, former Roanoke County superintendent of welfare work, is a member of the executive board of the social work organization, and Miss Georgiana Sinclair, former executive secretary of the Family Welfare Society of Roanoke, is a vice president.

The social work conference is headed by R. F. Hough, superintendent of the Baptist Orphanage at Salem, and the Social Science Association has Dr. R. B. Pinchbeck, dean of the University of Richmond, as president.

D.A.R. Chapter Picks Delegates

Charles Town Members Will Attend Congress Here Next Week.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Members of the Bee Line Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, who will accompany Regent Mrs. F. L. Bushong, chapter delegate to the D. A. R. Congress in Washington next week, were announced last night.

Mrs. Bushong, Mrs. Theodore Brown and Mrs. Wright Denny will remain in Washington throughout the week's program. Mrs. Jessie Engle, Mrs. Van Wilson and Miss Susan Gregg Gibson will atttend the congress on Tuesday, designated West Virginia Day.

The chapter will be represented at the tree-planting exercises by Mrs. Augustine J. Todd, now residing in Washington.

To raise funds for the State D. A. R. conference here next fall, the chapter voted to sponsor a benefit theater party, April 23 and 24.

A nominating committee for the chapter elections in May comprises Miss Edith Gardner, Mrs. Jessie Engle and Miss Ella Starry.

Baltimore, Md., April 10 (Spl.). More than 550 students attending colleges and other institutions of learning in Maryland are receiving funds from the Federal Government, it was reported here today.

The 550 Marylanders are a portion of the 70,000 students throughout the Nation who are being helped by the Government at a cost of $1,017,612 a month, through the student aid plan which started operations in Maryland early in February.

Fifteen Maryland colleges are furnishing education to the students under the Federal plan. With their quotas of students, they are:

Johns Hopkins University, 165; University of Maryland, 307; Goucher, 65; Frostburg Normal School, 11; Maryland College for Women, 12; Bowie Normal School, 9; Salisbury Normal School, 11; Towson Normal School, 46; Morgan College, 38; St. John's College, 23; Washington College, 34; Western Maryland College, 48; Western Theological Seminary, 3, and University of Baltimore, 22. Not all have filled their quotas, however.

Each student receives an average of $15 per month. Most of the students are assigned to tasks whereby they earn their money.

564 Miles of Road Will Be Repaired

Bids in for Highway Work in Southern Maryland.

Baltimore, April 10 (Spl.).—Three hundred and ten miles of State highways in southern Maryland will receive surface treatment during the spring and summer, the State roads commission announced today. Bids for the work were received today at the offices of the commission here.

Throughout the State, 564 miles of highway will be treated on a basis of the bids now in hand. Eighty-five miles of road on the Eastern Shore will be treated in addition to the southern Maryland roads. The whole will require 1,462,806 gallons of material.

No Exemptions On Sales Tax In W. Virginia

Out-of-State Purchasers Must Pay, Ruling of Commissioner.

Charleston, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.). Another plan to get around the State consumers' sales tax was eliminated today by the State tax commissioners' office. It promulgated a ruling that nonresidents who purchase tangible property of any kind in West Virginia must pay the 2 per cent sales tax.

The ruling followed reports that merchants had been permitting nonresidents to make purchases without paying the tax when they signed a statement showing that they lived in other States.

The department also ruled today that the tax must be applied to the total cost of a game of pool, despite the fact that the usual charge per player in the game is only 5 cents, which sale sum is exempt under the law.

State officials have estimated that it will produce $6,500,000 over its 15-month period. Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, said there was no reason to alter the original estimates. He said total sales in West Virginia in 1929 were $381,000,000, which would have produced between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 at 2 per cent. He added that business in the State is now somewhat under the 1929 mark.

Virginia Buys First Wine in 17 Years

Initial Shipment Is Sold at Hot Springs.

Richmond, April 10 (AP).—Wine was offered legally for sale in Virginia today for the first time in 17 years.

The first shipment—a special order delivered direct from New York to Hot Springs—arrived yesterday and was available to the public there today. It was sold by the State through the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to the dealer under the 50-case rule, authorizing large orders pending completion of a general sales plan.

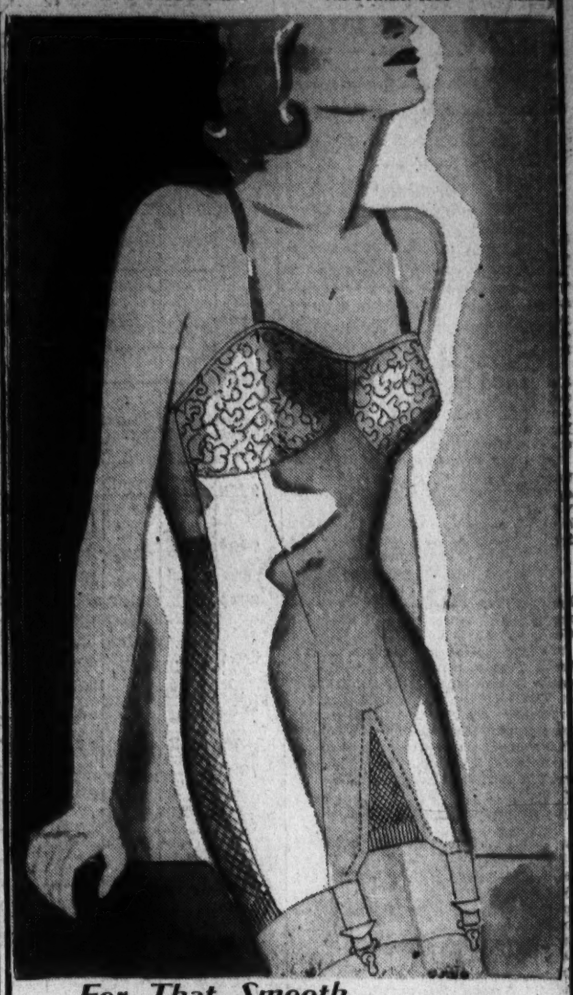

The board announced it had fixed a mark-up of 40 per cent under special shipments, such as that to Hot Springs. Meanwhile the board worked on final details of a permanent merchandizing plan designed to assure licensees, throughout the State, delivery in the shortest possible time.

Rev. T. W. Poling Buried.

Roper Urges Law to Regulate Transmissions

Testifies as Committee Opens Hearings on House Bill.

(United Press.)

Secretary of Commerce Roper appeared before the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday to urge enactment of legislation to regulate the communications system.

Roper told the committee, which opened hearings on the Rayburn bill, that the interdepartmental committee which was formed last summer at the request of the President, was unanimously in favor of Federal control over radio, telegraph and telephone companies.

The committee, Roper said, did not make any specific recommendations, but merely made a comprehensive study of the communications field.

"On competion of this study, the interdepartmental committee," Mr. Roper said, "was unanimous in its conclusion that the communications industry needed Federal control legislation.

"The committee did not submit a bill, feeling that with the help of the information gathered the House and Senate committees would be able to draft their own legislation."

The Rayburn bill creates a seven-member commission to supervise the communications industry. Members of the commission would be appointed by the President and would receive a salary of $10,000.

Congress' 5-Year Plan for D. C. School Improvement Forgotten

This chart shows the tremendous increase in enrollment in Washington's senior high schools since 1920. The dotted line indicates the number of pupils in excess of school capacity. In 1929 and 1930 high-school facilities were sufficient to take care of the enrollment, but in three years the enrollment has grown to where there are nearly 2,400 more pupils than the schools were built to accommodate.

Program Fixed in 1925 Called for System Second to None.

This is the fourth of a series of eight articles on Washington schools.

As in the case of Washington's libraries and other Washington activities, Congress long has been filled with good intentions regarding the schools. It just has not got around to carrying them out and, with economy programs now uppermost, it is getting further and further away from what it intended to do.

These intentions were clearly set out in a five-year plan for the schools enacted in 1925. In the act itself the purpose of Congress was declared to be:

"To provide a sufficient number of school buildings to make it possible—

"To abandon all portables." (Eight years later Washington still has 16 portable school buildings.)

"To eliminate use of rented buildings." (This has been accomplished.)

"To abandon the use of undesirable rooms." (Basements, janitors' rooms, rooms heated with stoves, corridors, still are in use as classrooms.)

56 Classrooms Needed.

"To reduce elementary school classes to a standard of not more than 40 pupils to a class." (Eight years later Washington needs 56 additional classrooms to accomplish this expressed purpose.)

"To provide a 5-hour day of instruction for elementary school pupils, thereby eliminating part-time classes." (Washington still has part-time classes.)

"To abandon all school buildings recommended for immediate abandonment in 1908." (Some of these buildings, including some between 60 and 70 years old, still are in use.)

"To abandon other school buildings which have become unfit for further use since 1908." (There are such buildings in use.)

"To provide a full day of instruction for high school pupils, thereby eliminating the double shift program in the high schools." (The high schools still have double shift programs.)

"To provide for the annual increase in enrollment of pupils during the 5-year period." (The schools are more overcrowded than ever.)

Construction Program.

"And, in general, to provide in the District of Columbia a program of school-house construction which shall exemplify the best in school-house planning, school-house construction, and educational accommodations." (Ask any school official.)

Thus it can be seen that only one of all the things Congress set out to do has been accomplished. It has eliminated the use of rented property for school purposes. In 1925, a total of 26 classes were occupying rented quarters. These were completely eliminated by 1931.

At the time Congress adopted this program it was estimated that it would require a total of $20,000,000, or $4,000,000 a year to carry out its provisions. It was designed to take care not only of the excess number of students at that time but of the estimated growth of the schools.

Congress started out with its good intentions firmly in mind. In the appropriations act of 1926, supplemented by the second deficiency act of 1925, approximately $4,000,000 was appropriated for the purpose of carrying out the 5-year school program. That was the only time that anything approximating this sum was appropriated. Even during most prosperous times, Congress showed no very strong recollection of the fact that it had outlined a school program which was intended to make Washington school facilities a model for the Nation. Eight years, rather than 5 years, after the program was adopted it does not even approach acomplishment.

Appropriations Cut.

In the last report of the Board of Education, that for the year ending June 30, 1933, are these words:

"Chief among the problems presented to the board during the year was that of confining expenditures within the appropriation for the ensuing year. In this connection attention is called to the fact that the appropriation for the year 1931 was $13,892,390; for 1932, $13,516,560; for 1933, $12,162,730, and for 1934, $8,540,713.

"When it is remembered that there are several thousand more pupils enrolled for the coming school year than there were enrolled last year and that the appropriation was more than $3,000,000 less than last year, the difficulty of the problem will be apparent. Reduction in expenditures has been effected in various ways: Vacancies by resignations or retirements were sometimes not filled; certain positions have been abolished; classroom instruction has been added to the duties of certain officers and directors; some teachers have resigned that their husbands' positions in the classified service of the United States might not be jeopardized under the multiple employment provisions of the recent act of Congress.

"It is further to be observed that during the year covered by the report the high schools were filled to overflowing. The senior high schools have 15,907 pupils; the junior high schools, 15,702; the night schools, 14,026 adult students; and the vacation schools, 9,582 children. The total enrollment of pupils was 92,355."

Post-Graduate Problem.

Congress estimated that a total of $4,000,000 a year would be needed to carry out the program. The appropriation for buildings in 1932 was $2,720,000. For the current year it was $1,473,500. The appropriation for land was reduced from $490,000 in 1932 to $95,000 in 1933.

Another very serious problem has arisen as a result of increased enrollments and reduced appropriations. That is the problem of the post-graduate students in the high schools. Many pupils who would otherwise go to college are returning to high schools after graduation because they feel that they can not afford to attend college.

"The school authorities believe that these pupils should be encouraged to continue their education," the report says. "In view, however, of substantially reduced appropriations for teachers and officers and for school buildings, the school authorities may find it impossible in the near future to enroll high-school graduates for further instruction in our high schools."

The next article will discuss the vocational school problem.

Insull Nurses Infected Thum

Operation Performed in Instanbul as Rule Home Debated.

Istanbul, April 10 (AP).—With American authorities still undecided as to the route he will take back to the United States, Samuel Insull had a minor operation performed on his left thumb today.

An abscess was removed by the regular prison physician in the jail infirmary, where Insull has been held by the Turkish government for extradition to Chicago.

As the 74-year-old man walked around the jail gardens, his thumb swathed in a baindage, American Ambassador Robert P. Skinner and his aids considered the possibility of sending Insull back on the next available ship, but there still was no decision on the route.

It was indicated that a decision might be made within 24 hours.

Burton Y. Berry, 32, Third Secretary of the Embassy, has been designated to return Insull on charges of embezzlement and larceny growing out of the collapse of his former utilities empire.

Insull was refused permission to stroll around the city under guard today and had to stay around the jail.

Inflation Bill For Silver Up To Roosevelt

Executive's Intervention Only May Be Able to Avert Passage.

the fall elections, and to force Mr. Roosevelt's hand. Thus some Republicans are backing the silver bill on the theory that it will be an embarrassment to the White House and alienate the Western groups which are enthusiastic for silver.

Conceivably, the issue might give rise to a third-party movement resurrecting the once-laid ghost of Bryanism.

Silent on Effects.

Proponents of the composite bill do not attempt to say how much silver the Treasury would acquire and exactly what the economic effects of the measure would be. The bill is widely interpreted as a form of dumping for agricultural surpluses, unless quotas and tariffs already existing or provoked by the dumping shut out American farm products from foreign markets.

Also, the bill is looked upon as an invitation for the rest of the world to unload the floating supply of silver upon the United States.

That the framers of the measure recognize its highly inflationary potentialities is evident from the committee report, written by Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, a leader of the inflationist bloc. The main sections of the report are printed in adjoining columns.

Thus, the report contemplates a halt in the silver operations when the 1926 price level is reached by the inflation route or when the world price of silver skyrockets up to the statutory rate of $1.29 an ounce.

Cleveland Recalled.

The bill confronts Mr. Roosevelt with much the same decision that Grover Cleveland resolved in favor of gold and against the silver movement of his day.

Senator Thomas predicted yesterday that if the bill becomes law "things will begin to hum." With a grim smile he remarked that the bill would "get results."

He insists, as does his report, that the Government would not lose a penny. It would not because it would issue paper currency against the silver. What that would do in depreciating all the currency of the Nation is left to inference, though the committee report envisages the quick inflationary rise in prices to 1926 levels.

One clause of the combined bill puts the Nation on a silver standard by providing that all currency shall be redeemable in silver. The report states:

"At the present time none of our forms of currency is redeemable or convertible into gold and it is problematical if gold coins ever will be found in circulation again. Silver has always been used as a monetary metal and since gold is out of circulation, silver is the only possible available metallic monetary metal."

Druggan, Beer Baron, Asks Prison Release

Atlanta, April 10 (AP).—Application of Terrance Druggan, millionaire Chicago beer baron of prohibition days, for a writ to free him from the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, where he is serving a term for income tax violation, was taken under advisement by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood today after a second hearing.

Druggan based his request on the claim that he is undergoing double punishment, in that the Government has collected taxes in arrears in addition to sentencing him.

Guillotine James, Killer Protests Death's Delay

Aix-en-Provence, France, April 10 (U.P.).—A horrified crowd of curiosity seekers today saw a guillotine jam while Georges Sarret, sinister mass murderer, was being executed at dawn in the public square before the town hall.

"Be quick. Get it over with," Sarret protested angrily. It was ten minutes before the guillotine could be reached. Then Sarret was beheaded.

R.E.W. Harrison Named Commerce Unit Chief

Robert E. W. Harrison, Cincinnati, Ohio, consulting engineer, yesterday was named by Willard L. Thorp, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce director, chief of the Industrial Machinery Division. He will assist American machinery and agricultural implement manufacturers to find profitable markets. He succeeds W. H. Rastall, who goes to an executive position with NRA Division of Research and Planning.

Soviet Flag Raised By Russian Envoy At New Embassy

Officially opening the new Soviet Embassy on Sixteenth street yesterday noon, Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky and his staff repaired to the roof for a simple flag-raising ceremony.

Only a few hours before the first official Soviet reception ever to be staged in Washington, the sickle and hammer on its field of flaming red was unfurled over the city.

Two aids of the Ambassador hoisted the banner while the staff grouped about their chief watched in respectful silence. There was no music.

Mrs. Hamilton Wins Divorce.

Reno, Nev., April 10 (U.P.).—Mrs. Marjorie N. Hamilton, New York socialite, today won a divorce from Arthur G. Hamilton on her cross complaint charging nonsupport. Hamilton, said to be a cousin of Gloria Gould, prominent in New York, in his complaint charged cruelty.

Text of Report on Silver Bill

Statement of Senate Committee on Agriculture Sets Forth Five Major Purposes Proposed Measure Is Designed to Accomplish.

Following is the report from the Senate Committee on Agriculture on the silver bill:

"This bill delegates and authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury and the Export-Import Bank of Washington to proceed directly and through market agencies and such other agencies as may be provided to seek a foreign market for the surplus agricultural products of the United States and her possessions, and to accept in payment for such surplus agricultural products either bullion silver or silver coin at such value per ounce as may be agreed upon, and at a premium of not less than 10 per centum nor not more than 25 per centum above the world market price of silver at the time of the consumation of such sale.

"The bill authorizes and directs the bank to deposit the silver bullion or coin received in exchange for said products with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Treasury shall immediately cause to be issued against such silver bullion or coin silver certificates based upon a value of $1.29 per fine ounce and to issue silver certificates against such silver at such rate of $1.29 per fine ounce.

Profit for Treasury.

"The section just referred to provides that out of the certificates issued at the rate of $1.29 per fine ounce, the bank shall pay for such silver received at the price for which it was accepted plus the premium as may be fixed from time to time by the bank, but that the value as fixed and the premium together shall not at any time exceed the sum of $1.29 per fine ounce of silver. Under the provisions of the bill, until the world price of silver reaches approximately $1 per ounce, there will be a profit as seigniorage to the Treasury of a sum representing the amount of the difference between the world price of silver plus the premium fixed and the sum of $1.29 per ounce.

"Under the provisions of the bill all purchases are to be made and paid for with silver certificates issued against the silver bullion or coins received at the rate of $1.29 per fine ounce; hence, it is impossible for the Treasury to lose any sum whatever through the operations of the bank in the sale of American agricultural surpluses abroad."

Continuing, the report says:

"Section 10 of the bill provides for the nationalization of all monetary silver bullion owned and held within the United States and our possessions, at a fair price, such price being not less than the highest world price paid for spot fine silver on the day preceding the issuance of the proclamation of the nationalization of silver.

"Under this provision the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to issue such proclamation together with rules and regulations providing for the taking title to all domestic silver now held within the United States and possessions and to pay for same with silver certificates issued against such silver on the basis of $1.29 per fine ounce.

"The difference between what the Treasury pays for such silver and the $1.29 per fine ounce is designated as seigniorage and shall accrue to the Treasury of the United States. The Treasurer of the United States is authorized to use such certificates received as seigniorage in liquidating any valid bill or claim against the United States.

Minimum Purchase Rate.

"Section 11 provides that after January 1, 1935, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to enter the world market and to purchase silver at the rate of not less than 50 million ounces per month and to pay for such silver with silver certificates, and all seigniorage on such purchases to accrue to the United States Treasury as provided in the act.

"Section 14 provides two limitations upon the sale of agricultural surpluses and upon the purchase of silver. Such limitations being, first: That when the general price level of 1926 has been reestablished, then the bank and the Secretary of the Treasury shall cease operations under such act; or when the price of silver in the world market reaches $1.29 per fine ounce so that the silver in a standard silver dollar reaches a parity with the gold dollar, then such operations under the act shall cease and terminate.

"This section provides further that when operations have been terminated, if thereafter the general price level should fall or if the value of the silver in the standard silver dollar shall fall as much as three points, then the Secretary of the Treasury and the bank are authorized to renew operations under the provisions of the act to the end that the 1926 price level shall be maintained and to the end that the value of the standard silver dollar (371.25 grains of fine silver) shall be maintained on a parity with the gold dollar."

In a general statement the report says:

"This bill is designed to accomplish the following purposes:

"1. Enable the United States to dispose of all agricultural surpluses and to encourage farm prices and prices generally.

"2. Increase the price of silver and thereby open up the markets of silver-using countries to American exportable products and goods.

"3. Put into the hands of the producers an adequate quantity of new money which can not be withdrawn from circulation by arbitrary action of some board or bank.

Retain World Markets.

"4. Retain the markets of the world for American agricultural surplus products and increase employment by making profitable the production of exportable crops in the United States and possessions.

"5. It is impossible to forecast the amount of silver that may be received in exchange for such agricultural surpluses and also it is impossible to estimate the amount of silver which may be secured under the nationalization provisions of the act. Likewise it is impossible to forecast the amount of silver which it may be found necessary to purchase in order to reinstate either the 1926 price level or the parity value of silver of $1.29 per fine ounce. But whatever silver is received through either or all of the provisions of this bill, there will be a profit accruing to the Treasury of the United States.

"For illustration, if the United States should receive 1,000,000,000 ounces of fine silver at an average price or total cost of 64½ cents per fine ounce, payable in silver certificates, then there would accrue to the Treasury as profit or seigniorage, an additional 64½ cents per fine ounce, or a total profit in silver certificates in the sum of $645,000,000.

"Under the provisions of the bill, the largest or maximum value which can be placed upon a fine ounce of silver is $1.29; hence, the bank can not accept silver at a higher value, and inasmuch as the bank is authorized to issue certificates to the value of $1.29 per fine ounce, hence, under the provisions of the bill, the bank could not accept silver at a higher value than that stated, also the Secretary of the Treasury could not nationalize silver at a higher value than the $1.29 per fine ounce, and, likewise, the Secretary of the Treasury could not buy silver or pay more than the fixed sum of $1.29 per fine ounce."

Nudity And News.

It looks as if this were going to be a big year for the nudists. From all quarters, day by day, come dispatches telling of the establishment of some new camp or other. And each dispatch is written from what used to be called the human interest angle. Witness the latest one from San Francisco. A news agency burns up wire tolls to inform a waiting world that health department inspectors of that city must have the written consent of their wives before they can inspect nudist colonies. The item goes on to state that under health department rules walls must be 20 feet high and the area must be free of all such vines as poison ivy.

This thing has gone a little bit too far. It really is time to clamp down the lid on nudist colony dispatches. Not, mind you, that we disapprove of nudity, nor even of poison ivy. Each is all right in its place. But it is the definition of what is news that irks us. Are nudist colonies news? Three years ago, yes, but now they are not. There is ample proof that they are very old stuff, not worth the attention of editors, or even cub reporters.

All through the winter Al Jolson, Ben Bernie, Eddie Cantor, Jimmie Durante and Walter Winchell have scarcely let a radio act go by without somehow working in a joke about the nudists. When anything gets known by the radio comedians, it is high time that news editors leave it alone. The surest way to judge a story for timeliness is to ask, "Has it been wise-cracked on the air?" If the answer is affirmative, it is no longer news.

Of Permanent Value.

No one is in a better position to appreciate the need for unemployment insurance than Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of Federal relief and director of the now defunct Civil Works Administration. In his address before the Red Cross convention Mr. Hopkins expressed hope that a system of unemployment insurance will be inaugurated in this country before the present Congress adjourns. Since a stream of money direct from the Treasury, amounting to as much as $60,000,000 per week, has been flowing into the pockets of the jobless under Mr. Hopkins' direction, his desire for a more scientific system of relief can be readily understood.

Unemployment insurance is not a complete substitute for relief in times of protracted depression. But reserves accumulated in times of prosperity for distribution to men who lose their jobs through no fault of their own may become a potent influence in leveling off the hills and hollows of economic activity. During the last year relief policies have run amuck. The pendulum has swung from a feeling of hostility toward unemployment insurance to indorsement of the most lavish and extravagant doles system the world has ever seen.

It is encouraging to note that opinion is now turning strongly toward the establishment of permanent constructive social machinery. Even though it gives no promise of eliminating the need for direct relief, the Wagner-Lewis bill now before Congress would inaugurate a national policy for dealing with temporary unemployment, and would tend to set up reasonable standards upon which the administration of relief could be based. Enactment of this measure, with desirable revisions, at the present session would be an important contribution to a New Deal of permanent value.

Replacing Leviathan.

It is not so long ago since the Kronprinzessen Cecile, one foggy August morning, slipped into Bar Harbor laden with cold and astonished passengers, and dropped anchor for the duration of war. She was the first of the German ships that later were to fly the United States flag and engage in transatlantic business under that emblem. Most famous of those that lay alongside docks while the war raged was the gargangtuan Leviathan, then known as the Vaterland. After the war she plied many passengers across the ocean, the German-built pride of the American fleet. But as prohibition came, and her sumptuous bar was ostensibly closed, and as the Bremen and the Rex crowded upon the scene, she was neglected more and more. Now the United States Lines would turn her back to the Government and build a more modest, though thoroughly modern liner to replace her.

With the coming of the depression has come also a real preference on the part of many for less sumptuous ways of living. The floating palaces seem somehow out of keeping with the times. People prefer less gilt, more feeling of being really on a ship. It is interesting to hear that the shipping moguls think so. Certainly the Leviathan is outmodeled and destined to rot and rust along Hoboken docks. Such is the fate of all fine ships eventually. The mere talk of her proposed permanent retirement may bring sentimental tears to many a "doughboy" who was transported in her and to many a traveler who once thought she was preeminent. But the talk of her replacement by a vessel in the best traditions of American naval architesture has its compensations. To our sailors the Leviathan was always "made in Germany."

The Stock Exchange Bill.

The revolt of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee against certain features of the bill to regulate stock exchange operations, promises major and constructive revisions in that measure as introduced by Senator Fletcher and Representative Rayburn. Coupled with the growing demand in Congress for revision of the Securities Act, these changes may be taken as evidence that the Legislature is at last awake to its responsibilities as guardian of the public interest.

The need for this awakening has for some time been apparent in the case of the Securities Act, which in its present form is now widely realized to be a major obstacle to that industrial recovery on which increased employment must primarily depend. In the case of the bill for regulation of the security exchanges, criticism has been slower to focus. In the first place, much of the regulation at which part of the bill aims is unquestionably desirable. In the second place the abuses in this pending legislation are only apparent to those who have made close study of the bill as drawn—and it fills 63 pages of highly technical verbiage.

Because of general confusion as to what this bill actually contemplates it is necessary to emphasize that it contains two distinct and separable objectives. One is regulation of the security exchanges in behalf of small investors, a purpose to which there can be no honest objection on the grounds of principle, though there is naturally some disagreement as to the best methods of making such regulation effective. Administration statements, however, would lead to the conclusion that such regulation is the only purpose of the bill.

In fact, the latter part of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill seeks to establish a disguised system of State control over industry which has little or nothing to do with the advertised purpose of stock exchange regulation. Section 11, for instance, provides that a prerequisite to the registration of any security is an undertaking by the issuer to comply not merely with the provisions of the legislation as drafted, but also "with the rules and regulations made or to be made thereunder." Nobody knows, or can know, what form such future rules might take. This section further provides that the issuer must, on demand of the Federal Trade Commission, furnish "such information as necessary or appropriate in the public interest" on matters as remote from stock exchange regulation as the company's "bonus and profit-sharing arrangements," "management and service contracts," "balance sheets for preceding years" and "profit and loss statements."

Section 12, in turn, requires issuers of securities not merely to file "such annual, quarterly, monthly and/or other reports" as the commission may prescribe, but also to file them—and other information—according to "such rules and regulations as the commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate." Failure to file according to these unpredictable rules would enable the commission to bar securities from the market. That such outcome is in many cases anticipated is indicated by the parts of the bill which are directed against the bootlegging of outlawed securities.

Section 16 of the bill authorizes examinations of private records by Federal officials at any time deemed "necessary or appropriate," the cost of such examinations, "including the compensation of the examiners," to be paid by the person examined. Section 23 permits information filed with the commission to be made available to the public. Section 25 provides heavy penalties—$25,000 fine, ten years' imprisonment, or both—for persons "who willfully violate any provision of this act or any rule or regulation made thereunder." In this section, incidentally, "the judgment of an average investor"—whoever that may be—is established as a criterion for the determination of guilt.

It is not our purpose to summarize all of the amazing features of this bill, which is obtainable by all who wish to see how far its provisions exceed its advertised motives. It is perhaps not even necessary to point out that section 32 of the measure permits establishment of a huge bureaucracy, specifically freed from the civil service regulations, in order to accomplish various forms of spying and prying into what remains of private business. Even a brief summary shows how shamefully the real significance of the measure has been concealed by its proponents, and how essential is the revolt against its concealed objectives which has now begun.

War On The Art Front.

Lenin has reappeared at Rockefeller Center. He first showed up there in a mural by Diego Rivera, the Mexican Communist, and was promptly banished because it was feared his presence might be embarrassing in that sumptuous Temple of Oil. Now he has come back again—but not in a mural by Rivera. That was destroyed, despite loud protests that such action was indefensible. His present appearance is in an oil painting by a little known artist named Orencio Miras, and it appears with 3,499 others in an Independent Artists' exhibition. This time it is doubtful if his appearance will be protested—by the Rockefellers. For the revolutionist is not glorified. Far from it. He appears in most unsavory surroundings, with a snake, a vulture, a shark, a soap box, and a death's head for company.

His admission to that sumptuous pile of real estate will not end the war of the artists that has raged for more than a year. Many painters, disgusted at the destruction of the Rivera mural, refused to send their works of art to this show. Instead, under the leadership of John Sloan, they sought other walls for their hanging, and will put on a competitive show. They charged the Rockefeller group with censorship. The stand-pats denied this and cast about for some ground on which to refute this charge. They saw the face of Lenin, but it lent them little cheer. This was an acceptable Lenin. Then they found, in a corner, Maurice Becker's "The Mask of Fascism."

This painting, which they pointed to proudly as proof of their uncensorious attitude, may cause another row. It shows a steel-helmeted soldier—his face hidden by a mask of President Roosevelt—clutching a bloody bayonet, while above a field of corpses a blue eagle soars, clutching a money bag. "If that isn't subversive, I'd like to know," said Folger Cahill, director of the show. It looks as if there is going to be trouble on the art front in New York. When artists dabble in politics, and parade their propaganda in paint, they may not add much to the beauty of this world. But they furnish something to talk about, even on these sluggish days of sleepy spring.

Disarmament Not Dead.

Dominating the steering committee of the Disarmament Conference which met yesterday at Geneva was the benign figure of "Uncle Arthur" Henderson, the conference's president, who looked down upon the delegates at the green council tables and warned them solemnly of the return of conditions similar to those which brought about the World War. "They urge us," he said, "to go back to international anarchy, where every nation is a law unto itself, and all arm." With these cautioning words ringing in their ears the delegates set May 23 as the date upon which they will meet to combat that new race for armaments which Mr. Henderson admits has started, but which he insists has not yet gained irresistible momentum.

That optimism hung over Geneva may be deduced from the setting of this date. Had the delegates not felt some progress might be made in the direction of disarmament they undoubtedly would yesterday have adjourned sine die. A flat failure on the part of the delegates to agree upon a further meeting would have been disastrous.

But yesterday's action was only a step. Success of the impending conference hangs upon three major points. First, will France agree to accept Germany's claims to equality of arms? This, at present, seems doubtful, partly because the Reich is showing more than a disposition to arm anyway, regardless of the Versailles Treaty. The French dislike the thought of granting under pressure a claim which they now seem disposed to accord if made by mutual agreement.

Second, can Russia and Japan settle their differences and lessen the tension in the Far East? The answer is unpredictable, but Russia's steadily increasing cooperation with the League, and her restored relations with this country, may be the preface to a solution. Obviously, however, Russia is unlikely to sign any disarmament pact that does not have Japan's name firmly attached.

The position of the United States remains as the third important point. The continued cooperation of this country, and leadership by it whenever a chance is available for constructive advance toward peace, can be depended upon. No less should be expected. The more secure a nation, the heavier its responsibility for helping to evoke an international system more effective than what Mr. Henderson rightly calls the present international anarchy.

Governing Washington.

Hopes that Monday would be a day of constructive legislation in behalf of the District were doomed to disappointment. For several weeks the House has been neglecting local measures. Their consideration has been postponed again and again because of other pressing matters. When the House agreed to devote one day to problems of the National Capital it was considered the best opportunity that body will have this year to dispose of several important local issues. But the day was frittered away, for the most part in the discussion of trivial matters.

The most important measure on the calendar—the old-age pension bill—was laid aside because two representatives from Texas threatened to huff and puff against it. Extensive efforts have gone into the preparation of this measure and it has the support of many civic groups. It deals with one of the most important social problems confronting Washington as a community. Yet the House ignored this measure and passed a bill to permit professional horse racing in the District, a bill which has been vigorously opposed by local residents.

Thousands of Washingtonians enjoy horse racing. But a number of tracks are already in operation within a short distance from this city. When all the attractions of racing are so easily available in adjacent Maryland there is no very cogent reason for introducing this sport into the limited area of the District, and it is apparent that the House railroaded this bill through with little or no thought as to how it will harmonize with plans for development of the Capital City.

A problem that transcends the merits or demerits of any bill, however, is involved in this performance of the House. Only a limited amount of time is given to local measures in either branch of Congress. The tendency is to enact minor bills, giving them scarcely any consideration, and to pass over major issues because they require study and deliberation. Consequently, the District faces tremendous handicaps that ordinary cities do not encounter.

There is no reason why Congress should have to pass laws to change the name of a street, to grant a chiropractor a license or effect other minor adjustments. The congestion of local measures on Capitol Hill might be substantially relieved by giving the Commissioners reasonable discretion over routine municipal affairs. More time would thus be reserved for consideration of major bills and the yoke of disfranchisement would be somewhat less galling.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters over 250 words are subject to condensation.

Answering Mr. Hopkins.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, Walter S. Hopkins, of Denver, Colo., in The Post of April 5 states that I am in error as to the status of St. Louis as a railroad center in comparison with Kansas City, Mo.

He can very easily verify my statement. I have no wish to belittle Kansas City—only to state that St. Louis is much the larger terminus. Only half of my previous letter to your paper was published or Mr. Hopkins could not doubt Missouri's status as a Southern State. It was Democratic from the time of the War Between the States until 1896. It was a border State, so the fact of its having signed the Confederacy is not generally known, apparently. As to the immigrants, if Mr. Hopkins will refer to the census of nationals taken during the late war he will find that St. Louis had fewer foreigners in proportion to its population than any of the large cities of the United States.

Free Mail System.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not think that either the public or the postal employes are getting a fair deal. Why the furloughs without pay and loss of vacations and bad service to the people? If this is on account of surplus employes why cut down the service and privileges? It is very plain that the service is crippled by these things. Substitutes have no work; the others are overworked. Postage is increased and service cut down. The crying evil in the postal system, now that subsidies are being looked after, is the free mail system. This should be restricted to strictly first-class mail in penalty envelopes. All other mail, of every class, should have postage prepaid.

Why should Congressmen and other officials be entitled to free service? Why penalize the workers to meet this expense? M. F.
Houston, Tex.

"There Oughta Be a Law."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Once upon a time there was a great land, rich in natural resources, in which a sturdy race of men worked hard and lived contentedly. But one day an inventor arose among them and made a machine that would do every sort of work in half the time, so that half of the people could grow all the food and make all the clothes, and build all the houses that were needed for all of them. Then the greedy ones (the majority) said, "Now we will do all the work and get all the wages, and the others can shift for themselves." So they drove the superfluous ones (the minority) out of the mines and farms and workshops and stores. Many thousands of the superfluous ones were banished, and the rest were kept just alive by public charity or a dole in readiness for the next war. They were very miserable in their destitution and idleness, but all who complained were jailed as agitators.

One day there arose a crank who said to the majority, "Why don't you set the superfluous ones to make public luxuries—beautiful cities, fine buildings, libraries and gymnasiums, parks and playgrounds; in fact, delightful and pleasant things of every sort, for every one to enjoy, free of charge?" So the majority decided to give it a trial. And eventually they found luxuries so agreeable and abundance so satisfactory that they made a new law—"Forced idleness shall be abolished forever. And extra special rewards shall be offered to inventors and scientists who can discover fresh labor-saving devices because the more superfluous ones there are, the more luxuriously we can all live."

And some of the people cut the new law out of the paper and reflected upon it occasionally.

Montreal. STUDENT.

"Pettishness."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am inclosing a duplicate carbon copy of a letter addressed to James A. Farley, Postmaster General, relative to the latest phase in the air mail cancellation racket.

It expresses the very general sentiment of the free-thinking citizens who live here, in the shadow of the Rocky Mountains, who have an utter contempt for "pettishness" unfairness and the injustice done the Army officers whose lives were sacrificed to the President's ill temper.

L. S. ROPES.

P. S.—I am inclosing 3 cents in postage for reply. They have only the NRA stamps here, no American stamps in the 3 cents denomination.

Mr. Ropes' letter to Postmaster General Farley:

Sir: The President has said, "If we make mistakes, we will correct them."

The mistake in the cancellation of the air mail contracts has been unmistakably admitted.

The Administration has receded a step at a time from the pathetic display of pettishness in forthwith cancelling the contracts.

Why punish the thousands of stockholders over the country by excluding the established air lines from bidding on the "new" contracts?

If the lines, the managers of those lines, that are "accused" are to be excepted from bidding, what lines and to whom do you expect to offer bids. Is this just another Administration "joker?"

Public opinion has expressed itself in no unmistakable terms. Public opinion is not pleased with its servants.

Why not come clean and do the only decent thing? Undo the blunder, insofar as it lies in the power of the President and the Postoffice Department to undo the wrong that has been committed—

Upon the parties to the contracts;

Upon the innocent stockholders;

Upon the public whose service has been disrupted by unfaithful servants.

If this Administration is not big enough to do this; if the principles are too un-American, too unpatriotic to put duty and decency ahead of personal animosity, public opinion will do it for them. The signs are increasingly in evidence.

J. S. ROPES.

Butte, Mont.

"Mere Sensationalism."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I like The Post and find it greatly improved under its new ownership and management. Clapper and Thurston never write a dull paragraph and, though Bargeron tries too hard to be funny, Phillips' column makes up for it by always being funny, besides being full of point.

But why fill pages with replies of business men to the telegram asking whether they like the securities bill? Of course they don't like it. What did you expect them to say? If any of them had liked it that would have been news. But the chorus of objections, in a vocabulary of not over 200 words, is monotonous.

Furthermore, why fill columns with Dr. Wirt's "discovery" of something everybody has known for months past—namely, that we are moving toward profound changes in our form of government and our social institutions. Intelligent comment and discussion may help in the direction of the movement, but much of Dr. Wirt's statements and those of others about them are mere sensationalism.

RICHARD C. DeWOLF.
Washington, April 6.

Disabled Officers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of April 3, Harry W. Ranson, extolling his services in the World War, very unjustly attempts to discredit the case of those emergency officers whose service-caused permanent disabilities, amounting to 30 per cent or more, entitled them to receive retirement pay under the Act of 1928, which was so strongly supported by the intelligent opinion of the Nation that it was passed by one or another branch three times over Presidential vetoes.

Mr. Ranson failed to state whether he is affiliated with that skeleton group, who have for several sessions been serving the Economy League, under the title of "Association of American Veterans." He states those retired number over 9,000, which is about 4,000 out of line with the truth. He fails to say they were chiefly lawyers, doctors, engineers, leaders of business, who gave up successful practices to respond to the call of the President for civilian officers. As compared with the retired list of the regular military establishments, the disability percentage for D. E. O. retirement was arbitrarily placed very much higher and they were examined by several boards before placement on the list.

As Others See It

Man Bites Dog.

The Power Trust is redoubling its tirades against public ownership. The latest issue of Public Service Magazine, which is not so much concerned about serving the public as the title would indicate, is packed from cover to cover with bittter editorial and "news story" denunciations of Muscle Shoals, Tennessee Valley Authority and the Roosevelt Administration.

Also conspicuous are stories of how public ownership of electric power was financially detrimental to Peru, Ind.; to Piqua, Ohio; to Sikeston, Mo., to a half-dozen other cities. The distinct impression the magazine leaves with its readers is that private utilities are a blessing to the consumers they serve, and that they should not be disturbed or subjected to stricter regulation and less profits.

Of course, public ownership has failed in some cities where it has been tried. Of course, it has proved more expensive in a few cases than private utility service would have been.

But there are plenty of cases where public ownership has not failed, cases where it has given consumers light and power at cheap rates—something private ownership most emphatically does not do. We could mention Jamestown, N. Y., and a half-hundred other cities which have tried municipal electric service and have found it distinctly profitable, both from the city's and the consumer's standpoint.

The truth is that, where you have good local government, you also have successful public ownership. The two go hand in hand, as Public Service Magazine should, and probably does, know. Where municipal government falls down, public ownership also suffers. And the reverse likewise is true.

Admittedly, the power industry is going to suffer from the TVA and the present trend toward municipal ownership. But whose fault is that? Certainly not the Roosevelt Administration's, as this magazine would have one believe.

For years the Power Trust has had every opportunity to lower its excessive rates, to accept reasonable regulation, to dispense with its exorbitant profits. And during that time it has refused to do anything toward this end.

Today the industry is in the position of the dog which has been biting the man for years with perfect impunity. Now the man is biting back. Hence, the howls that go up from such publications as Public Service Magazine.

The Post Impressionist

"Passed by the Censor"

Postoffice, Wednesday.

Now it's the Washington correspondents of trade journals who are protesting against "censorship."

Lately, Gen. Johnson ordered his staff officers to cease talking to the press concerning the NRA. Today those writers complain that, while their own first-hand sources of information are plugged, the General's special assistant, Charles F. Horner, has been writing directly to their editors, offering NRA news for publication.

* * * *

Peace hath her censorships no less hidebound than war's. The present example will doubtless excite much merited reprobation. The Post Impressionist himself disapproves, theoretically, of most Governmental censorships.

Nevertheless, he is a realist. This NRA censorship may be undesirable—in principle. But it needn't be fatal—in practice.

* * * *

Do you remember the American censorship during our country's participation in the World War? The War Department issued special permits to correspondents of the larger newspapers and news services, who then went to France with the title of "Accredited Correspondents." Arrived, they were long forbidden to send home anything worth sending. Meanwhile, the Committee of Public Information dispatched "war news" from its offices in Jackson place. One typical example of such news was a motion picture labeled "Our Boys in the War Zone;" its soldiers wore Canadian uniforms.

* * * *

None of those accredited young men wanted to tell anything that would give "aid or comfort to the enemy," but all of them wanted to send bits of real news that would interest without harming anybody. The trouble came when first American troops were moved into the front line.

Big news! A French general proclaimed it to his division in his orders of the day. The German press featured it. The American censorship decreed that the American public should be kept in ignorance.

All cables were closed to it, all U. S. military mails. However, one American correspondent bethought him of the French civil mails. He knew that no civil mail censorship opened every letter; he had heard that the French opened only every fifth letter.

So he made ten copies of his story about American troops at last getting into action. These copies he took to Paris, and mailed in ten different postal districts. One of the copies he inclosed in a letter addressed to an American then residing near New York, who was a popular hero in both his own country and France. The correspondent asked that gentleman to send his copy to the writer's editor.

The copy reached its destination.

* * * *

That wasn't all, though.

Culpably nursing indignation, the correspondent smuggled a signed article about the censorship over to Col. George Harvey, who published it in the North American Review.

As soon as red tape allowed, the author received a formal document from G. H. Q.—one of those documents with the paragraphs all numbered. It solemnly accused him of the high crime of "describing the American Military Censorship as 'one of the horrors of war,'" found him guilty and sentenced him to deprivation of all his journalistic rights and privileges.

He did reply. He sent back a formal letter, numbered paragraphs and all, declaring that, before the dispatch of his felonious criticism, he had resigned his credentials to the proper person—to their source—to the Secretary of War.

But what further was to be done? The correspondent had to get to the front and couldn't get American passes.

"You're dished," said a less formal censor.

* * * *

The correspondent got British and French passes to sectors flanking the Americans, and these passes were honored by those Americans at the front, who were too busy making war to bother about wartime censorship. He entered Toul during an air raid by merely saying "Hello, Buddy" to a sentry. One dark night, within the American lines, he helped out an American officer whose French was making difficulties for him with a French innkeeper; a flashlight revealed this officer as the head of the censorship—who proved too good a sport to order an arrest.

Moreover, the U. S. Navy remained stubbornly unenlightened about the U. S. Army's discrediting. When, having completed his work, the unaccredited correspondent wanted to go home, he sailed on an American cruiser, at a dollar per day, without checking off at any Army embarkation office. According to Army records, he is still, after 16 years, officially in Paris.

* * * *

He did return there for the Peace Conference and revealed a queer side to the newspaper character. The text of the Treaty was to be published soon in France, but American censorship inexplicably ordered that the full text should not be shown to American correspondents until some days later. Our man blundered into a momentarily untenanted ballroom at the Hotel Crillon. The gilt-and-crimson chairs were drawn against the walls. On each chair was neatly placed, in duplicate, a section of the forbidden treaty.

Yet that correspondent didn't take up a collection. He thought that would be theft. He didn't even read more than enough to satisfy himself of the thing's identity. He merely went out and bought an advance copy from a minor French politician.

* * * *

So, for the consolation and encouragement of these oppressed trade-journal correspondents, we would remind them: There's always a way 'round a censorship. But, of course, they know that already.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

DR. WIRT was a delight yesterday to Heywood Broun, the "young liberals" of the Government and the "young liberals" of the press galleries. They tittered, they cackled, they whispered wisecracks. For the revolution means largely that they will be able to get into print those funny things that they think, which is not the case at present.

And I laughed, too. In all my time in the Nation's Capital it was the funniest show I have ever seen. My only quarrel with the other gentlemen is that they thought Dr. Wirt so funny and the House Committee and themselves not funny at all. How in the name of goodness they could look at the ponderous John O'Connor or the committee chairman, Mr. Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, sitting there like a judiciary before microphones which carried their weighty utterances all over the country, and not laugh—and then realizing they laugh, not to laugh at themselves—is something I can not understand.

BARGERON.

* * * *

No, what tickled them was that the great plot of which Dr. Wirt had spoken was told to him at a party in nearby Virginia attended by two young women workers of the Government, a newspaperman and two or three other fellows, none of them prominent or even members of the Brain Trust. This was admittedly funny. First, because the young woman whom the doctor pictured as doing most of the talking is, according to my information, quite demure and not given to loquaciousness at all, and again because one of the gentlemen present, Mr. David Cushman Coyle, is listed as an expert on wind resistance.

But it has been very apparent, at least to me, that from the first Dr. Wirt used this plot-incident only as a sounding board for his analysis of what has really been transpiring in Washington, for which I am sure there should be pretty general agreement that the term "revolutionary" is not too strong.

In this he has succeeded admirably, and he was the master of the committee yesterday. He was the best propagandist to appear before a Congressional committee since Bill Shearer of big navy fame. In short, the joke is on the "young liberals" of both the Government and the press, not on Dr. Wirt. He knew very well what he was about and instead of being a crackpot looking for ghosts under the bed, as the "young liberals" would like to have you think, I am satisfied that he is a pretty intelligent showman.

In the first place, he, with the assistance of former Senator Jim Reed and Republican members of the committee, put the committee in the light of suppressing him. This is, of course, just exactly what they wanted to do. Mind you, the whole thing was being broadcast. The Democrats' purpose was to confine him to naming the revolutionaries who were plotting to overthrow the Government and in thus confining him, make him appear ridiculous. This, they couldn't do.

By one subterfuge or another, by saying what he told those at the party and what they told him, he got his discourse over pretty well.

There was one maneuver of the Democrats which appeared for a while to be hurting if not defeating his purpose. Miss Kneeland was the young woman of the Virginia gathering whom he quoted most frequently. The Democrats hit upon the idea of repeatedly asking the doctor: "And who told you that?"

Invariably the answer would be Miss Kneeland. This was not so good for the doctor's case, of course. He realized it. Finally he told the committee:

"I will now tell you something which will perhaps be of more interest to you."

Whereupon, he quoted Speaker Rainey as telling some one, I have forgotten whom, that Congress was to give Mr. Roosevelt everything he wanted and then adjourn. Then the Government would take over some industries, and after that he, the Speaker, had not the slightest idea what would happen.

Whether the Speaker said that, I don't know. We will all agree, thought, that at no time has he known what was going to happen in Washington.

And oooh, how that statement sounded on the radio!

Judging Begins Today in Post's Essay Contest

Division Winners Will Be Chosen in Scholarship Competition.

The problem of selecting division prize winners from scores of social science essays, entered by secondary school champions, in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, today will be atttacked by a jury composed of five prominent educators and The Post's editor in chief.

The judges, who, without consultation, carefully will consider each of the essays in the next few days, and whose votes then will be totaled for decisions under the low-point-total system, are: Dr. George G. Woods, dean of the College of Liberal Arts of the American University; W. S. Deffenbaugh, chief of the American schools division of the United States Office of Education; Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean of the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University; Joseph M. Murphy, director of public relations of the Catholic University of America, and Felix Morley, editor in chief of The Post.

The votes, already predicted in a number of divisions by those officials who have looked over the essays, will be broken by consultation of judges if unbroken after two ballots. A number of clerks at competition headquarters yesterday engaged in copying carefully the submitted papers, in order that each judge might have a separate set of entries upon which to deliberate alone and at length before placing his votes. Contest officials read and checked with utmost care the copied manuscripts to insure exact phrasing, spelling and punctuation in originals. The name of the essay writer and his or her school was omitted from each manuscript.

Entries in each division will be considered from those in all other divisions. Divisions were drawn by districting the participating schools in equal neighborhood groups.

Last-miute entries, rushed into copetition headquarters just before midnight Monday—the deadline for their receipt—included two papers on "The Obligations of Wealth to Society," one by Nannie Belle Rider, champion of the Harpers Ferry, W. Va., High School finals; the other by Helen J. R. Arman, of the Emmitsburg, Md., High School.

Rita Hines, winner of the Occoquan District High School finals, submitted a paper on "The Monroe Doctrine and Pan-Americanism." Others included "Fascism, Communism and Democracy," by Alice Mae Moxley, winner at the Damascus, Md., High School; "The Depressions of 1837, 1873, 1893 and 1929," by Robert H. Gardiner, jr., Boyce, Va., Agricultural High School; "Our Far-Eastern Policy," by Thomas P. Ficklin, Bealeton, Va., High School; and "The Causes and Cures of Unemployment," by Emily Baker, Surrattsville High School, at Clinton, Md.

Division winners, to be determined by the judges after final balloting on Saturday, and announced in The Post on Sunday, will receive silver medal awards and will progress into the competition's finals, on the campuses of American, Catholic, Georgetown and Howard Universities, when winners of five four-year tuition scholarships offered by these institutions will be dtermined.

Each of the competitors in the division eliminations, already having defeated large groups of opponents in intramural contests, will receive a handsome certificate of award from The Post.

Hunger Strikes Start In Spanish Prisons

Madrid, April 10 (AP).—Spain today faced a nation-wide hunger strike of social prisoners protesting that the political amnesty decree does not include them.

The decree granted amnesty to prisoners throughout Spain held for political offenses committed prior to November 19, 1933. At Zaragoza, prisoners were in the fifth day of a hunger strike which was threatening to spread to other provinces.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

AMERICA CONSIDERS A GAMBLING ORGY.

America is now a large body of debts entirely surrounded by propositions to legalize gambling.

* * * *

Only a few years ago lotteries and open betting on the races were being howled down in most communities as unthinkable evils; today some of our most ladylike States are considernig sweepstake lotteries, super-raffles and even dog racing as means of getting out of the "red."

* * * *

Massachusetts, the home of the Pilgrim Fathers, is among the States where a public lottery is being considered in the Legislature.

* * * *

After that it would surprise nobody to hear that Connecticut is putting in a pari-mutuel race track at Charter Oak Park, that Rhode Island is running a Calcutta Sweepstakes and that Vermont is raising money by a series of crap games on the village greens.

* * * *

Blue laws are being superseded by out-of-the-red laws and we may yet hear of some State trying to get solvent by putting quarter slot machines in every home.

* * * *

New York City is talking of a lottery to meet the unemployment relief bills. Believe it or not, the slacker of 1934 and 1935 may be the citizen who refuses to go around with a pocket full of lottery tickets.

* * * *

The surprising thing is how little opposition is being voiced to the current gambling trend. Five years ago a suggestion that an American community run a lottery would have brought the reformers through the roof. Today some of the reformers are so heavily in debt they might buy a few tickets themselves.

* * * *

Before the depression the trend in America was definitely against betting on the races; today it wouldn't surprise the public if Washington proposed to meet the deficit by building a chain of dog tracks and collecting a percentage on all the wagers.

* * * *

America is a funny country. It can be awfully moral and puritanical up to the time it needs the money.

* * * *

And it can change from "Thou Shalt Not" to "Hot Cha Cha!" with dazzling speed when it gets to figuring percentages.

* * * *

It isn't a wholesome spectacle, but the burden of increasing income taxes is making the people pretty goofy. If their consciences rise up during a lottery orgy and ask, "Ain't you ashamed of yourself?" they can answer, "In our grief, do we know what we're doing?"

THE EASIEST WAY.

Congress is thinking of putting an extra 10 per cent tax on all 1934 incomes, bringing very near the day when a man will save a lot of time and worry by merely sending his pay checks to Washington and asking it to send him 10 per cent back.

Indolent Ignatz says he is all fixed for the summer. He has a job fishing under the CWA.

"Stock Exchange Bill to Lose More Teeth."—Headline. Possibly becoming the toothless wonder.

Elmer Twitchell says the utilities should have a rise if only in anticipation of all the gas that will have to be used if they pull any more teeth from the market bill.

King Condemn Move to Ease D. C. Rum Act

Senate Commitee Head Frowns on Bills From House.

Warning that there will be no further liberalization of the District liquor law was given yesterday by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, District Committee chairman, as several District measures passed by the House the day before were referred to his committee.

"What I shall do about the liquor bills will be determined after I have had time to study provisions of the measure passed by the House," Senator King said.

"I am opposed to amending the law to further liberalize its provisions. I am inclined to believe there is merit in some of the proposed restrictive amendments."

Whatever the chances are of final enactment of the other measures sent to the Senate, the bill permitting horse racing in the District is looked upon as dead. Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, member of the District Committee, said he would fight enactment of that measure "to the last ditch."

The senator's pronouncement was regarded as deciding the fate of the bill, which is said to lack sufficient support to win over opposition.

Why We Cover Training Camp

By Paul Gallico.

GREAT NECK, N. Y., April 10 (Spl.).—The newspapers of Dallas, Tex., one of my favorite cities, have combined in a noble experiment that will be watched with a good deal of interest by publishers everywhere. They have turned thumbs down on prize fight publicity of the kind that used to fill the columns of the press during the halcyon days of the golden decade. They have agreed to devote but three stories to each fight, whether it be a local brawl between a couple of neighborhood boys or a championship of the world.

They will devote one story the day the match is made to announcing it, another the night before or morning of the fight, and the third the day after, telling who won, where, why and how, and the number of fans present. For the rest they are determined that the fighters shall carry on their calisthenics and rehearsals without the spotlight of free publicity.

Most sports editors have always considered every move of a heavyweight champion as legitimate news. The comings and goings of Primo Carnera are recorded in dispatches of the press associations and vary from shorts announcing his arrival in Maine or Podwink and his failure to be able to purchase a pair of socks to fit him to full column and two column stories of his activities in training.

Training camps of participants in important championship fights likewise have been awarded space on the sports pages. This has been known as "the steam-up." But it must have had a legitimate news value or the editors and publishers, who, in the last analysis are responsible for what appears in their publications, wouldn't have stood for it.

I have never considered training camps of prize fighters as news sources, but for features and color stuff they are veritable gold mines. Nobody ever seems to find anything out in training camps. Nobody ever seems to come away with a clear and accurate picture of the true condition of the man who is training. I have been to nearly every training camp of importance in the last ten years, beginning with Dempsey's camp in Saratoga when he was training for Luis Firpo, my first boxing assignment, and coming down to Max Baer's establishment at Atlantic City, and the Sharkey camp at Orangeburg, and Carnera's at Miami, recently.

And while I maintain that I am reasonably intelligent I doubt that I am any smarter about the condition of fighters now than I was when I began.

Life swirls around the spots where the pugs do their practicing. There is comedy and tragedy, the gay and the dangerous. The people fascinated by fighters are fascinating themselves. I can't wait for Baer to open camp at Atlantic City or for Carnera and his gangsters to reestablish headquarters at Pompton Lakes. What copy!

I am afraid that the Dallas papers will be a little duller without those tales. Perhaps the trouble hasn't been so much with stories as with the young men who wrote them. I suppose we could all stand a bit of freshening up on our stuff occasionally. But I think the material will always be there at those camps. It just takes some one to find it and write it.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

"The Fountain."

Charles (Langbridge) Morgan, the author of the popular novel, "The Fountain," is 40 years old. As a boy, he was educated in the British Royal Navy, served in both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and resigned from the Navy in 1913, when he was 19 years old. At the outbreak of the war, August, 1914, he immediately rejoined the Navy, and served during the whole war. Being determined not to lose his education, he entered Brasenose College, Oxford, as an undergraduate in 1919, when he was 25, and took his degree in 1921, having been president of the Oxford Debating Society. As soon as he took his degree, he was offered a position on the editorial staff of the London Times, being made assistant dramatic critic under the leadership of the famous A. B. Walkley; and upon the latter's death, Mr. Morgan became the dramatic critic, a remarkable appointment for so comparatively inexperienced a man, but his work had been so excellent that he was chosen. He is married to Hilda Vaughan, a novelist. Although Mr. Morgan's drama criticisms have been so distinguished as to attract wide attention, he is primarily a creative writer.

His earlier novels showed beauty of style, but it was not until 1932, when "The Fountain" was published, that he became universally known. Although this book would not be described as one having popular appeal, over 100,000 copies were quickly sold in America; and while the sale in Great Britain was not so great, the author received the Hawthornden prize, the most coveted honor in that country. "The Fountain" is chiefly distinguishable for the austerity and beauty of its literary style and for the intellectual maturity of its thought. It is interesting, also, to observe that, while its author served in the war against Germany, the most noble and elevated character in the entire novel is a German military officer, and the head of the house in Holland is quite superior to the English hero. This hero set out to overcome the world,. a difficult feat, and one that can be accomplished only by the sacrifice of oneself, which this sham hero was unable to do. Apart from the beauty of style and the charm of descriptive passages, there are many deeply-felt ideas.

It is rather interesting that Mr. Morgan has made so little use of his experiences on the sea. At present he is engaged in writing the authorized life of the late George Moore, whose novels he greatly admires.

Tomorrow—Good books of reference.

Parking "Racket" Charge Probed

Collusion Between Police, Lot Operatros Alleged.

Reports of a reputed "ticket racket" between policemen and parking lot operators is being investigated by police officials.

Following charges by Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, that policemen on friendly terms with parking lot proprietors, "ticket" cars for parking overtime on streets near the lots, Police Chief Ernest W. Brown ordered a probe by Inspector B. A. Lamb, traffic bureau commander.

Maj. Brown said no official complaint had reached his office, however. Representative Patman, chairman of the House sub-committee on streets, avenues and traffic, declared the practice had been called to his attention and he intended to "do something about it."

Rural Mail Carrier Bound and Robbed

Mount Airy, N. C., April 10 (AP). J. B. Holyfield, rural mail carrier, reported to officers that a masked bandit held him up in the Blue Ridge Mountains north of here today, and after binding him to a tree, robbed him of his automobile, a load of mail, his money and his coat.

Holyfield said he found the mail scattered along the road taken by the bandit in his escape, and believed all of it was recovered.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

SHE was running her eye along my top shelf, where the new books stand like bashful guests waiting for a proper introduction. At a yellow jacket, printed in red, black, blue and violet, she paused. "What's this?" she asked.

It said on the jacket: "Finnley Wren, His Notions and Opinions, Together With a Haphazard History of His Career and Amours in These Moody Years, as Well as Sundry Rhymes, Fables, Diatribes, and Literary Misdemeanors—a Novel in a New Manner." That, actually, was the title. Author, Philip Wylie; publisher, Farrar & Rinehart; price, $2.50. She read it all and stared at me, still questioning.

THEO. HALL.

"It's swell," I said.

"But what's it about?"

Racking my brain for a suitable answer, I began to feel that persistence can be carried too far.

"Well, Wylie, in his own person, meets this chap Wren in a New York speakeasy and they get to talking. Wren starts out to tell him the story of his life. They like each other, and Wren asks him along on a wild week-end party in Connecticut. Then there's more talk, and then they come back and part, and that's about all."

Bare, flat, hollow, my summary floundered to a dead stop. Inside me I knew the richness and roundness of the book, its total full delightfulness, but I couldn't find words. How would you answer some one who asked you what "Tristram Shandy" was about? I'd given the bones of the book, but not a shred of its meat. And that meat is of all textures and flavors. So I simply threw up my hands.

The only way to describe a book like this is to come in from every side with a rush attack. It was written, as Wylie says, "purely for entertainment." In this it will succeed hugely with every one save Aunt Deborah. Words and action, images and ideas, are flung about with abandon. Yet there is always intelligence underneath the farce, and genuine emotion below the theatrics. Flexible, swift, gay, tragic, uproariously funny and deadly wrathful the book is by turns, but never bitter or false or cowardly, never once dull.

For once I agree with a blurb. Wylie, in this book, is descended straight from the author of "Tristram Shandy." Sterne himself would have enjoyed the odd little sections of flash-back, interruption, present scene and reminiscence. Here is the same rambling in conscious playfulness, the same toying over varied styles. Sterne's famous marbled page is here recalled by a gaudy colored insert in a playing-card design. It follows immediately a chapter which holds but one sentence: "I played bridge." And we find the same willingness to pause and talk over everything, from the state of the nation to the practice of day-dreaming, all with a half-ingenious, half-sentimental verbosity. It has Sterne's unquenchable humor, some of his sniggers, a great deal of his pathos. But it is set in our time, in a mad-cap, prankish New York, in a Connecticut we remember from Thorne Smith's extravaganzas.

* * * *

And still I realize you aren't going to know what this gorgeous book is like until you read it. Finnley Wren called himself an ordinary man, and what happened to him was not often extraordinary. He got in trouble with a girl when he was 21, he ran away from home, he fell in love with a girl on the boat to Paris. He married her, she died, he married again. Yet each of those sequences is an almost incredibly moving tale, however deceptively easy the surface. You are going to read along, lulled by the gayety. Then something will draw you up short. I remember particularly one passage of infinite terror and pity over which I almost strangled. You will find it on page 209—to tell you more would spoil the impression.

But the book is probably like ripe olives or caviar—you will relish it intensely or you will detest it. You may call the ideas banal, the tone a bit too bawdy, the style affected. But you will have to admit that every character in the book remains thoroughly and unmitigatedly alive.

As for me, I had better bare all and say I am a downright enthusiast for Wylie's book. No book I've read this year has made me wish so strongly for a sequel, a sheer continuation of its mood and manner. If he won't provide that, I am going to read "Finnley Wren" again.

Ohioan Bares Plot by "Reds" On "New Deal"

Papers Show Communists in Southern Plants to Foment Unrest.

Cincinnati, April 10 (AP).—U. S. District Attorney Francis Canny today said a man detained at Springfield, Ohio, several days ago had in his possession papers outlining "communistic plans to wreck the Government's reconstruction program in the South."

Canny said that several days ago, a white man and four Negroes were detained by police at Springfield, who took from the white man, said by Canny to be a "Communist organizer," literature outlining the alleged plans.

Police told Canny the white man said they were en route to Cleveland to attend a Communistic convention. The police released the men, but confiscated the literature.

Canny said the papers indicated the organization was working out its plans fro wrecking the "New Deal." He said the literature stated that five persons were working in each mine and mill and their object was to cause dissatisfaction and strikes.

Canny said the papers referred to the "New Deal" as the "Wall Street Deal."

The papers, the district attorney said, revealed that men had been "planted" in mills and mines, and gave their names, ages, background, the plants which they were working, and what each was supposed to do.

Canny said he would send the literature to the Department of Justice at Washington. The district attorney said the scheme for wrecking the recovery program "was well worked out."

Nazis in Danzig Aim Blow at Catholic Youth

Free City of Danzig, April 10 (AP). The Nazi-controlled Free State Senate, in an action which the Nazi Prussian press service declares is directed chiefly at Catholic Youth organizations, ruled today that party uniforms may be worn only with the permission of the senate.

Closed gatherings of students and sports organizations are exempt from the order. Controversy between the Nazis and Catholic Youth leaders has developed with the refusal of the latter to disband and unite with the Reich youth groups.

If All Had Children's Minds None Would Learn to Save

By Robert Quillen

Reform usually waits on tragedy. One fatal accident is seldom enough to eliminate a "dead man's curve" on the highway. There must be enough deaths to awaken the public conscience and cause a cry of protest and horror.

Fire-trap tenements and school buildings are recognized as death traps long before tragedy comes, but a few must burn and take their sacrifice of human life before others are made safe.

We say of some quality or ambition or possession, "This is the most important thing in life." But it isn't at all important in death. Tragedy brings a better understanding of relative values.

In a small town it seems very important that daughter should lead her class in school. She must study early and late in order to win prizes and feed the vanity of her parents.

But when she begins to lose weight and the doctor says something about lungs, little marks on a report card immediately lose all significance.

There are many homes in which polished floors seem more important than children. And there are communities where children seem less important than dogs.

But it isn't true. When tragedy makes values clear, all the floors and dogs in Christendom would be sacrificed to bring the children back.

The fault in us is Nature's, not ours. In order to preserve us, she makes us to think always in terms of living. Our interests and our measurement of values are based on the assumption that life never will end.

If we could realize how near and certain death is, we should feel the listless despair of a condemned man in the death cell. It would ruin Nature's plans for us, so she tricks us.

We expect the show to last always, and we play our parts without thought of an ending. The final curtain catches us dressing for the next act.

It is this ignoring of death that makes us seem so heartless. Why take precautions to prevent tragedy when there is no tragedy? Why regard the feelings of a friend when there is endless time to make amends?

It is natural to be thoughtless. But the world owes all good to those who take thought of its needs.

Women to Ask Mrs. Roosevelt Address Rally

Maryland Democratic Club Meeting Today Will Plan Session.

Hagerstown, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be invited to address the spring rally of the United Women's Democratic Clubs of Maryland here in May, Mrs. J. Andrew Cohill, Western Maryland chairman, has announced.

Plans for the rally will be made tomorrow at a luncheon meeting in Baltimore, attended by members of executive board and board of governors.

That Maryland women Democrats intend to become more active in politics was indicated by Mrs. Mary E. Duvall, president of the clubs, who tomorrow will urge that they "play politics just as men do." Democratic women are done with merely ringing doorbells on election day and attending political meetings, Mrs. Duvall said.

Those who will speak tomorrow, besides Mrs. Duvall, are Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee, Cumberland, Democratic National committeewoman; Mrs. George Heller, Congressional committeewoman; Mrs. Charles E. Roach, Montgomery County, a former chairman; Mrs. J. Andrew Cohill, western Maryland chairman; Mrs. Charles W. Whaland, Eastern Shore chairman; Mrs. Frances McFadden, southern Maryland chairman; Mrs. Charles O. Clemson, central chairman, and officers of the executive board of governors.

Winchester Legion Back in Old Home

Winchester, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Robert Y. Conrad Post, American Legion, returned to its old quarters on North Loudoun street tonight.

Several years ago, the Legionnaires sold their quarters. A few weeks ago, the building was bought back at a forclosure sale. The "welcome home" meeting was in charge of Philip R. Fowle, commander.

J. O. Barham, Petersburg Business Man, Buried

Petersburg, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—The funeral of John O. Barham, prominent business man here who died yesterday at Petersburg Hospital, was held today at the grave in Blandford Cemetery. The services were conducted by the Rev. Edwin R. Carter, D. D., rector of Christ Episcopal Church.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Lula Anderson Barham, and a niece, Mrs. H. G. Goodman, both of Petersburg.

West Virginia Sets Up Plant Pest Quarantine

United States Department of Agriculture officials will allow no plants or flowers to be brought across the State boundary.

George H. Pope, 82, Will Be Buried Today

Winchester, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Requiem mass will be held at Sacred Heart Catholic Church here tomorrow for George H. Pope, 82, retired Frederick County farmer, who died Sunday night. Burial will be in Mount Hebron Cemetery.

Surviving Mr. Pope are two sisters, Mrs. I. G. Hoffman, of Charlottesville, Va., and Mrs. J. B. Violet, of Winchester, and a brother, E. W. Pope, of New Oxford, Pa.

Whipping Post Threatened Man Accused of Beating Wife

Baltimore, April 10 (Spl.).—The whipping post for a man accused of beating his wife was threatened today by Judge Robert F. Stanton in criminal court.

Albert E. Gedra was arraigned on charges of deserting his wife, Mrs. Amelia Gedra, and failing to provide for her during the past four months. In her testimony, Mrs. Gedra stated that her husband had beaten her.

"Young man," said Judge Stanton, "there are two States left in this country which still have whipping posts and Maryland is one of them. Maryland, you may know, allows as many as 40 strokes on the bare back. If your wife complains again I'll carry out the law."

Gedra pleaded guilty to the non-support charge, but denied striking his wife. He was ordered to pay her $6 a week.

During the last six years, at least three men have been lashed at the post in Maryland, in each case as punishment for wife-beating. The lashings are applied by the sheriff of Baltimore City with a cat-o-nine tails. Delaware is the only other State in the Union which permits the use of the whipping post.

Allegany Jury Probes Charge Of Liquor Rule

National, State Officials Controlled by Traffic, Preachers Say.

Cumberland, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Liquor conditions in Allegany County are being investigated by the county grand jury following charges by Cumberland preachers that "some of the National and State authorities are controlled by the liquor traffic."

The investigation, expected to cover the general subject of law observance in Allegany, was started today at the request of Judge Albert A. Doub, who ordered that county officials, city police heads and minor police officials be summoned for questioning.

He said reports have been received of an increase in gambling in the county through the use of slot machines, punch boards and number games, and he asked that the operation of these devices also be investigated.

A resolution by the preachers' meeting precipitated the jurists' action. They also urged churches to cooperate with the county authorities by creating a "spy system," reports from this activity to be turned over to the circuit court for investigation.

500 Marines Sail To Contact Fleet

Cutter Leaves Norfolk for Ice Patrol.

Norfolk, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Bound for Panama with 500 Marines on board, the Navy transport Chaumont sailed from the Norfolk Naval Operating Base this morning. She will contact the United States Fleet at Panama and the Marines will be transferred to various ships. The fleet is en route East.

The Coast Guard cutter Mendota sailed today for the Grand Banks to spot icebergs and study currents in the frigid zone. She and the cutter General Greene will patrol the ice fields and warn shipping of the direction in which icebergs are drifting. They will be joined later by the cutter Ponchartrain, now at the Naval Base awaiting orders.

The ice patrol will base at Halifax.

W. M. Boggs, Former Landowner, Bankrupt

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—William M. Boggs, once one of the largest landowners of Pendleton County, W. Va., has been adjudicated a bankrupt in United States Court of the Northern District of West Virginia.

His liabilities are approximately $50,000, with assets listed at $150.

Parsons Job Starts Soon.

Parsons, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.). Construction work will begin next week on a new water system for Parsons, according to Mayor G. W. Higgs. The project is being financed with the aid of PWA.

Heirs of Alaskan Prospector Sought By U. S. in Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Gold from Alaska awaits three unknown Norfolk citizens.

United States marshals are seeking two sisters and a brother, said to be the only surviving relatives of Frank B. Jiles, Alaskan trapper and prospector for more than 20 years.

Jiles died last May in a bog in the Lake Minchumina district of Alaska. His skeleton and the bones of two beavers were found five months later.

A letter received by the United States marshal's office here from Donald Lawill, of Fairbanks, Alaska, started the Norfolk search. It said: "Jiles left a substantial bank account and property. He told me he had a brother and two sisters living in Norfolk."

New Trial Is Granted In Slaying at Norfolk

Richmond, April 10 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today granted a writ of error in the case of L. F. Hendricks, from a judgment of the Norfolk Corporation Court convicting him of killing a man who was said to be fleeing after jumping out of an automobile.

ALICE IS RIGHT!

"Well," said Alice, "It seems that the family is having quite an argument about going to Europe this year."

"You can't go," said the Mad Hatter. "Exchange rates are up and that lets you down."

"That's silly," said Alice. "Things don't cost any more in Europe."

"Pounds, francs, liras," snapped the Mad Hatter.

"But I don't want those things," exclaimed Alice disgustedly. "I don't want to know how much a pound costs, but how much a room-and-bath costs in England . . . not how much a lira is, but how much train fare I have to pay from Naples to Rome."

We agree with Alice, for if you add together all the real items, the total cost of a trip to Europe will be still less than living and travel on any comparable scale anywhere in the world! A room with bath, First Class, in the Aquitania now costs 37% less than in 1926, President Roosevelt's "Year of Normalcy" . . . and the average minimum First Class rate is down by 20%. Cabin Class rates are as low as $234 Round Trip, Tourist Class $188. Railroad rates abroad average 30% less and hotel costs average 36% less. Ask your local agent or send for folder of facts proving European travel cheaper in 1934 than in 1926.

Receiver Refuses Bank Sale Offer

Princess Anne Building May Go to Phoebus.

Princess Anne, Md., April 10 (Spl.).—The Peoples Bank Building of Somerset County was offered for auction here today by John J. Ghingher, State banking commissioner and receiver for the bank.

Harry Phoebus, Republican candidate for governor, was the only bidder at $6,625, so Mr. Ghingher withdrew the building from sale.

It is believed that he is still negotiating the matter with Phoebus, who is said to be planning to organize a national bank at Princess Anne.

New Position Created For Former City Clerk

Cumberland, Md., April 10 (Spl.). The mayor and city council yesterday created a position for Samuel E. Griminger, who was succeeded as city clerk last week by Harry H. Thayer.

He was named clerk to assist the city auditor and tax collector.

Out of Prison 3 Months, Drunken Driver Jailed

Frederick, Md., April 10 (Spl.).—Released from the Maryland Penitentiary three months ago, after serving a long sentence for robbery, David Roberts, jr., 19, pleaded guilty to charges of driving an automobile while drunk, reckless driving, operating without a license or registration card and evading arrest and was fined $130 at a trial in police court before Magistrate Sherman P. Bowers last night.

Unable to pay the fine, he was given 40 days in jail. Roberts narrowly averted running into several cars, police said.

Virginia Trout Season Opens Next Sunday

Richmond, April 10 (AP).—Virginia's open season for trout—rainbow, square-tailed and speckled—opens at dawn Sunday, and all over the mountainous section of the State, from the tumbling Rapidan to a hundred mountain creeks along the southwest border, there'll be big doings among fishermen.

Cold weather and a late spring have retarded the hatch of flies and insects on which the fish feed, and a preseason survey indicates garden hackles and minnows will be the best killers.

Virginia Supreme Court for Second Time Alters Mind

Richmond, April 10 (Spl.).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals sometimes changes its mind.

Last week it granted a writ of error to Elizabeth Armentrout, of Orange County, who had unsuccessfully sued Dr. J. P. Hankins for $15,000. The damages sought grew out of treatment given her by Dr. Hankins for injuries received when she fell while dancing at Rapidan.

Today the court changed its mind and announced that it had refused to grant the writ.

Radio Waves and Ripples

FRANKLY curious as to just how they attain those dramatic, clock-work-like effects in Monday night broadcasts of "Headlines of Yesterday," your scribe hurried over to WMAL's sjudio the other night five minutes before the announcer raised a hand for silence. Opening the glass-partitioned door we mingled with 20 or more actors holding continuity script in their hands . . . the clock pointed to three minutes of 8 o'clock.

Most of the actors sat quietly on chairs lining the walls . . . others stood humming and glancing over their parts. Perched on a radiator sat a pert little chap staring at us with round eyes. He was the newsboy. Others who were to become Congressmen and Senators and miners in a tragic explosion stood with their sleeves rolled up. A little girl with blonde curls and plump cheeks "teetered" on her heels and opted her lips . . . she later spoke lines for a Negro "Mammy."

Fairly ripping his collar, the director gazed with a faraway look through the glass partition in an adjoining room. Violin bows were poised in midair . . . the sound effects technician held his gavel.

Briskly the announcer raised his chin above the microphone . . . the clock hand moved over 8 . . . and the "Headlines of Yesterday" went on the air. Actors read their parts with spirited emphasis and then left the microphone. A feeling that ghosts of the past were in the room was written on every face.

When reenactment of the Eccles, W. Va. mine disaster went on, your scribe was profoundly moved, even though the actors were at his elbow . . . most of them boys and men wearing trim business suits. Excited cries of women, the pounding drill and the frightened whispers of two men trapped in the depths of the mine sounded mighty convincing coming through the loudspeaker. Closing your eyes you could see the scene perfectly . . . but opening them you saw the actors intently looking at their lines . . . speaking them with passionate fervor.

As each scene closed violinists dashed into strains of music . . . jumping into the air like cheer leaders at a football game. With vibrant notes of a Negro spiritual the broadcast closed as a technician gave the signal in an adjoining room.

"Great work . . . everybody . . . it was a swell job," said the director on entering the room. One wonders just what made that broadcast so convincing and thrillingly realistic. Rehearsing accounts for some of it . . . but the real answer . . . we believe, lies in a splendid esprit de corps observable in every member of the cast.

* * * *

THAT incurable enthusiast . . . the statistician . . . has crashed the air waves. Waving his pencil and beaming like a hen who has just contributed the makings of an omelet, he offers the astounding information that the summer of 1934 will have the largest radio audience in history.

More than a milion homes were added to the radio public during 1933, he says . . . and a total of 3,806,000 new sets were sold during that period. Eighteen million homes, or 60 per cent of the entire United States, are now radio equipped. Think of it!

Automobile radios were sold to the tune of some 700,000 sets, bringing the total now in use to more than 1,000,000.

Statisticians love "salient points." The one in his survey is that of 4,000,000 sets were bought in 1933 . . . half of them are replacements of old sets costing some $65,000,000. Cash spent for new tubes brought the total to $115,000,000 invested by the radio public in one year to improve its listening facilities.

During the year 7,400 homes in the District of Columbia bought new radios, bringing the total to 118,740 homes having radios. This means that about 95 per cent of Washington's citizens are radio-minded.

Ripples.

Arch McDonald, sports commentator, interviews Alvin Crowder and Earle Whitehill, hard working pitchers of the Nats ball club today at 6:30 p. m. over WJSV . . . Dr. Wirt goes on the air again this morning at 10 a. m. with WJSV's crew handling the fireworks . . . Rep. Joseph W. Patterson (Republican), Missouri, discusses the New Deal Friday at 11 p. m. over WRC . . . Secretary of State Hull speaks on Pan-American relations April 14 at 10:30 p. m. over WRC . . . The Royal Hawaiian Serenaders began a new series last night from the Hi-Hat Club. They are heard over WRC and WMAL four times weekly.

TED FIORITO, leader of the orchestra whose pleasing melodies are carried over a Columbia network, makes a point of focusing listener interest on performance of a single instrument in his band, just as in a stage presentation the director turns a spotlight on an individual actor.

"Radio has made possible the use of certain devices," Fiorito says, "which affect the ear much as the stage spotlight affects the eye in a theater.

"For instance," he adds, "15 years ago the viola meant little in a dance orchestra. You could not amplify it and 'bring it up' so that its soft, melodious tone could be appreciated. Then, almost overnight, a new type of music became possible. The viola, a voice, any instrument could be lifted out of the group and amplified, made to come over the air sharp and clear, just as a solo performer in a stage show is picked out from the others by throwing a brilliant spotlight on him."

After violas, his favorites are the other mellow sounding instruments, such as the clarinets and muted violins. Harsher ranges of saxophones are avoided and these instruments and other open brass effects are used sparingly and only as a background.

One piece of brass has a definite place in the Fiorito orchestra. It is the slide trombone that has been used for years to provide the slurring musical note which introduces his program. It is his trade-mark.

NAVY BLUE

LINEN

Sounds exciting, this influx of linen, and it is. In the model sketched the sheer navy crepe is smartly contrasted with imported yellow linen, of a heavier weight, to give it body, and remain smart in all sorts of weather. With a hip-length box coat of linen (shown on the arm of illustration) to match the lapels, belt and plastron it reflects every cachet of good taste and appropriateness for practically any daytime occasion throughout the summer.

For an accurate estimate of heating your home by GAS!

Every man looks forward to the time when he can do away with furnace tending, fuel ordering and storing, and heat his home the modern way—automatically.

Six thousand Washington families have installed automatic gas heating plants and never give a thought to furnace worry. Yet there are some people who believe the cost of heating with gas must be beyond their means. Here is the way to find out.

We can tell you accurately and without obligation, just what it would cost in your home. We feel it is information every modern family should have, whether they put in automatic gas heating or not. Estimates are made by specially trained men, based on a scientific survey and the actual experiences of 6,000 local families who are now enjoying carefree automatic gas heating. May we give you this information?

SPECIAL! During April Only Automatic Gas Heating Plants

Five Dollars down is all the cash you need to take advantage of this offer. Easy monthly payments which average less than 25c a day (including small additional charge for financing) can be deferred, if you wish, until the beginning of the next heating season. An accurate estimate of the cost of heating with gas is furnished in advance without obligation to you. Gas heating unit can be quickly and easily installed in less than a day.

Anne Arundel Bar Backs Judge Green

Election Associate Justice Urged.

Annapolis, Md., April 10 (Spl.). The Anne Arundel County Bar Association has adopted a resolution urging the election of Associate Judge Nicholas H. Green, of Annapolis, of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, for the full term of 15 years.

Judge Green, a Democrat, was appointed to the bench by Gov. Ritchie 15 months ago to succeed Judge Robert Moss, who retired at the expiration of his term. Thus far there are no indications that he will encounter opposition neither in the September primary nor in the November general election.

Trustees Named For Aged Woman

Frederick Court Responds to Children's Plea.

Frederick, Md., April 10 (Spl.).—Judge Arthur D. Willard today appointed Ira T. Sears and H. Kieffer Delauter trustees of the affairs of Mrs. Martha E. Dixon, aged resident of near Park Mills.

The appointment was made on the petition of Benjamin Dixon, Mrs. Anna R. Cosgrove and Mrs. Lela M. Smith, daughters and a son. They alleged that another son, Edward Dixon, now in charge of the farm, is making improper disposition of the estate, and that so long as he has charge the property is in danger of being dissipated.

Seven witnesses testified for the petitioners. Judge Willard ruled that the evidence on both sides showed that Mrs. Dixon is not capable of managing the affairs of the farm, and that under the law the court is authorized to appoint a trustee.

Road Control Held By Anne Arundel

County Balks at Giving Domination to State.

Annapolis, April 10 (Spl.).—By unanimous vote, Anne Arundel County Commissioners today determined not to turn county roads over to the State roads commission for at least another year.

They had received a letter from the State commission stating that originally more than $169,000 had been allotted to the county through gasoline taxes and Federal allotments. Of this amount the county had planned to spend $84,000, which, with other necessary expenditures, would have left only slightly more than $50,000 for road maintenance during the remainder of the fiscal year. This was regarded as insufficient.

For several months the commissioners had been asked by groups, particularly members of the recently established Better Government League, to place the roads system under State control, it being claimed that a substantial savings would accrue to taxpayers.

Hagerstown Man Jailed in Slaying

Murder Charge Follows Shooting in Hotel.

Hagerstown, April 10 (Spl.).—Claud H. Krout was held without bond on a charge of murder growing out of the fatal shooting of Owen D. Sherley here Saturday night, following a nonjury inquest held before Magistrate Richard Duffey today.

H. Dale Boward, who was sitting beside Sherley in the lobby of the latter's hotel, testified that Krout walked in, sought to engage in argument with Sherley, was ignored, and then opened fire. Sherley, who had an argument earlier in the week over rent for a room leased from Sherley, died several hours after the shooting at the hospital here. Four bullets had entered his body.

Candidates Waited In 6 Valley Towns

New Market, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Shenandoah County's six incorporated municipalities again are looking for mayoralty and councilmanic candidates for election June 12.

Candidates for various posts, from mayor and treasurer to councilman, must file with the county clerk on or before April 14.

Elections two years ago were conducted with little opposition to existing administrations, with the exception of New Market, where two tickets were in the field and the "Old Guard" came off victorious with the exception of one office.

Storing Wine

Richmond Vendors Seek Use of Tunnel.

Richmond, April 10 (Spl.).—Wine vendors have proposed to Mayor Bright, of Richmond, that they be permitted to use the abandoned R., F. & P. tunnel under Byrd street here as a storage place for their products. The mayor instructed them to submit their proposal in writing.

The tunnel is 600 feet long, and at one time was used by the railroad to handle its north and south bound traffic in the heart of the city. Wine experts contend that the tunnel, now closed, would be an excellent underground vault for all vintages.

Supreme Court of the United States.

Ralph M. Snyder, of Chicago, Ill.; Irving A. Fish, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Markley Frankham, of New York; Ormie C. Lance, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Stanley Weiss, of St. Louis, Mo.; Frank J. Dougherty, of Louisville, Ky.; Julius T. Long, of Shreveport, La.; Joseph I. Winslow, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Raymond B. Tobias, of Mount Carmel, Pa.; G. Ernest Jones, of Birmingham, Ala.; Robert H. Gardes, of San Francisco, Calif.; Felix L. Smith, of Hot Springs, Ark.; Merritt A. Vickery, of Cleveland, Ohio; Philip Pendleton Gibson, of Huntington, W. Va.; Truman Henson, of New York City, and Herbert L. Hanson, of New York City, were admitted to practice.

No. 650. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. and United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., appellants, vs. Delta & Pine Land Co. Appeal from the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi. Judgment reversed with costs and cause remanded to the said Supreme Court for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of this court. Opinion by Mr. Justice Roberts.

No. 463. Hans Elliott and United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., petitioners, vs. Thomas R. Lombard. On writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Judgment reversed with costs and cause remanded to the said Circuit Court of Appeals for further proceedings in conformity with the opinion of this court. Opinion by Mr. Justice Van Devanter.

The Chief Justice announced the following orders of the court:

No. 655. Roland Boynton, Attorney General of the State of Kansas, petitioner, vs The Hutchinson Gas Co. On writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas. Per curiam: The writ of certiorari herein is dismissed for the lack of showing of service of summons and severance upon those appellees in the State courts who are not parties to the proceedings in this court. Garcia vs. Vela, 216 U. S. 598; Journeymen Stone Cutters Association vs. United States, 278 U. S. 566; Newton vs. Consolidated Gas Co., 264 U. S. 571; 265 U. S. 78, 81, 82.

No. 505. The People of the State of New York, ex rel., Dexter Blagdon, appellant, vs. Thomas M. Lynch, John J. Merrill and John P. Hennessey, as Tax Commissioners of the State of New York. Appeal from the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Albany County. Per curiam: The appeal is dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Section 237 (a) judicial code as amended by the act of February 13, 1925. (43 Stat. 936, 937). Treating the papers whereon the appeal was allowed as a petition for writ of certiorari, as required by section 237 (c), judicial code as amended (43 Stat. 936, 938), certiorari is denied.

No. 906. City of South Pasadena, appellant, vs. City of San Gabriel, Glenn Evans, James M. Fisk, et al., &c. Appeal from the District Court of Appeal, Second Appellate District, State of California. Per curiam: The appeal is dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Section 237 (a), judicial code as amended by the act of February 13, 1925 (43 Stat. 936, 937). Treating the papers whereon the appeal was allowed as a petition for writ of certiorari, as required by section 237 (c), judicial code as amended (43 Stat. 936, 938), certiorari is denied.

The Chief Justice said:

"The other orders of the court appear upon the list certified to by the Chief Justice and filed with the clerk and will not be announced orally.

Income Justifies Route 1 Widening

Richmond, April 10 (Spl.).—Complaints that the Richmond-Washington highway should not have been widened, while roads in other sections of the State were unconstructed, have been answered by the gas tax income from the No. 1 route North and South, Henry G. Shirley, highway commissioner, declared today.

The income from the Fredericksburg-Washington section alone, he said, will be more than $1,000,000, based upon traffic checks. Mr. Shirley considers Route 1 one of the best investments the State ever made.

Raymond G. Mowery Heads Franklin Schools

Waynesboro, Pa., April 10 (Spl.). Raymond G. Mowery, of Quincy, unanimously was elected Franklin County superintendent of schools today, at a salary of $5,600.

He succeeds John L. Finafrock, Mercersburg, who retires this year. Mowery had been assistant superintendent for 12 years.

Loudoun Indicts Two for Felonies

Leesburg, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Wilbur Smith, of Purcellville, was indicted by the grand jury at the April term of Loudoun County Circuit Court on a felony charge.

It is charged that Smith broke into the store of C. K. Davis in Purcellville, taking several watches and other articles of merchandise. He pled not guilty.

Noah Haskins, colored, also was indicted on a felony charge, and pled not guilty.

Carroll Tops Crop Application List

Westminster, Md., April 10 (Spl.). L. C. Burns, county agricultural agent, announced yesterday that Carroll County is leading in the number of applications for participation in the Federal corn-hog reduction program.

Applications, which will be received until April 16, now total 325, representing 90 per cent of the eligible hog producers in the county, Burns stated.

Statistics indicate hog production will be reduced 25 per cent and corn acreage cut 20 per cent in Carroll County.

Mrs. McCandless To Talk on Hawaii

The scenic beauties of Hawaii and the commercial and agricultural life of the Territory will be the topic of an illustrated talk to be given at the Ladies Congressional Club at 3 p. m., Friday, by Mrs. L. L. McCandless, wife of Hawaii's Delegate in Congress. The talk will start at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. McCandless, born in the State of New York, has resided in Hawaii for 38 years. She has identified herself with social and educational work there.

A preface to her speech will give a brief history of Hawaii, its location, population, and annexation to the United States as an incorporated Territory. Mrs. McCandless will present moving pictures and colored slides of the islands, including illustrations of the modern development of Honolulu. Pictures of gardens in Honolulu, Waikiki Beach, and Kilauea volcano in eruption will be included.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Hogan, who will make their home in Rochester, N. Y., are at the Shoreham before proceeding to White Sulphur Springs on their wedding trip. They were married April 7 in White Plains, N. Y., at St. Bernard's Church. Mrs. Hogan is the former Miss Katherine Carroll, daughter of Mrs. Thomas William Carroll.

Winston Guest, Polo Celebrity, To Wed Miss Helena McCann

Woolworth Granddaughter Engaged to Son of British Leader.

An engagement of great interest to society in both this country and England is that of Miss Helena Woolworth McCann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann, of New York and Oyster Bay, Long Island, to Mr. Winston Frederick Churchill Guest, international polo player and son of Capt. the Hon. Frederick E. Guest and Mrs. Guest, of New York, Palm Beach, and London, England.

Miss McCann, a granddaughter of the late Mr. Frank W. Woolworth, made her debut at her parent's country home, Sunken Orchard, Oyster Bay, Long Island, in May, 1931, and in June of that year was presented at the Court of St. James.

She attended the Hewitt and Chapins Schools in New York, Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn., and spent a year studying in Rome. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mrs. Wyllys Rosseter Betts, jr., of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., formerly Miss Constance Woolworth McCann, is a sister, and Mr. Frasier McCann a brother.

Miss McCann is a cousin of Princess Alexis Z. Mdivani, the former Miss Barbara Hutton.

Mr. Guest has been a high-ranking polo player, and a member of the "Big Four," United States International Polo Team, for several years. Born in London, he came to this country with his parents when he was 13 years old and is now an American citizen.

In 1929 he received a 10-goal rating in indoor polo, a status never before conferred upon an American player, and he has held outdoor polo ratings as high as nine goals. In 1932 he was elected a vice president of the Intercollegiate Polo Association, being the first college polo product so honored. That same year he was the leader of the Optimists team which won the class A indoor polo championship.

Mr. Guest was graduated from Yale University in 1927 and from Columbia University Law School in 1932, where he was elected permanent president of the senior class. He is a member of the Racquet and Tennis and Meadow Brook Clubs. He has hunted big game in Africa on several occasions.

Mr. Guest's father, long a member of Parliament, who has had a distinguished career in British public life, is the third son of Baron Wimborne and has served as treasurer to the king's household, having been appointed in 1912. He also held the posts of joint parliamentary secretary to the treasury, secretary to the air ministry and air minister.

He was attached to Field Marshal French's staff in the war, and in 1920 was made a privy councillor. He is also an active polo player.

Mr. Guest's mother is the former Miss Amy T. Phipps, daughter of Henry Phipps, partner of Andrew Carnegie in the steel industry. In the Spanish-American War she served as a Red Cross nurse. In 1928 she sponsored Amelia Earhart's transatlantic flight with Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon in the monoplane Friendship, and entertained for Miss Earhart in London. Mr. John S. Phipps, Mr. Carnegie Phipps and Mr. Howard Phipps are Mr. Guest's uncles.

Bartender Sets Will Stimulate Thirsty Guests

By Ruth Anne Davis.

MAY we reiterate it's occasionally possible to obtain startling values at low prices?

A home bartender set, providing every means for extending a hospitable welcome to a bevy of thirsty guests, brings this home anew. It includes a double jigger, conical shaped so one end holds a small amount, the large end twice as much; a cocktail shaker with a glass top which may be used as a mixer and a fruit strainer. It's simple, useful, made of glass and chrome and priced reasonably.

One cocktail set which includes a long narrow tray, four glasses, and four coasters is only $1.70.

One heavy brass smoking set has three outstanding attributes, namely, it's expensive looking, but low priced; it's completely practical, and is guaranteed to last for years. Besides the ample tray, it includes two brass ash trays and a cigarette box and matchbox, both trimmed in jade.

A shop on Connecticut avenue has a new modernistic set. The tray is all chrome with wooden handles, and the shaker, chrome with wooden base.

Six crystal glasses with weighted bottoms complete the set.

Promotes Comfortable Traveling.

The odds and ends of traveling equipment are more trouble than large sized luggage. Soap, for instance, that seeps out of the box and stains garments, or fills the whole suitcase with a strong soapy aroma. Or a wash cloth that must be repacked while still damp and becomes musty and stale.

A woman widely known for the products which she has given to the fair sex to glorify their forms and faces has come through again this time with a package of soapy washrags. They come in a package of three, folded neatly in a waterproof sanitary case. The whole outfit can be slipped into a small corner of the suitcase and left there till used without fear it will leak around the place.

The cloths are the preferable porous type, and the soap with which they're chemically saturated is a kind favored by discriminating women. The whole ensemble costs only 75 cents.

Blossoms in a Bottle.

Now it's nearly cherry blossom time the small pocket bottles of cherry blossom perfume on sale for 50 and 75 cents in an F street store are appropriate.

Cleans Rugs and Itself.

A new carpet sweeper not only cleans the carpet but automatically cleans itself. As it's pushed along over the rug a fine tooth comb removes the fibers and dust clots which collect on the inner brush.

This new cleaner never needs oiling and a child could operate it. It has both high and low brush control to make it equally effective on long or short pile rugs or carpets. A thick rubber bumper built around it protects woodwork and furniture.

There are many means nowadays to make housework simple, but none of them does a better job than this new "oldstyle" sweeper.

"These Must Go."

Imported handknit suits for little boys from 1 to 4 are priced now at $3.50. A short time ago the same suits were selling for $8.50, but there are only a few left and "these must go."

The suits were a good value at their old price but now they're worthy representatives of that scarce species—bargains.

Authentic Mark-Down.

There is an unusual sale of stationery going on in a downtown store. Plain sheets of large-size paper with ripple finish, small packages of bordered note paper, stationery with almost invisible checks and stripes, besides many boxes of plain colors and white, are selling for as little as 39 cents.

Some of these were formerly priced at $1.25, others at $1, but now they're going to make room for new shipments of spring goods.

Jewelry in Stripes.

Six bracelets in all colors are selling for 50 cents in a local shop. They are nice worn in stripe fashion, with alternating colors.

It's versatile jewelry. Out of the six bracelets one can make a dual arrangement, triple, or striped sextet. Or they can be worn three on one wrist, three on the other.

Livable, Attractive Window Groups Possible With Proper Accessories

An Easy Chair, Magazine Table, Smoking Stand Are Essential.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

WINDOWS ARE one of the centers of interest in a home. In winter the fireplace is naturally the most important, but during the spring and summer months, the windows should have more emphasis. These well-thought-out groupings give a most livable, inviting appearance to a room for the warm days.

A window grouping should be inviting. With smart draperies, an attractive chair, a table for magazines or a tea tray and colorful accessories you can create a decorative corner, ideal for relaxation.

In one distinctive living room English glazed chintz with a background of apple green and a pattern of flowers in soft browns and peach scattered through it is the foundation of an attractive color scheme.

The chintz draperies are tailored and held back to frame the view by means of a band of bronze metallic leaves. No glass curtains are used.

Near the window is an arm chair, comfortable and well proportioned. It is upholstered in the same glazed chintz and finished at the bottom with a pleated ruffle and a row of antique bronze nailheads to accent the graceful curving lines. The exposed part of the chair frame is painted dull brown.

A small walnut tea table placed conveniently near the chair holds books and smoking accessories. At night the light from a wrought iron lamp with a shade of yellow pleated parchment is soft and restful. The accessories of this room are in peach and bright yellow.

Miss Maxson gives individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post, or phone NA 4205 for an appointment.

What Today Means to You

"Aries."

If April 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:25 to 11:25 a. m., from 12:25 to 2:25 p. m. and from 8:25 to 10:25 p. m. The danger periods are 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Your social activities on this date will be greatly influenced by the people you are with. Be cautious regarding your associates, for if they are of an irascible disposition, you may be on "pins and needles" the entire time you are with them. Avoid crowds and unnecessary rushing. It might be well to remember, "haste makes waste."

The woman born on April 11 has a splendid imagination, which enables her to have creative ability. The child born on April 11, when old enough to read, should be supplied with a bountiful number of carefully selected books, so that it will develop a taste for good literature.

The man born on April 11 has generally the same characteristics that the women born on this date.

Tallness Not Style Handicap; Designers Rush Into Breach

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, April 11.—To be under 5 feet 5 inches tall is not a handicap—as many women have long felt it to be. Because, aside from the fact that a recent survey of male preference showed it to be for small women, clothes makers are paying so much attention to fashions for the smaller woman.

They are choosing from each season's fashionable style details those best suited to smaller figures and making clothes proportioned to the small figure so that the bugbear of expensive alterations is eliminated.

The whole idea of the clothes silhouette is better suited to the smaller woman this season. It's lost its last year's exaggerations . . . in particular those extremely wide and puffed shoulders which weighed so heavily upon the small figure.

If her hips are full, as the small woman's hips are apt to be, she'll find that those smart sleeves which fit closely at the wrist with whatever fullness they have massed at the elbows, help conceal this hip width by placing the accent at the elbows. Cape treatments, too, help to counterbalance hip width and so do the new raglan and kimona sleeves.

Full diaphragm is another point for the small woman to watch. And to balance this, fullness is concentrated above the diaphragm with soft jabots, draped necklines, revers and shirred or rippled surplice collars.

Jacket dresses are an important fashion, and most becoming to the small woman are the straight-hanging boxy types coming about to the hips, and the wrapped waist-length jackets. If she chooses a swagger length, it should hang straight rather than flared.

Simple, straightline coats with slim, trim skirts and either no collars or flat V-shaped ones, surplice closings or revers which are long rather than wide, are her best choice. But she should certainly avoid the new Russian silhouette with massed fullness at the front of the skirt, and the coats with high tight necklines or jutting-out lines or trimmings.

Watch out for the new wide-brimmed hats, too. They tend to squash her down. Medium and narrow brims are better, and small brims which roll up at the side are fine.

Costumes of the type described for the smaller woman are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

The Versatile Strawberry Now Incorporates Itself in Salad.

By Susan Mills.

BY this time the statement that spring is here is beginning to get a little banal. But take a glimpse at the market stalls for fresh evidence. They're full of spring onions, water cress, ruby red tomatoes, radishes, refreshing cucumbers, limes and, better than these, strawberries.

The traditional spring salad consists of crisp uncooked vegetables—onions, cress, tomatoes, cucumbers, endive, cabbage, carrots. French dressing, too, is springy, particularly when served with raw salads.

Strawberries, usually associated with the breakfast fruit course or the dinner dessert course, lend themselves well to the making of a salad. Try the recipe and see.

If the family wearies of the usual mayonnaise try cucumber mayonnaise for a change; it's novel and piquant.

Spring Vegetable Salad.

1 cup cucumber, diced
1 cup red radishes, thinly sliced
¾ cup scallions, thinly sliced
1 large red tomato, cubed
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of paprika
½ cup mayonnaise

Chill each prepared vegetable. When ready to serve, combine ingredients in order given. Serve on crisp lettuce. Serves 8.

Tomato Aspic With Green Vegetables.

4 teaspoons gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
2 cups cooked or canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon scraped onion
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ cup cooked fresh string beans
½ cup cooked fresh peas
½ cup cucumber, diced
1 teaspoon onion, finely chopped
¼ teaspoon salt
French dressing
2 tablespoons mayonnaise

Soak gelatin in cold water. Cook tomatoes and seasoning 10 minutes and strain off liquid. Dissolve gelatin in hot liquid. Pour into individual ring molds. Chill until firm.

Toss vegetables, salt, and French dressing together lightly and chill 30 minutes. Drain thoroughly. Add mayonnaise and blend. When jelly is firm, unmold rings on crisp lettuce. Pile vegetable mixture in each. Garnish with additional mayonnaise and watercress. Serves 8.

Strawberry Salad Mold.

1 package strawberry-flavored gelatin.
2 cups boiling water.
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar.
2 cups strawberries, quartered and hulled.
1-3 cup mayonnaise.
1-3 cup cream, whipped.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Chill. Sugar the strawberries. Fold mayonnaise into whipped cream. When gelatin mixture is slightly thickened, fold it slowly into mayonnaise and cream mixture until entirely smooth. Fold in strawberries. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve on crisp lettuce with additional mayonnaise, thinned with whipped cream and lemon juice. Serves 6.

Cucumber Mayonnaise.

½ cup cucumber, finely diced.

Fold mayonnaise into slightly whipped cream. Add cucumber and blend. Makes 1 cup mayonnaise.

Equal quantities of chopped pimento and diced cucumber may be used instead of all cucumber.

BACHELOR—of ARTS

By JOHN ERSKINE

The Story Thus Far.

Alec Hamilton, Columbia freshman, likes college for two reasons, the Phi Phi Phis and Mimi. Mimi is just beginning at Barnard when her father loses all his money and she takes a job as cashier in a drug store. Alec plans to marry her, but goes on his first bat at his initiation and forgets about his date. He is covered with shame, especially as he hasn't enough money to buy an engagement ring. With this experience he begins to grow up.

Meanwhile the dean, discovering that Alec is falling down in his studies, warns him to improve on penalty of being sent home in disgrace. Mimi reproves Alec for extravagance. Again they decide to get married and visit an expensive night club to celebrate.

The oysters arrived just as the band tuned. She smiled at him. "Our first dance—since you really proposed!"

They danced well together, as young things can who have done it often, and tonight her joy in him was graceful to watch. The diners watched. Alec misinterpreted their interest and was glad when the music stopped. The other dancers applauded for an encore, but he reminded her the oysters were waiting. They ate their oysters.

"This is wonderful food," said Mimi happily. "I'll never eat clams again without thinking of you and me."

When the music resumed she wanted to dance again, but she thought he ought to suggest it, and the soup had just come. They ate their soup.

But there was nothing on the table the next time the band struck up and, reading her thoughts, he resigned himself. "Do you feel like waltzing?"

"Here," said Jim cheerfully, "is where we change partners."

Alec found himself with Gladys in his arms. Not that she wished to be there. Alec supposed he ought to talk to her.

"How's Extension getting on?"

"Say, you're just as rude as before!"

"Rude nothing—I was just asking."

"Yes."

"Well, they were awfully short of members!"

After that he didn't try to talk Extension riffraff! He gave her back to Jim and recovered Mimi. They ate their filet mignon.

"I know a night club where we could be more secluded. What do you say to a demi-tasse to finish off with, and then go downtown?"

"Why, this is perfect, Alec! And you mustn't spend any more."

"It's too crowded," he insisted, beckoning the waiter.

In ten minutes they were on the steps of the parking place, looking in vain for a taxi. Any number of chauffeurs were standing around, with curious eyes, but no taxi.

"You ought to have told him to come back."

"Let's walk," said he, desperately. "It's only a step."

"It's a mile!"

"Well, it's down hill."

In the subway he began to feel better, and in spite of the noise, he was moved to conversation. "When you go to a place like that," he yelled in her ear, "you should have your own car."

"A taxi would have done," she called back.

"If we went three times a week," he shouted, "the car would be cheaper."

"But we shan't go three times a week."

"Who said we would? I meant, in case we did!"

At the university station they got off, and she saw he had forgotten about the night club. They walked to her door, on the corner of 114th street. She wondered whether he had also forgotten about their engagement.

Mimi Asks About Marriage.

"I've had a lovely time, Alec—thanks ever so much! And by the way, do you still wish to marry me? You don't have to—I just want to know where we stand."

He was hurt. "Haven't I been celebrating our wedding all evening? The first thing after breakfast, I'll get a license."

"Alec—don't get mad—but Jim says you're not old enough."

"He does, does he? Stabbing me behind my back. Why didn't he say that to me? I'm 19! Lots of people get married at 19. I'll find out how it's done, and I'll come to the store early. I'm going to cut classes tomorrow."

In the morning she was busy at her work, but thinking of him. He did not come early. She feared he had met some difficulty with the law. No doubt Jim was right. It was too much to hope that their happiness was as near as Alec believed. Well, they could wait, if they must, for another year and a half, and perhaps that would be for the best, if she could look at it unselfishly. He really ought to get more education. Even to her love, at times he seemed young.

At quarter to 12 he came into the drug store, but not with his usual abundance of spirits. He slipped in from the side street, and she knew at once that he was weighed down with thought. She felt sorry for him, guessing his discouragement at this first encounter with real life.

"What luck?"

He leaned on the side of the desk. "What would you say to my buying a car?"

"I'd say you couldn't!"

"Well, listen to this! After I left you last night I dropped in at the house, and Tom told me of a man who had to raise some cash in a hurry. It's the smartest roadster you ever saw, yellow with an extra lot of nickel on it. Only used two years, and he'd sell it for $450. That leaves me nearly $150 for garage, gas and upkeep. What'd you say?"

Chill Creeps Into Voice.

She felt cold all over, and some of the chill got into her voice. "If you think you can afford it, it sounds like a bargain. Of course, you'd have some one look at it first, so you wouldn't be cheated."

He stared at her. "So far as that's concerned, Miss Killjoy, I looked at it myself. Come out and I'll show it to you." He beckoned toward the side door.

"Alec, don't tell me you've bought it!"

"Sure I have! I couldn't let a bargain like that get away! What's the matter with you? You aren't crying, are you?"

"Alec, dear! Yesterday you were going to use that money to get married! I thought you wanted me, but you've bought a car instead!"

It worried him that she could doubt his passion. "The moment I saw the machine," he explained, "I thought how hard on you it would be to pinch along and never go anywhere. Last night it was darn embarrassing at Ben Riley's without a car. Now we can ride every day, and really see something of each other, and I'll be in better shape to work, and—I don't see what you're grouchy about!"

"We're through—that's all! I don't care to see your car! You weren't serious! Please don't come here any more!"

He was crushed. "Gosh, I'm sorry you take it that way! I thought you'd be glad!"

"Then why didn't you come in the front door like a man? Why did you hide around on the side street? You're a spoiled child, and you knew you ought to be ashamed of yourself!"

She spoke distinctly, and the clerks in the store might be listening. "All right," he conceded. "I'm sorry if that's what you want me to say. But what can I do with the thing, now I've got it?"

"Ride around in it, Baby! Only don't come here!"

His world wabbled beneath his unhappy feet. He got to the side door, and paused to contemplate his luckless purchase, from which the glamour had already departed.

It was indeed a smart roadster, long enough and rakish, a vivid yellow, with even more nickel on it than he had described. In the noonday sun it was rather blinding.

Blonde Sits at Wheel.

At the wheel sat a small blonde, wrapped in a sport coat, with a beret plastered on one side of her head, like a pancake. His coming made her look toward the door. Gladys! She was surprised to see him.

At loss for words, he went around the car and stood beside her, digging his pocket for the key.

Her jaw dropped. "Don't tell me it's yours!"

Her confusion was a great comfort to him, at that moment. "Move over, will you?" he suggested politely. "Are you going anywhere? Shall I run you up to Utica?"

She made a quick revision of her point of view. "You're a darling! Let's go around the block once or twice, past the dormitories and the library, and then to my diggings—unless you want to take me up Riverside. I suppose you can drive?"

Before he had given a complete demonstration of his skill they had reached Yonkers.

Three weeks later at the fraternity house Tom and Jim called in Albert, the precocious, to hear his report. Albert had just returned from an embassy to the dean. Now he stretched his long legs across Tom's room, took off his spectacles, cleaned them, held them up to the light.

"Come on, spill it!" said Tom. "Will he do anything?"

"He's crazy!" exclaimed Tom. "It's his job!"

"Well, he can't see it. I told him Alec was afraid of her, that she has announced their engagement, that she made him teach her to drive his car, that he won't go near her if he can help it, and she's ruining him with gas bills, driving by herself, and he stays away from the house because there's a telephone here, and hides in the dormitory where she can't get at him, and having nothing else to do, has taken to study. I didn't say that Jim brought them together."

"Regular Hell-Cat."

"I did?" protested Jim. "It was Tom first. She's a regular hell-cat, and you have to know how to handle her."

"See here, Jim," said Tom, "you're the one to call Gladys off!"

Albert slapped his knee. "I have it! Mimi can break it up!"

"She won't," said Jim. "That girl has pride."

Tom wrinkled his brow. "Isn't she a woman? I like Bert's idea. We can rouse her primitive instincts."

"Just you try it!"

"Gad, I will! I see light! I'll go on my knees to that red-head!"

Gladys Visits Mimi.

About 3 o'clock the next afternoon, when Mimi was reading a magazine in a lull of business, Gladys stood before her desk. Mimi smiled cordially. Gladys looked worried.

"Where can I reach that friend of yours?"

"Which one?"

"You know well enough! He lent me this second-hand car of his, and there's something wrong with it. When you change gears, it makes a noise."

"Maybe you don't do it right."

"I do it the way he taught me!"

Mimi shook her head sympathetically. "I don't know a thing about Alec. I thought he was out riding with you."

"Most of the time," admitted Gladys hastily, "but today—say, be a sport, get word to him for me, will you? I'll do something for you some time."

"Why not ask Jim?"

Gladys met her eye. "We don't speak. He's a washout."

"You could write to Alec."

Gladys forgot herself. "Haven't I, though!"

She saw her false step, but Mimi put her at ease. "He's an unreliable kid—awfully young. I'd just go ahead and enjoy the car, and if it breaks down, let him worry."

Gladys rose to meet this friendly understanding. "That's what I'll do! Say, but you're a wise woman! Would you like me to run you around the park in it? What time do they let you out?"

"O. K."

At four Tom came on his errand of intercession, and found that Jim was right. She was full of pride, her primitive instincts couldn't be roused.

"Why should I butt in? He likes her. She's probably just what he needs."

"Aw, say, don't you love him?"

"Me? How silly! We're good friends, and all that, but he's a child!"

Tom repeated himself hopelessly. "I thought you loved him."

Mimi's voice sharpened. "If you did, you didn't make it easy for me! You and Jim said I was wrecking his career, keeping him from his work! A lot you cared whether you hurt me!"

"I'm damn sorry now," confessed Tom. "But you ought to take it out on us, not on him."

"Do I understand, now that you want my help, you'd like to see him marry me?"

"Anything would be better than Gladys," said Tom, with mournful frankness.

Mimi Grows Angry.

Mimi went as angry as her red hair would warrant. "You tell Jim to mend his own mistakes! He made Alec dance with her! He brought that hard-boiled racketeer along so she could take him away from me!"

"All right, all right!" groaned Tom, moving toward the door. "Don't shout."

When Gladys drove up at 5:30 Mimi was once more serene. "What a beautiful car! You look awfully well in it."

"I got stalled in the traffic. Am I late?"

"Just on time."

"Well, how about a spin? I want to stop at my house a second. Do you mind?"

Along Amsterdam there was little talk, Gladys being uncertain as to road rules and a bit arbitrary with the gears. As she had said, they were not silent.

At 188th she turned to the right and came to a pause between two no-parking signs.

"Just a minute."

"You're in front of a hydrant," protested Mimi.

"Just a second."

"Leave your license, in case the police arrest me!"

Plans on Foot to Honor Memory of Great Nurse

AMERICA must have a part in preparing a memorial to the "Lady with the Lamp," women leaders of the American Red Cross are determined.

Mrs. Henry Davison, Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper and Mrs. August Belmont, who are here attending the annual National convention of the American Red Cross, will have a leading part in a meeting in New York on April 18, when a fund for the Florence Nightingale International Foundation will be launched.

Mrs. Draper, who is chairman of the committee promoting the foundation, told yesterday of plans for collecting the contribution of the American Red Cross to the fund.

"Florence Nightingale was the heroine of her century," she said. "Every hero worshiper will want to honor her."

Nursing Courses.

According to plans formulated by the committee the memorial will provide courses in nursing, thus being a continuation of the work begun and developed by Miss Nightingale.

"The form of this memorial makes an appeal to many types of people," asserted Miss Draper. "To those with a broad international outlook, what could be more satisfying than a foundation which brings together in a humantarian cause, intelligent young women of all nationalities, who, after a year of comradeship in education, return to their respective countries with a sympathetic understanding of each other which they could have acquired in no other way? These friendly bonds will bind nations together."

Miss Draper further pointed out the world can not afford to lose the work of this memorial.

In 1860 Florence Nightingale chose St. Thomas' Hospital, in London, as the training center for a school of nurses, using the Nightingale fund granted her by the British government in tribute for her far-reaching service in helping

MRS. A. BELMONT promotes memorial to Angel of Crimea.

British soldiers at Balaclava during the Crimean War. A year later, when the Civil War broke out, she sent copies of her reports and recommendations to the United States Government, expressing hope that what she had learned in reorganizating the British medical service might be of assistance in caring for our sick and wounded.

This was her first contact with this country, but 10 years later when the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital in New York was considering the founding of a School for Nursing, the board sent a representative to London to confer with her. Her recommendations were faithfully followed when the first training school for nurses in a general hospital in this country was established in Bellevue Hospital in 1873.

72 Years Later.

In 1932, 72 years after the Nightingale School at St. Thomas' Hospital in London was started, the inaugural meeting of the Florence Nightingale International Memorial Committee of Great Britain was held. This was the first official step toward the establishment of an international memorial to the great nurse.

The courses initiated by the League of Red Cross Societies was considered an excellent form for the permanent memorial to take, and several months ago the central committee of the American Red Cross appointed a committee to collect the contribution of the Red Cross to the Foundation.

The campaign for the funds will be launched under the direction of Mrs. Draper and Mrs. Davison, widow of the man who founded the League of Red Cross Societies. Mrs. August Belmont, prominent for her work in philanthropic organizations, and Dr. George E. Vincent will be among those who will speak at the meeting on April 18.

Business-Like Children Leave Meet for Party

Interested in Work, Still Junior Red Cross Enjoys Dancing.

Poetical exhortations to remember the dying soldier, and practical explanations of the best methods of obtaining money to remove tonsils received equal applause when delegates from Junior Red Cross chapters from throughout the country met at their annual convention here yesterday.

Alert and interested, the 270 delegates conducted their meeting in a manner which showed they had a thorough knowledge of their work, and had been instructed in the rudiments of parliamentary law. They ranged from elementary to high school pupils.

When the preliminary business of electing presiding officers had been concluded, Sam B. Montgomery, of Clarksburg, W. Va., took charge of the meeting.

The voting had been interrupted at intervals by members who rose saying reproachfully, "Mr. Chairman, you forgot Iowa," or "Mr. Chairman, Delaware has some delegates who would like to vote." These oversights were apologized for and the votes recorded.

Attentive Delegates.

Discussion was conducted in panel groups in which the delegates discussed such matters as "How can the Junior Red Cross help depression sufferers?" Secretaries of the chapters listened attentively and took notes to carry home. The very young delegates wisely looked on.

Every delegate stressed the fact that giving by members of the Junior Red Cross was not charity but sharing. The first speaker, who due to the fact he failed to give his name and chapter remained anonymous, maintained children have a great responsibility in social service work. He urged his associates to abolish class distinction.

Miss Edith Simons, of Harrisburg, Pa., told of the results obtained by sending out a questionnaire to the institutions the Junior Red Cross wished to aid.

Veterans Want What They Want.

"Most of the institutions were modest in their requests," she said. "But the inmates of the Veterans Hospital were exact in their requirements; they specified the nut cups must be one inch in diameter and must be sent at a special time."

Miss Marian Craft, of New Orleans, La., told of the work done by the Junior Red Cross in aiding crippled children and the poor.

The dignified order of the meeting was disrupted when a proposal was made that there be a dance before the close of the convention. Immediately the Red Cross workers became a group of excited youngsters. Motions flowed in so fast, a young man—evidently an authority on parliamentary law—kept hopping to his feet to remind the chairman there could be only one motion at a time before the house. The chairman in distraction finally asked:

"What motion is before the house?" After some discussion, the matter was decided, and the convention voted unanimously to have the dance tonight.

Keeping Posted

An Artist Is Honored.

A YOUNG Washington artist, Prentiss Taylor, who has been spending much of his time in New York during the last few years, recently was given special honor in Charleston, S. C., by being one of the five artists invited to hang pictures in the exhibition during the Azalea Festival held annually in Charleston just before Easter.

* * * *

Although the Azalea Festival was celebrated without the azaleas—those lovely blossoms like our own cherry blossoms, being considerably delayed with the unusually long siege of cold weather—reports have it that the festival generally and the art exhibition in particular, proved highly successful.

* * * *

Certainly the exhibition was successful for young Taylor as he sold two water colors for $100 each. They were both scenes of parts of Charleston, which more than one artist proclaims an especially paintable town.

Earlier, in February, Prentiss Taylor was among those in a larger exhibition also held in the Gibbs Memorial Gallery in the South Carolina city. He exhibited both water colors and lithographs and sold quite a number of the latter.

* * * *

This has been quite a good season for the young Washingtonian for, just before he took the boat for Charleston, he was one of 500 invited by the Mayor of New York to exhibit in what has been called "The Mayor's Show," which was held in Rockefeller Center. Young Taylor sold a couple of lithographs there, too.

Sweet Little Song.

THE ATTRACTIVE young American baritone, Bob Crawford, sang a program greatly enjoyed at the Arts Club last week. He is one of those people like Lawrence Tibbett who can sing the classics of musical literature beautifully, yet shows marked graciousness and care in singing the simpler songs when his audience requests them.

It was several seasons ago, when he gave a private recital at the home of Catherine Filene-Dodd-Shouse (only she wasn't Mrs. Shouse at the time) that Mr. Crawford impressed a listener especially with this quality.

* * * *

In the tall-ceilinged stretches of the delightful drawing room in the old Georgetown house, the barytone's voice had glistened with polished splendor in songs by Bach, Brahms and other masters.

Then—after many encores—at the tail end of the evening, someone asked him to sing a funny little old song called "That Sweet Little Woman of Mine." It tells how:

"She ain't very much of an angel, this sweet little woman of mine,
"But, with six little sinners, all wanting their dinners, &c."

* * * *

In the many verses of the song there was strong contrast between ladies of great prominence and rank and those who might be classed with—"this sweet little woman of mine."

Memory of this song slipped in between thoughts of Mrs. Shouse's newly published book about careers for women—all but that of housewifery—and enjoyment of Mr. Crawford's singing the other night.

Tourist Tales.

A PROMINENT Washington hostess was entertaining a guest new to the Capital during the last few days. Among other sightseeing trips they took the inevitable elevator ride up in the Washington Monument. Arrived at the top, the hostess was pointing out all the principal buildings that could be seen from that advantageous spot.

* * * *

"What is that building down there?" queried the guest.

"That's the Freer Gallery," the hostess said.

"What do they have there?"

"The world's finest collection of Whistlers."

"Oh!" the guest seemed much impressed. Then she added:

"Are they going to give a concert tonight?"

* * * *

Another Washington Monument story concerns a local hostess rather worn out and rattled with several relays of guests with whom she had been recently deluged.

We Do Our Bit.

MRS. SHERMAN FLINT, the charming sister of Col. Slocum, read the Sunday "Keeping Posted" to such good effect that she popped into a society editor's office Monday with some grand news about a collection of dolls which she herself gathered as souvenirs when visiting different cities abroad.

* * * *

Mrs. Flint's collection is a large one, having been garnered over a period of several years and several visits. Also there is wide choice in costume and nationality of these gay dolls.

The grand thing is that Mrs. Flint is donating the entire collection for the street fair the Newspaper Woman's Club is holding May 1 at the Press Club Auditorium.

The fund raised will be used in two ways—part of it to go to the milk fund for local children and part of it to provide fellowships for newspaper women when in need. The latter idea was inspired by a similar plan which has proved most effective for members of the men's Press Club.

ELIZABETH CHRISTMAN—a case in point—urges women to develop masculine ego, if they are to obtain economic footing equal with men. Her life story reads like an old fashioned Alger tale.

Holds Lack of Moral Courage Cause of Code Discriminations

Elizabeth Christman Maintains Employers Merely Put Same Evaluation on Woman's Worth That They Do on Themselves.

By Elizabeth Young.

WOMAN'S TRADITIONAL apologetic devaluation of her economic worth is chiefly responsible for the wage differentials by sex being written into NRA codes.

Napoleons of industry and finance, in insisting upon a lower minimum wage for women workers than for men, are simply putting the price on women that women put on themselves—according to Elizabeth Christman, secretary-treasurer of the National Woman's Trade Union League of America.

Women can not hope to commend the respect of male confreres and bosses, nor to find in their pay envelopes the coin their efforts has earned, until they rid themselves of their unfounded inferiority complex with regard to their professional ability, Miss Christman holds.

Moral Cowards?

"If a woman is sure of her qualifications; if she knows her work is as good as that of a man doing the same work—and it usually is—then she's a moral coward not to stand on her own feet and demand equal recognition," Miss Christmas declared, when interviewed at her desk in the Woman's Trade Union League headquarters in the Machinists' building.

"But because she is a comparative newcomer to the professional and industrial fields; perhaps because she's so glad to be there at all, she lacks the moral courage to evaluate her worth objectively.

"However, with 11,000,000 of women gainfully employed in this country—as shown by the 1930 census—it's time she took stock of herself and the significance of her numbers.

"Did you ever see a man with an inferiority complex about his worth?" she asked, her brown eyes twinkling.

"I haven't," she said. "I have never yet seen a man who hesitated to accept a promotion, an added responsibility, an increase in pay. I have never once heard a man say, 'I don't believe I can accept your offer. I don't believe I can do the job.'

They Hesitate to Move Up.

"Yet I have seen women hesitate to step up higher, even when invited. I have seen them turn aside from applying for a job for which they were really qualified, because they thought, 'It's a man's job, after all; and I'm a woman'; or because they held some mental reservation as to whether they might succeed.

"Women," she said, "are held back by the desire to do a job really well, if you know what I mean. They would rather not take a job at all than to take it and flunk. Did you ever see a man like that?"

Miss Christman has been working with women since her twelfth year. A gracious, cultured, poised woman today, she began as a glove worker in a Chicago factory before she had entered her teens.

Her trade union activities on behalf of women workers began in 1902, when she took part in a strike in the factory in Chicago where she was employed over the hotly debated question of operators paying for power and needles. This was her first active union experience.

After being out ten days, the strike was won and Glove Workers' Local No. 1 was organized, with Miss Christman a charter member. She was made shop chairman by her local, and afterward was on the local executive board, filling successively the office of treasurer and president.

Held Many Offices.

In 1912, Miss Christman became secretary-treasurer of the International Glove Workers' Union, which office she held until 1931. During the World War she was appointed chief of women field representatives for the National Labor War Board, whose work it was to advise and assist women workers in presenting their grievances to the board.

In 1921, she was appointed by President Harding as a member of his unemployment conference. In 1930, she accepted the office of one of four councilors for the United States on the Council of International Relations Association. In 1931, President Hoover appointed her a member of the National Emergency Red Cross committee. The same year, he made her a member of his advisory committee on unemployment relief organization. She is chairman of the committee on unemployment of the Woman's Trade Union League.

Yet, woman-like, a few years ago she apologetically declined a twice-repeated invitation to be listed in "Who's Who." She felt she wasn't sufficiently important.

Beauty Parlors Crashed by Men, Says Beautician

Actors and Business Men Reported as Best Customers.

New Orleans, April 10 (AP).—You'll have a hard time proving it, but the men folks of America are going in for "beauty culture" more and more as time goes by.

Mere manicures and massages and shampoos no longer assuage man's vanity—it takes a gentle hair tint, a permanent wave and a slight eyebrow arch to really complete the job.

At least that's the contention—and it is argumentative—of Mrs. Anna B. Harris, of New Orleans, convention chairman of the fifteenth annual session of the American Cosmeticians Association, meeting here.

"Men," she declared, "are going in for beauty culture more and more every day."

She backed up her statement with reports she said were gathered from all parts of the country showing increased male patronage in beauty parlors.

"Bue, understand," Mrs. Harris amplified her remarks, "they're rather secretive about it and nearly all of them insist on private appointments. You'd be surprised at the number of regular men customers we have."

Actors and male employes of beauty shops lead the beauty parade, but business men are pressing close behind them, Mrs. Harris said her reports showed.

"And college men, if they can afford it, are good customers, too," she added. It is mostly the "non-professional" group that provide the "back door patronage.

"And the better looking any of them are, the better customers they are," said Mrs. Harris.

And don't think that men don't hold up the cosmetic trade.

"They buy plenty of powder, creams, hair tonics, astringents and all sorts of beauty aids—but they don't go in very much for lipstick and rouge yet," Mrs. Harris concluded, generously.

Do Not Smile.

By Katherine Smith.

Yesterday you let me love you,
You are strange today;
So I smile; and, understanding,
Go my way.
I am sure I can forget you
In a little while;
So, if we should meet tomorrow,
Do not smile.

American Youth Dry, Leader Declares

Mrs. Newby Says They're Disgusted by Elders' Drunkenness.

AMERICAN youth, disgusted at the drunken condition of its elders, will fight in the front ranks of the army that is battling for the return of prohibition.

So declared Mrs. Neal Dow Newby, of New Jersey, prohibition worker and Y. W. C. A. official, in a rousing speech before the delegates to the final convention of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement at the Dodge Hotel yesterday. Mrs. Newby read letters from youthful idealists who pledged their support to work for the return of prohibition.

"In repealing the eighteenth amendment we sacrificed a great ideal," Mrs. Newby declared. "America, which won the respect and admiration of other nations because of her stand against alcohol, has lost that respect. The grit in American character has been transferred to their spinach.

"Prohibition Will Return."

"But prohibition will return; the youth of America will fight for it. They still have grit and idealism."

Attacking the new deal of repeal as a "raw deal for the children of America," Mrs. Haines Lippincott, of New Jersey, painted vivid pictures of the horrors resulting from repeal.

"There is little point in passing a pure food and drug act, and legalizing a poison commodity," she said.

"Our campaign is not going to be educational," she continued. "We might as well try to sweep back the ocean with a broom as to try to bring about the return of prohibition through education. No, we are going to the polls. The Constitution puts every woman into political life. We must use our vote to clean up the corruption in political life."

Canon William Chase, of the International Reform Bureau, in an address, declared repeal was illegal due to the manner in which the conventions were held.

Pleading for the establishment of a commonwealth party, to be a party of the middle class, Dr. Milton Conover, professor of social science at Yale University, attacked the present Administration as "an alphabet Government that has demonstrated political problems are handled through formulas of 1 per cent legislation and 99 per cent administration."

New Party Needed.

"The disintegration of the old parties demands the formation of a new one," he concluded.

William H. Anderson, of the American Christian Alliance, told of the need for two amendments, one preventing alien representation in Congress, the other forbidding all traffic in liquor.

Mrs. F. I. Johnson, of Ohio and New York, who was named president of the New Woman's National Committee for Political Action, charged that a "political plot" designed to bring "chaos" in the United States, was being planned by conspirators in the United States and Europe.

"Our problem is the more difficult because it comprehends not only the intrigue of certain groups in the United States, but also deep-laid plans of an aggressive group in Europe. The two are working together."

Mrs. Johnson added she intended to make the basis on which the new group will work broader than the prohibition question.

"We must save our Constitution," she said. "One great protective law has already been removed illegally. Our second obligation is to the rising generation; we can save the country through honest, fearless representatives, loyal to their oath of office."

Soprano to Sing Concert Before Democratic Club

When Sonia Troyano, soprano, appears in concert at the Woman's National Democratic Club, Sunday afternoon, she will wear native costumes in keeping with the Spanish peasant songs she will sing.

Miss Troyano will be assisted by Malton Boyce at the piano.

The list of patronesses includes a number of leading Washington women. Mrs. Edward Keating is in charge of arrangements and she will be assisted by a special concert committee under the chairmanship of Miss Helen Neville.

Women for First Time Speak At World Affairs Institute Meet

New York, April 10 (Spl.).—Women's increasing prominence in world affairs was emphasized at the third annual meeting here today of the World Affairs Institute.

Two women, Signora Margherita Sarfatti, and Dr. Vera Micheles Dean, were among the five speakers who presented surveys of political and economic conditions in the five European countries holding the key to the solution of international problems. Signora Sarfatti spoke on Italy and Dr. Dean on Russia.

This is the first year women have appeared in such a capacity on the program of the institute, which is sponsored by the American Woman's Association and six cooperating women's organizations. The program committee in seeking the best equipped speakers on European countries in previous years had chosen men. This year it was found Italy and Russia could be best presented by women.

Signora Sarfatti recently arrived in this country to study American political and economic conditions. She will go to Washington the last of the week. She is widely known in Italy as a Fascist editor and poet, and is a biographer of Mussolini as well as one of his chief advisers.

Dr. Dean has been a member of the research staff of the Foreign Policy Association since 1928, specializing in Russian and Italian affairs. She is familiar with both the old Russia and the new. She was born in Russia and lived there many years. She was educated in American colleges. Last year under a grant from the Harvard-Radcliffe Bureau of International Research she returned to Russia to study political and economic conditions.

Soviet Women Expert Cyclists

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Girl racing cyclists in Russia are cutting a new trail in women's sports. They not only burn up the tracks with success, but adjust their own machines when they take a spill.

Russian women are training for rigorous sports, and are encouraged by the Soviet government to compete with men. This policy is intended to prepare women "for work and defense," as the highest sports award phrases it.

Preparation for defense is literal. Women are admitted into the army, in many branches of the service, with no restrictions. They are welcomed especially in the aviation corps, in which many of them have risen to the rank of officers, one even to that of major.

Intensive sports, from cycle races to crew, prepare them for the demands of army training. It looks as though Russia is bringing up the present generation of women athletes with an eye to amazons of the future.

John R. Palmer Dies, Executive Of Store Here

Stricken by Heart Disease at Home; Funeral to Be Tomorrow.

John Robert Palmer, 57, general superintendent of the Palais Royal department store, died suddenly of heart disease early yesterday at his home, 517 Crittenden street northwest.

Born in Fredericksburg, Va., Mr. Palmer was educated in the public schools. He entered the employ of the Palais Royal 41 years ago as a cash boy. He worked his way up through the positions of buyer, superintendent of buyers and delivery superintendent and became general superintendent in 1910.

Apparently in the best of health, Mr. Palmer went to his office as usual Monday and returned home in the evening. Members of his family were awakened around midnight to find him stricken. The Fire Rescue Squad was summoned in an effort to revive him.

Mr. Palmer is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sophia Palmer, and a daughter, Mrs. Doris Scott.

Funeral services will be held from the residence tomorrow at 8:30 a. m., followed by requiem mass at St. Gabriel's Church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

St. Marys Road Repairs Progress

Work Will Be Complete in Two Weeks.

Leonardtown, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Repairs to St. Marys County roads will be completed in two weeks, it was announced here today. Cost of the work will not exceed $7,000.

At St. Marys City a 10-foot concrete bridge is nearing completion where the road borders St. Johns Creek. A 1-mile detour is now made at this point, and tercentenary officials have decided to improve the detour and use it to relieve traffic congestions at the June celebrations.

Tercentenary work in transforming historic old Three Notch trail into a State highway also is progressing on a 3-mile stretch between Hermansville and Ridge. This new connection will provide a shorter route from Harpers Corner to Point Lookout.

Members of the freshman class of the college will participate in the contest, which is presented annually. Gold and silver medals will be awarded the winners. Judges have not been named, but will consist partly of faculty members, county educators and civic leaders.

The fifteenth annual junior class oratorical contest for high school students was held at the college last week. First prize was won by Gertrude Belle Jackson, Bolivar, W. Va. Second prize went to Miss Mary Virginia Walker, Charles Town, W. Va. Other contestants were Dorothy Dyer, Doris Lee, Helen Lee, James Willis and Elizabeth Willis.

$7,000,000 Belgian Estate Is Shared By Virginia Family

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—The family of Leon Schaffer, of this city, is to share in a $7,000,000 estate in Belgium, according to documents received from Belgian officials by John Hiersoux, of Charleston, a relative.

Notice is given that proof of the identity of the Schaffers and 30 other members of the family in the United States is desired.

The documents state that the inheritance dates back to the Battle of Waterloo, when a German soldier married a Belgian girl and was disowned by his father. The Schaffer family later accumulated considerable wealth in the glass industry in Belgium. The last of the line died in 1930 and the fortune, according to the documents, must now revert to the other branch of the family, most of whom live in the United States.

Holy Land Organ Recital Presented

Charles Town, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—"Through Palestine," an organ recital based on legends of the Holy Land, was given last night by R. Dean Shure at the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The Rev. J. W. Rosenberger described Holy Land settings as Shure played musical interpretations.

Mr. Shure's program was given at Easter, 1933, at the dedication of the new International Young Men's Christian Association in Jerusalem. He will give the service there again in August.

Ranch Caretaker Sues for Sale Fee

$12,000 Claimant Says Owner Changed Mind.

Norfolk, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Mrs. Nellie Field Burwell, half-owner of the Assateague Ranch on Chincoteague Island, was today made defendant in a suit for $12,000 instituted by C. H. Oliphant, of New Jersey.

Oliphant, who describes the ranch as a 12,000-acre tract devoted to the raising of wild ponies, alleges that Mrs. Burwell engaged him two years ago to put the ranch in good condition for sale, promising him $10,000, to be paid when the ranch would be sold.

Mrs. Burwell was offered $300,000 for the ranch by F. U. Rosebury, of Baltimore, Oliphant claims, charging that he carried out his part of the agreement, but that Mrs. Burwell changed her mind about selling it, and failed to pay him.

Harvard Clubs to Meet May 12 At Hot Springs, Hear Roosevelt

Richmond, April 10 (AP).—The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs, of which President Roosevelt is a member, will be held this year at Hot Springs, Va., May 12 and 13, it has been announced here.

More than 200 Harvard men are expected for what will be the first meeting of the clubs ever held in this section of the country.

Special transportation arrangements have been made and special entertainment and sports events will be provided for the visiting Harvard graduates.

A high point in the two-day program will be an address by the President.

He will speak to the meeting over a telephone-amplifier hook-up from Washington. It is the first time that Mr. Roosevelt has so addressed any organization since he became President. President James B. Conant, of Harvard, will attend and address the club members.

Activities will begin at 10 a. m. May 12 and end with an all-day outing the following day, featuring a Virginia barbecue.

Sewage Plant In Huge D. C. Works Plan

New Way of Financing Additional Projects Told to Ickes.

Secretary Is Favorable Provided Share of Cost Is Met.

Chances for additional District Public Works projects, including a sewage disposal plant and a tuberculosis hospital, were revived strongly yesterday in a conference between the Commissioners and Secretary Ickes, the Public Works administrator, at which a new method of financing was proposed.

The Commissioners told Secretary Ickes they were willing to seek legislation to liberalize the Capper-Cramton act to provide the District with money to pay its part of a program.

The Capper-Cramton act, passed several years ago, advanced $16,000,000 to the District from the Federal Treasury for acquisition of parks, laying out bridle paths and similar activities. The money was to be paid back at the rate of $1,000,000 a year.

$12,000,000 Balance.

The Commissioners found that only $3,500,000 of the fund has been used, leaving an available balance of more than $12,000,000. If legislation can be obtained from Congress permitting use of this fund for a public works program, the Commissioners feel that this sum could be put forward as the 70 per cent required by the PWA as a locality's share of a program.

Under such a plan, it would be possible for the Public Works Administration to supply 30 per cent additional, or slightly more than $5,000,000, which would make in the neighborhood of $19,000,000 or $20,000,000 available for a complete program.

Secretary Ickes made it plain that he favors further public works here, but on a basis comparable to other cities. Meeting the Secretary on his own ground, the Commissioners said they were willing to work out a part-payment plan. They made known that they have several possible projects under consideration, including a sewage disposal plant, a tuberculosis hospital, a $3,000,000 school program, a new wall at Lorton Reformatory and possibly new buildings for the Zoo and Gallinger Hospital.

Favors Safe Waters.

They did not discuss this program in full with Secretary Ickes, but the latter said the recent four-point program submitted by the District, calling for a unit of proposed Municipal Center, Zoo buildings, a sewage disposal plant and tuberculosis hospital, contained some "good" projects. He expressed particular praise for the sewage disposal plant idea, saying that he would like to make "the waters around here safe to fish in, so that you could fall out of your boat without danger of typhoid fever."

"I think a sewer program would be excellent. I have a strong 'yen' for sewer programs anyway, and I'd like to see that go through for the District. The tuberculosis hospital also seems like a good idea," he declared.

The Secretary added that it is not a question of merit that has held up further District projects, but one of financing.

"If the District can come in on the basis of other cities," he said, "I'm sure we can work out a satisfactory program."

Opening the conference, Commissioner Hazen told of the interest of the Commissioners in the sewage disposal plant idea and the tuberculosis hospital proposal.

Ickes declared that he recognized the interests and the needs of the District, but referred the Commissioners to a list of 18 or more Federal PWA projects being carried out here, in which the District was presented with more than $3,000,000 for sewers. Other Federal work here, he reminded them, provided local employment and benefit.

"This program is far ahead of any other community in the country," the Secretary declared. "The District has been well taken care of."

It was agreed at the conference that the Commissioners would seek legislation to use the Capper-Cramton money as soon as possible. Although the recent four-point program of the District was submitted for consideration if additional money is appropriated for public works, should the Commissioners' plan work out, the program probably can be started sooner. It is understood that enough money is accumulating in the PWA treasury from canceled allotments to provide part of the Works Administration's 30 per cent for a local program.

Not Worried

Mrs. Wirt Quiet While Husband Testifies.

Mrs. William A. Wirt isn't "the least bit worried" over the House investigation of her husband's charges, "because all Will has to do is tell the truth and present the evidence he has."

Mrs. Wirt, a youngish woman, who wore a brown spring suit and yellow hat, sat quietly yesterday in the jammed and confused committee room while he testified, with many interruptions, about his "red plot" charges.

Most of the time she was a picture of composure, although once, when the committee stopped part of Dr. Wirt's testimony, she started to bite her fingernails.

"But I really wasn't worried," she said afterwards. "I just did it unconsciously."

Ware-Potter Recital Tonight Ends Series

Helen Ware and Louis Potter will be heard this evening in the third and last of their series of recitals of violin and piano sonatas. The program, at 8:30 o'clock in Barker Hall, will contain the Mozart Sonata No. 3 in D major, the Franck Sonata, and the Bach Sonata, No. 1, in D minor for violin alone.

The two previous recitals have been well attended.

Dealers' Reports Swamp District Liquor Board

Workers at the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board were swamped yesterday as wholesale and retail liquor dealers filed reports of purchases and sales as required by the District liquor law. All reports were to have been in the hands of the board or in the mail by midnight last night.

The board will start compiling these records today and will promptly issue citations to all dealers who have not reported to show cause why their licenses should not be revoked or suspended.

Court Asked to Void Transfer of Securities

Trenton, N. J., April 10 (AP).—The New Jersey Court of Chancery was asked today to force the Cache La Poudre Co. to return to the Great Western Sugar Co. $9,000,000 of assets allegedly transferred in a so-called reorganization plan.

Victor Grieff, of Belle Harbor, N. Y., a stockholder in the sugar company, told the court the officers and directors of both concerns are the same and the transfer of $9,000,000 in Government securities in exchange for stock constituted a "fraud" upon the stockholders of the sugar firm.

Borglum Planning New Confederate Memorial

Atlanta, April 10 (AP).—Preliminary work toward a new beginning on the proposed memorial to the Confederacy on Stone Mountain will be started tomorrow under a grant of $50,000 in CWA funds.

Gutzon Borglum was expected to start actual carving on the memorial within a few weeks. Meanwhile CWA workers will clear the ground, erect new shops and build new scaffolds and elevators. Borglum is now working on new models.

Nature Trail Hikes Launched, 150 Participate on First Day

Rock Creek Park Trips Conducted by U. S. Flora Expert.

The flora and fauna of Rock Creek Park will be viewed by many visitors who will come the next three weeks especially to study the habits of salamanders, song birds and spruces.

Nature trail hikes, under auspices of the office of National Capital Parks, opened yesterday. Approximately 150 outdoor fans participated in the four trips led by Arthur Stupka, Federal naturalist, who has been borrowed from Acadia National Park until May 1.

Between 30 and 40 hikers made up each of the four groups, which left at one-hour intervals from Pierce Mill, starting at 1 p. m.. The short field trips, all confined to Rock Creek Park, will be continued daily for the next three weeks.

The parks office will inaugurate another outdoor feature, also planned for the benefit of cherry blossom visitors, tonight when the first campfire program is held in Rock Creek Park near Pierce Mill. Stupka will give illustrated talks on wild plant and animal life at the meetings, scheduled for Wednesday and Saturday nights at 8 o'clock.

Other features will be community singing, marshmallow or wiener roasts and story telling.

Adkins Acts In 2 Million Bank Action

Judge to Decide Riggs Liability to Firm Creditors.

Suit Involving Trust on Shoreham Building Rests on Deposits.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, District Supreme Court, yesterday began hearings designed to determine the legality of a claim that the Riggs National Bank is responsible to certain creditors of the Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co. for $2,341,645.80.

The creditors, noteholders on a trust on the Shoreham Building, allege that funds to pay their notes were deposited in a special account in the Riggs Bank, and were dissipated when the bank permitted the officers of the Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co. to transfer the account to a general account.

It is their contention that the bank should have retained the funds for the purposes designated in the special account, and they are asking that the District Supreme Court now charge the bank with liability for its failure to follow out the purposes of the special account.

After receiving the special account into a general account, the Swartzell firm failed to pay off persons who had purchased notes on the Shoreham Building, it was contended. The trust securing the notes was released and a subsequent "first trust" was made, the claim contended. Noteholders have never been repaid for the investment they made in the Shoreham Building on the released trust, the creditors asserted.

Edmund L. Jones represents the Riggs Bank, and Fred B. Rhodes, Marcus Borchardt, H. Prescott Gatley are acting for noteholders seeking to make the bank liable.

3 Rookie Pitchers Hold Phillies to 6 Hits as Mackmen Win, 8 to 6

A's Triumph On Homer By Hayes

Cascarella, Dietrich and Klein Turn Back Phils With 6 Hits.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10 (AP).—Behind the six-hit pitching of three rookies, Connie Mack's Athletics rallied on a booming ninth-inning homer today to down the National League Phillies, their rivals for the city championship, 8 to 6.

The victory pulled the A's into a 1-to1 tie in the scheduled five game city series.

Joe Cascarella, recently obtained from Jersey City; Bill Dietrich and Bob Kline each served three innings and held the Phils to a half-dozen safe blows. The A's touched "Jumbo Jim" Elliott, Phil Collins and a newcomer, Krider, for ten safeties.

The Phils scored in the first and on a three-run rally in the third pulled out in front, 4 to 1. With Jimmy Foxx contributing a double to bring in two tallies, the A's registered five runs in the fourth. The Phils came through with a pair of runs in the sixth to pull up even, and the tie lasted until Hayes' home rocketed over the fence in the ninth.

Critz Expects to Quit Hospital in Few Days

Memphis, Tenn., April 10 (AP).—Hughey Critz, second baseman for the New York Giants, who was left behind when the Giants departed from Memphis after Sunday's exhibition game, announced from his hospital today that he expects to rejoin the team within a few days.

An ankle, which became infected after a trainer removed tape that had bound his leg following a sprain, is coming along nicely. Critz said he expects to be playing in the Giant infield within ten days at most.

Writers' Poll Picks Giants To Repeat

Cubs Seen Offering Most Opposition; Braves' Stock Drops.

NEW YORK, April 10 (AP).—The world champion New York Giants, with an unparalleled record for defiance of opposition, criticism or prediction, have now had the issue put squarely in their own hands for the 1934 National League baseball season.

They stood out today as the choice of the major league experts to repeat their championship triumph, with the Chicago Cubs as their most serious menace in another typical National League pennant scramble.

The last time the Giants were picked to win they "showed up" the experts by finishing third. With one exception, the New York club has defied forecast ever since the Associated Press pennant poll was inaugurated in 1927. The late John J. McGraw's 1930 outfit was selected to run third and actually did so, to its own as well as everybody else's surprise.

Year.	Picked.	Finished.
1927	2	3
1928	4	2
1929	1	3
1930	3	3
1931	4	2
1932	2	6
1933	6	1
1934	1	?

The experts, seemingly fearful they are likely to be located one jump behind the parade again, have not given the world champions an overwhelming vote of confidence in this spring's pre-season consensus.

Cubs Picked by 34.

Of a total of 97 sports writers and editors contributing their opinions, 40 named the Giants to repeat and 34 picked the Chicago Cubs to land on top. Twenty-three other votes were scattered among the "Big Five," with the Cardinals receiving 13, the Pirates 9 and Braves 1.

The vote of the experts is striking testimony to their belief that Chuck Klein, the former Phillie flogger, will be more help to the Cubs than Red Lucas, former Cincinnati pitcher, will be to the Pirates. These were two of the winter's outstanding additions to the rosters of pennant-contending clubs. The Cubs are favored to give the Giants the stiffest argument despite the fact the Pirates finished second last year.

The lack of support for the Braves also is conspicuous. The Boston club was a hot contender up until September 1 last season and finished fourth, a few points above the Cardinals. Now the consensus is that Bill McKechnie's crew, minus Rabbit Maranville, will do no better than fifth for 1934.

Here's the box score on the National League poll, showing the number of selections for each club for each position:

Team.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8

three hits. Of course, they didn't do it, but they gave the Braves a scare, at that. They failed to get a hit off Brandt's southpaw slants in the first three frames and knicked Cantwell's offerings for but one safety in the next three. One man got as far as second and another as far as third over this stretch and it looked as though the natives would be whitewashed until the ninth, when they scored two runs and threatened to get more.

Frankhouse a Help.

At that, they had considerable help from Frankhouse, who found the plate swinging before his eyes almost as bad as it did against Linke in the seventh. The Braves' pitcher walked Cronin and Harris, the first two to face him and after Kuhel had hit into a force play, loaded the runways by also franking Travis.

Klumpp singled two home and Cronin sent Boken to the tee to hit for Linke. He worked the count to three and two, and with the base runners winging, missed the last one. Catcher Spohrer turned this into a double-play by getting the ball to third ahead of Travis and the game was over.

While the cash customers had nothing to rave about as regards the hitting of either team, despite the fact that three errors were charged, some brilliant defensive gems were turned in. Heinie Manush raced back toward the stands to snare Whitney's liner in his glove with a back-handed overhead grab for the best of the day, while both sets of infielders showed midseason form.

Klumpp, who drove in both of the Nats' runs, was the only member of either cast to get more than one safety. Seven different Braves were credited with the alien hits, Whitney's double in the seventh being the only extra-baser of the fracas.

16 Players Are Signed For Lonaconing Team

Lonaconing, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Little change is noted in the personnel of the Lonaconing Athletics of the Cumberland and George's Creek Baseball League, which has sixteen members of last year's squad under contract, according to David Stein, president of the organization.

Sweet Briar Lacrosse Team to Play British

Sweet Briar, Va., April 10 (AP).—Sweet Briar College, one of the few women's schools in this country to adopt lacrosse as a sport, will see how experts play the game, tomorrow and Thursday when the visiting British team stops here on its exhibition tour.

Lacrosse has been played here off and on since 1912, when it was introduced by an English athletic director and now ranks in popularity next to hockey and basket ball. There has been no opportunity, however, for intercollegiate play and the visit of the British team will give many of the players their first opportunity to see lacrosse played by experts.

Freshmen at Virginia Holding Golf Tourney

Charlottesville, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—A golf tournament for first-year men in the University of Virginia has been started over the Farmington Club course. The tournament is open to any man who is eligible for Cavalier freshmen athletic teams.

James G. Driver, athletic director, may arrange several matches for the freshman golfers to be played late this month or early in May. Whether this is done will depend largely upon the scores turned in during the tournament play.

Ross, McLarnin Are Signed For Title Fight on May 28

NEW YORK, April 10 (AP). Some of the loudest, if not the longest, arguments of the boxing season were stilled today as the exhausted managers of Barney Ross, lightweight champion, and Jimmy McLarnin, king of the welterweights, signed contracts for the first duel of titleholders in these divisions since Benny Leonard and Jack Britton fought in 1922.

Although the date is set for May 28, the distance 15 rounds, and the poundage officially 147, putting McLarnin's championship at stake, the site for the first is still lost in what arguments are left.

Choice of Two Sites.

The Free Milk Fund for Babies, promoting the show, has a choice between the Madison Square Garden Bowl on Long Island and the Yankee Stadium, the latter controlled by Tim Mara. The fund had been promised 10 per cent of the receipts of the Garden's big effort of the outdoor season, Primo Carnera's heavyweight title defense against Max Baer, and in return would hire the Garden Bowl for a rental of 15 per cent. But there seems some question now that the fund will share in the Garden's offering, so the promoters are shopping about for cheaper terms. Final decision will be made Saturday.

Terms were not revealed, but it was learned that McLarnin, who has fought only once in the past year, has agreed to weigh no more than 145 pounds, although the contracts call for a limit of 147. Ross is expected to scale about 140. There is considerable doubt among the experts that McLarnin, with a one-round conquest of Young Corbett for the welterweight title last May his only ring work in two years, can train down to 145 pounds and be at his best.

Insistence of Ross.

It was the personal insistence of Ross that finally brought about the match one of the "naturals" of recent years. His managers came here late last week to sign with the Garden for a third meeting with Tony Canzoneri, unwilling to risk their warrior against the Irish belter who has been the scourge of fighting Jews from Kid Kaplan, Sid Terris, Ruby Goldstein, Al Singer, Ray Miller, and Joe Glick to even the aged Benny Leonard. McLarnin knocked out all of them.

Unknown to his managers, Ross, now ranked second only to Benny Leonard among the great Jewish fighters, flew from Chicago Saturday after his managers left. On arrival he sent his brother to argue with his pilots and on his behalf to say "please."

Details were completed yesterday and sanction of the New York State Athletic Commission was received after Ross agreed to box Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, and McLarnin agreed to take on Bep Van Klavern, the bounding Hollander, within 90 days after May 28. No terms for the match were made public.

Centreville Is Added To Interstate League

Cumberland, Mr., April 10 (Spl.). The Centreville, Pa., Reds, champions of the Potomac Valley Baseball League last season, were admitted to membership in the Interstate League following a lengthy meeting of officials of the latter circuit at the American Legion Club rooms.

Addition of Centreville increased President Woodward Dyche's circuit from seven to eight teams and the league president was authorized to draft a schedule of 42 games, 21 of which are to be played in the first half from May 6 to July 8 and a like number in the second half from July 9 to September 9. Last year the league operated with six clubs, namely Corriganville, F. O. Eagles, Frostburg Demons, Keyser Colts, Cumberland B. & O. and Celanese A. A.

Morgantown, Philippi Join Baseball League

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Morgantown and Philippi have been added to the West Virginia State Baseball League, replacing Elkins and Salem, which surrendered their franchises in 1933.

Clarksburg, Fairmont, Pennsboro and Weston are the holdover members of the league and will have teams again this season. Thomas and West Union have applied for franchises, however, and a meeting of the league has been called for the evening of April 12 in this city to consider enlarging the circuit to eight clubs. Applications are expected to be filed at that time also by Marietta, Ohio, Sistersville, and St. Marys.

Games Are Arranged By Front Royal Nine

Front Royal, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Maurice Shirley, manager of the Front Royal All-Stars, has announced a partial schedule for the earlier part of the 1934 season. A number of new clubs is included for the season. These are Hagerstown Moose A. C., Ballston A. C., Boonesboro A. C., and George Washington University.

The following games are already scheduled:

Bowman, of Weston, To Join Johnstown

Clarksburg, W. V., April 10 (Spl.).—J. Rex Bowman, promising West Virginia baseball player of Weston, has just been signed by the Johnstown, Pa., club of the Middle Atlantic League. He will report this month at its spring training quarters. The Johnstown club is a Yankee farm.

Bowman was a star member of the 1932 Salem College Baseball Team and last season played second base with the Weston team, champion of the West Virginia State League.

N. C. State to Oppose Three Virginia Teams

Raleigh, N. C., April 10 (Spl.).—State College's baseball team takes to the road tomorrow afternoon for the second time in ten days.

A game Thursday afternoon with V. P. I. at Blacksburg will open the tour. Friday afternoon Washington and Lee will be met at Lexington, and Saturday the tour ends with a game with V. M. I. at Lexington.

Games During Season Will Start at 3:30; Klumpp to Sign.

ALEC McCOLL, the Nats' rookie veteran flinger, will not rejoin the Washington Club next Monday as expected, President Clark Griffith admitted last night. "I had a long talk with him in Chattanooga," said the Nat owner, "and, while his arm is responding to treatment, it is not yet right. I told him to stay there a couple of weeks and see what happens. If he says it is in such shape that he thinks he can help us, I'll bring him here; otherwise, I'll tell him to stay and work it back to shape. I may temporarily transfer him back to the Lookouts."

Casey Stengel and his former "Daffiness Boys," the Brooklyn Dodgers, open a three-game exhibition series against the Nats here this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Manager Joe Cronin plans to divide the home mound duty between Walter Stewart and Monte Weaver.

The Nats have decided upon a change of starting time for weekday games as soon as the regular season starts. The umpires will yell "play ball" at 3:30 o'clock, except on Saturdays and Sundays, when action will start at 3, the same hour set for starting the remaining exhibition games.

At a most important conference today, President Griffith and Elmer (Yohoo) Klumpp, the young catcher, will talk salary terms. They probably will not talk long, though, for Griffith will hold out a contract and Klumpp will grab it and hastily sign it for fear the Nat owner will change his mind.

A couple of presidents will get together at the White House Friday, when President of the United States Franklin D. Roosevelt will receive a formal invitation from Washington Club President Griffith to get his arm in shape to pitch out the first ball in the 1934 American League inaugural against Bucky Harris' revamped Boston Red Sox.

Outfielder Fred Schulte watched yesterday's game from the bench while nursing a bruised left hand as a result of being hit by one of Lon Warneke's fast ones in Sunday's game with the Cubs in Chicago. It is possible that he will be back in the line-up today.

Premiers to Practice.

The Premier Cab Association unlimited baseball team will practice today on the East Ellipse diamond at 4:30 p. m. The Cabbies are seeking out-of-town games for Sundays only. Call Manager Louis Evry at Lincoln 1329.

Eastern Routs Mt. St. Joe Nine, 19-3

Two Innings Net 16 Runs as Capital Team Runs Wild in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, April 10 (Spl.). The hard slugging Eastern High School's baseball team of Washington, invaded Irvington today and took the measure of Mount St. Joseph's nine in a one-sided affair, 19 to 3.

The visiting outfit went on hitting sprees in two innings—the second and fifth—when they garnered 16 of their 19 runs. Fitzgerald, Nolan and McCarthy figured prominently in the victory, with three hits each.

Besides receiving excellent support from the team, Sullivan and Carey, pitchers for the Capital aggregation, were in splendid form, especially Sullivan who limited the Josephites to two hits in five frames, while Carey yielded four in the remaining two sessions. The game only went seven innings.

Errors Help Eastern.

Although the host's twirlers were less effective in their offerings, 20 hits being made off their delivery, poor fielding by the locals contributed largely to the huge score. Ten miscues were chalked against the Josephites.

This is the second defeat sustained by St. Joe in successive days at the hands of a Washington aggregation. Yesterday, they lost to Central High in the Capital City, 9 to 7.

St. Joe will repay the visit when it journeys to Washington on May 10 for a return game with Eastern.

3 D. C. Golfers In First Flight

Fielder, Webb and Steward Qualify at Richmond.

Richmond, April 10 (Spl.).—Three Washington golfers qualified for the championship flight in the first annual invitation golf tournament at the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia today.

They were Capt. Kendall J. Fielder, of Aamy and Navy, who carded 36—39—75; Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club, who shot a 39—37—76, and Luther C. Steward, jr., of Congressional Country Club, runner-up in the local Hermitage invitation two years ago, who tallied 41—40—81.

Johnny Dawson, Chicago star, captured medal honors, with a 70, after playing the last 13 holes in six shots under par figures. Billy Howell, former Walker Cup ace, finished with three straight birdies for a 72, to nose ahead of his brother, Tommy, and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Virginia amateur champion, each of whom had 73.

The remaining players in the Capital contingent either withdrew or failed to turn in cards. They included Walter McCallum, W. M. Kochenderfer and Eugene Gott.

Daily Double Pays $2,171 at Tanforan

San Bruno, Calif., April 10 (AP).—The highest "daily double" ever paid at Tanforan track—$2,171.80—was won today by a man who declined to give his name, who had purchased the only ticket on two outsiders; Silk Covering, winner of the second race, and Star Royal, winner of the third.

The Eureka, feature race, was won by Vermont Rose, Pantages entry, which stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:13 2-5. Little Son was second and Melting Pot third. Vermont Rose set the pace and led all the way, winning by a length and a half.

Mutuels paid $6.20, $4 and $2.60 on the winner; $13.80 and $7.20 on Little Son, and $7.20 on Melting Pot.

Congressional Golfwomen Are Upset

Beaten by Indian Spring; Chevy Chase Assumes One-Point Lead.

CHEVY CHASE took the lead by a one-point margin in the second round of the District Women's Golf Association team matches yesterday at Kenwood by defeating Manor, 8½ to 3½, while Congressional's favored team, which made a clean sweep in points last week, bowed unexpectedly to Indian Spring, 6½ to 5½.

Chevy Chase's total for the two matches is 18½. Congressional is in second place with 17½.

Meanwhile, the defending champions, Columbia, cheered the return of their captain, Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, Mrs. Norman Frost and Mrs. J. A. Farr, members of last year's triumphant outfit, and swamped Kenwood, 1933 runners-up, 9½ to 2½, to move into third place with a total of 14½ points. Army and Navy won from Beaver Dam, 6½ to 5½, and Washington, which failed to tally a point last week, trimmed Woodmont, 7½ to 4½.

Shoot 84 Total.

Mrs. Haynes, who has been wintering in Florida, Georgia, Pinehurst, N. C., and other southern points, played the Kenwood course for the first time in months, and provided the scoring punch with a creditable 84, that was studded with expert shotmaking. The Middle Atlantic champion teamed with Mrs. H. R. Quinter to win 3 points from Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Kenwood champion, and Mrs. John Shorey. Longer off the tee and chipping and putting beautifully, Mrs. Haynes steadied down after starting off 7-6-5, to play the next nine holes in only two over par figures. She had nine pars out of 18 holes, having a brace of 42's.

Columbia's only loss in the matches yesterday came when Miss Sue Gantt and Mrs. F. C. Meier won 2½ points from Mrs. J. R. DeFarges and Mrs. William Morrison Smith.

Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, shot a 90 as she and Miss Louise Claytor won 2½ points from Mrs. J. V. Brownwell and Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor. Mrs. Frank R. Keefer and Mrs. Bishop Hill teamed to give Chevy Chase 3 points.

10-Pound Son Born To Mrs. Joe Savoldi

New York, April 10 (U.P.).—A ten-pound boy was born at Lutheran Hospital today to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Savoldi 2d. The child was named Joseph Savoldi 3d.

Tarheel Rally Wins Over Virginia

Carolinians Score Three in Eighth to Triumph by 3-to-1 Score.

Crouch Beats Rogers in Duel; Cavaliers Fill Bases in Eighth.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Blanked for seven innings, North Carolina's nine bunched three hits with a walk in the eighth inning to defeat Virginia here today, 3 to 1.

Orlin Rogers, Cavalier southpaw, who had compiled a total of 30 strike-outs in two games with Vermont and Maryland, was a puzzle to the Tarheels up to the eighth. Crouch drew a pass at the start of this frame and scored on Vick's double. Weathers followed with a triple to deep center and counted later himself on Tatum's drive to left.

The contest was a brilliant twirlers' battle and both teams fielded sharply. Fred Crouch on the mound for Carolina, was touched for six hits and fanned eight. The lone run by the Cavaliers came in the seventh. Brewer's long hit got away from Shapiro and he counted later on Poindexter's timely single to left field.

Cavaliers Fill Bases.

Virginia threw a scare into the Tarheel camp by filling the bases in its half of the eighth, but a spectacular running catch by Vick of Carter's short fly ended the rally.

The fielding feature was Carter's catch of a long foul by Weathers in the sixth inning.

Three Tied for First In Cumberland Golf

Cumberland, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Dr. Earl P. Heintz, Paul Blundon and H. Butler finished in a triple tie for first place in the self-handicap sweepstakes golf tournament by turning in net scores of 71 at the Cumberland Country Club. It was the first big golf event of the season staged over the local course and attracted 21 players.

Paul Blundon captured the "booby" prize for turning in the highest score for a single hole. He chalked up a 13 for the eleventh hole.

Virginia Tennis Team Routs William-Mary

Charlottesville, Va., April 10 (AP). Virginia's tennis team defeated William and Mary, 9 to 0, to win the third shut-out victory over a collegiate rival in as many matches this season. The Cavaliers had little difficulty in winning straight sets in every match. The visitors took only one doubles point.

Piety Captures Feature Race at Bowie for First C. V. Whitney Victory of Meet

Nose Verdict Is Lost by Precept

Late Rush Barely Fails at Finish; Spoilt Beauty Third.

By Walter Haight.

THE light blue and brown of the C. V. Whitney Stable, prominent at Bowie in other years, had to wait until the eighth day of the meeting to score its first victory. Piety, under expert handling by Jockey Albert Robertson, was the winner of The Pagebrook, yesterday's feature, in a furious stretch drive which found the Whitneyite lasting to win by a neck from the fast-closing Precept. Spoilt Beauty was third, some three lengths behind the fighting front pair.

Summerlike weather and a fair program lured a crowd of 9,000 to the nearby course and it was the fifth race before a favorite clicked for the betting public. Long shots dominated the first part of the program, with Wilrob, at $46.20, providing the peak.

In the feature six three-year-olds accepted the issue and Starter Milton wasted little time in getting the field away. Spoilt Beauty was first to show in front and staged a merry battle with Precept for the pace. Piety had dropped back on the trip up the back stretch.

Piety Moves Up.

Rounding the bend for the stretch, Roberston began his move with Piety. In the meanwhile, Precept ran the legs off Spoilt Beauty, as Piety came alongside of the leader. Stout, on Precept, went to the whip as did Robertson. Both boys were beating for all they were worth. Piety drew out to a slight lead at the quarter pole and maintained it to the end. Backers of the Whitney representative cashed $12.40 for each $2 wager.

The hunch betters started the day with a productive parlay with Rustic Joe taking the first and Rustic Cuba taking the second. The horses paid $13.20 and $36.80, respectively. The opening dash was dubbed the "Schnozzola Trophy" after Jimmy Durante, the film scream, who was present in person. The influence of his famous beak spread out on the track, the four horses behind the winner finishing noses apart. Ever True belied her name. She was installed the favorite but tailed off after leading to finish third behind Miss Firefly.

Rustic Cuba Finishes Fast.

Rustic Cuba's victory in the second was through the medium of a stretch rush at a time when it appeared that Time Enough had the 16-furlong sprint sewed in the bag. Robertson, who had the mount, stayed close to the pace and then moved up on the outside to win going away. Time Enough lasted to take the place from Modern Times.

Mr. Hyde, the third-race favorite, hopped from pocket to pocket throughout the running and then closed with a belated rush that found him a half length short of catching Wilrob, a 22-to-1 shot ridden by Earl Porter. Chips was third. Wilrob led from start to finish under a hustling ride. The son of Apprehension was making his first start of the year. Mr. Hyde was claimed out of the race for $2,500.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Anatole France, whose real name was Jacques Anatole Thibault, achieved the greatest literary fame in France since Voltaire. He ranks as one of the most outstanding men of letters in modern literature. He was born in 1844 and died eight years ago. His was one of the best minds in recent centuries, yet, strange as it seems, his brain was 20 per cent smaller than the average laborer's.

The weight of the average normal brain in a man is 49 ounces. Anatole France's brain weighed but 38 ounces, and was one of the smallest normal brains ever weighed. The size of the brain, it would seem, has little definite bearing on its owner's mentality—for Cuvier, famous French scientist, had a brain which weighed more than 65 ounces.

* * * *

Both the lightest and the heaviest known substances are elements. No gas produced in the laboratory is lighter than the hydrogen that is present in the atmosphere; no alloy of metals is heavier than pure osmium, which is itself a metallic element of the platinum family. A given volume of osmium weighs more than 250,000 times as much as the same volume of hydrogen at normal atmospheric pressure.

Hydrogen was first recognized as an element by Cavendish in 1766. It is present in all acids and alcohols, as well as in water. Osmium is found in platinum bearing sands of the Ural mountains and elsewhere. It was discovered in 1803 by Tennant, and is more than twice as precious as gold.

Dear Al: Bowie Race Track, April 10.

It looks as if the Southern Maryland Agriculture Association will escape the "red" at this meeting. Although the outlook was not bright between Monday and Saturday of last week, business has picked up and a fair break in the weather will put Bowie over the top. More than a half-million has been bet the last two days and the attendance hopped several thousand yesterday. Earl Porter holds a lead of one winner, 82 to 81, over Joe Jacobs in the battle for top riding honors this year. Each had one winner yesterday. There are 110 jockeys on the grounds.

It appears that the theory that small fields here were due to unrest among the horsemen, on account of the saliva test, were wrong. Now that the horses which wintered in the North are rounding into shape, Racing Secretary McLennan is having no trouble lining up fields and entries are being closed at the usual time. BILL.

First race—Luck In will be favored by this short route and will have the sturdy Johnny Gilbert in the saddle. Won a short race in Florida and trials point to tiptop shape. Sequoia appeared to be the best in that last outing although he missed taking the purse. Texas Tommy won all the way the other day and will be hard to keep out of the money.

Second race—Irene's Bob had all his speed in that previous effort and led to the wire. Gets the same weight today and looks as if he will repeat. Black Target is in excellent shape. Drew away to win last out. Gloritone is much better than rated. She ran a fair race first time out and is a possible surprise.

Third race—Sassafras turned in a neat effort in the Rowe Memorial Handicap, but was no match for the three top ones. Drops back in his own class today and I expect a winning performance. Sainted works well. Zulu Lad to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Angelic won by ten lengths here last week. Steps up a bit in this, but that opening race repeated will bring the long end of a purse once more. Forever Young and Little Dinah for the other awards.

Fifth race—Elmer Trueman is said to have Star Porter in excellent shape for his first test of the year today. Has beaten the good ones. The Pelican lost a close decision here and will be in the thick of the battle today. Character to down the others.

Sixth race—Fair Crest ran an encouraging race the other day. Seems to be on the up grade and appears to have more than an outside chance of getting home ahead of Bub McFarland and Just Fun.

Seventh race—Lawless Lady defeated Distribute at a short route and I believe they will finish in the same order at this mile and 70 yards. Lauretta Nash finally raced herself into condition in Florida and is dangerous.

Spring Grid Game Is Held at V. P. I.

Hard Tackling Features Scoreless Contest.

Blacksburg, Va., April 1 (Spl.).—Hard, sure tackling featured the first spring practice game of Virginia Tech's gridiron squad. If it is a true phophecy of what is to come, Tech foes next fall will find the touchdown trail a rocky one when they face the embattled Gobblers.

The game resulted in a scoreless deadlock, mainly because tacklers cut ball toters down so hard they fumbled. The Orange attack was clicking, but two sturdy Grays—Joe Russell and Hank Spruill—tackled viciously enough to halt every thrust short of the goal. Their teammates showed defensive play of a high order, too.

Almost a score of freshmen took part. Durward Stowe did some clever ball toting when he replaced Paul Kennedy, who looms as a new aerial threat in Tech's attack. Foots Dickerson showed promise as a bucker and George Sodaro as a place kicker.

Virginia's Nine To Take Trip This Week

To Meet Maryland Friday and Navy Saturday on 2-Day Jaunt.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Virginia's baseball team will take its first trip of the season this week. The Cavalier nine goes to play Maryland in College Park on Friday and the Navy in Annapolis on Saturday.

The game against the Old Liners was scheduled for next Monday as part of a trip the Cavaliers had planned to take up into Pennsylvania and New Jersey. But the Eastern teams listed wrote to James G. Driver, athletic director, saying they were feeling the pinch of poverty and asked that the games be called off. This has resulted in a shift in the date with the Old Liners.

Virginia and Maryland fought out a pitchers' battle here last week. Orlin Rogers, in the box for the Cavaliers, and Ralph Ruble, on the mound for the Terps, pitched scoreless ball through nine innings, fanning 11 men each.

In the tenth Maryland began to connect with Rogers at the same time that the Virginians started blowing up in the field. Bunched hits and errors resulted in the Old Liners scoring three runs before three men were put out.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUSTIC JOE (field), $13.20, $8.40, $4.10; MISS FIREFLY, $10.80, $4.70; EVER TRUE, $2.70.

RUSTIC JOE, a keen factor from the beginning came resolutely on the outside when straightened into the home stretch, shook off the early leaders and drew out smartly in the final drive. MISS FIREFLY secured racing room on the inside when reaching the home stretch and finished in determined fashion. EVER TRUE was hard ridden to stall off ON OUR WAY in the opening furlong and tired during the final drive under severe urging. SHADY PAST displayed high speed to reach the leaders. She showed a smart effort all the way. SYNOD closed willingly on the outside. QUERY was forced wide all the way. ON OUR WAY displayed nice speed early.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:10½. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's br. or blk. f. (4), by Rustic—Fair Cuba. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:15.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUSTIC CUBA, $36.80, $13.70, $9.40; TIME ENOUGH $6.90, $6.50; MODERN TIMES, $5.20.

RUSTIC CUBA, placed forwardly and going in good form, responded strongly when reaching the home stretch and, closing gamely, was up in the concluding strides. TIME ENOUGH raced EMMY FISH into early submission, drew out into an easy lead at the stretch turn, but stopped suddenly during the closing furlong. MODERN TIMES, slow to get going, secured racing room on the inside and was going gamely at the end. DIJONETTE broke sluggishly moved into a forward position midway of the turn and gained steadily approaching the finish. EMMY FISH had speed for the first five furlongs and weakened thereafter. MINT PARAGON went evenly. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Pruse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:39. Off at 3:40. Winner Bramcastle Farm's ch. g. (3), by Apprehension—Florence Kraig. Trained by R. Roberts. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:08.

BONNIE DHU	109	1	2	3^{h}	6^{4}	8	8	Malley	185.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILROB, $46.20, $10.80, $5.40; MR. HYDE, $2.90, $2.50; CHIPS $3.50.

WILROB, having the most speed, raced IMPROMPTU into defeat, opened up a winning lead when reaching the home stretch but weakened fast thereafter and had to be hard ridden to stall off MR HYDE. Latter, badly blocked leaving the back stretch, overcame interference and closed with a belated rush. He appeared much the best in the running. CHIPS entered contention rounding the turn, and was easily best of the others. IMPROMPTU stopped fast in the final five-sixteenths. PLATEAU broke slowly and was never a factor. IMMUNE showed early foot. The others were held safe.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Pagebrook. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:11½. Winner, C. V. Whitney's ch. f. (3), by Pennant—Blessings. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5 0:47 2-5, 1:13 4-5.

MURMURING	108½	2	6	5¼	6	6	6	Lowry	68.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PIETY, $12.40, $5.20 $3.50; PRECEPT, $4.00, $2.70; SPOILT BEAUTY, $2.60.

PIETY, kept within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, slipped up on the inside of the leaders to take command at the final furlong pole and, under severe urging, just lasted long enough. PRECEPT, a keen factor in the early stages, was forced wide by SPOILT BEAUTY when entering the home stretch, came strongly when straightened out and was catching the winner at every stride. SPOILT BEAUTY displayed nice speed until reaching the home stretch. She may have been short and should improve. CROUT AU POT, forced to race on the outside throughout, made up some ground after dropping out of contention. BLUE FOAM was done early. MURMURING was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:43. Winner, C. C. Smithson's ch. c. (4), by Chance Play—One Hour. Trained by owner. Value to winner $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42, 1:47 1-5.

FORAY	109	4	3	1^{h}	5^{2}	6	6	6	Robertson	47.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONE CHANCE, $6.20, $3.60, $2.40; UNCLE DONALD, $3.50 $2.50; FLAMING MAMIE, $2.70.

ONE CHANCE, restrained close to the early leaders, swung to the outside when approaching the home stretch and, closing stoutly, was up in the final few strides. UNCLE DONALD moved up fast when reaching the back stretch, followed FLAMING MAMIE closely and then continued strongly in the final issue under weak handling. FLAMING MAMIE, rated in front while saving ground fought it out with good courage when placed to a hard drive. PRINCE ABBOT was never able to better his position. SCIMITAR went wide for the entire trip. FORAY had speed going to the first turn and tired steadily after going five furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:10½. Off at 5:11½. Winner, B. B. Stable's b. c. (4), by Chatterton—Blue Eagle. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:42 3-5, 1:47 3-5.

JANE ELLEN	108	4	2	1^{h}	1^{h}	8	8	8	Coucci	13.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHAT EAGLE, $5.30, $3.50 $2.50; CATWALK, $12.70, $6.70; HIGH SOCKS, $4.10.

CHAT EAGLE, crowded back at the first turn, secured racing room on the inside when reaching the back stretch, came to the outside after entering a forward position and, finishing gamely, was up right at the end. CATWALK, prominent in the early stages disposed of the leaders with a rush and then fought it out courageously when challenged. HIGH SOCKS, allowed to drop far out of contention, worked his way up gradually in the last half mile, but could not threaten the first two. O'NEILL went wide most of the trip. SALISBURY was used up racing with JANE ELLEN and he tired in the last quarter mile. FAIR BILLY was done early. JANE ELLEN stopped badly after six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:41. Winner, J. H. Logan's b. f. (3) by Mint Briar—Hussy. Trained by A. C. Niehaus. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 3-5, 1:42 2-5, 1:49 1-5.

PEEDEEQUE	113	6	7	7	7	7	7	7	Leyland	16.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINT DE MIE $15.90, $7.40, $5.10; LOFTY LADY, $6.40, $4.60; CHEROKEE SAL, $5.50.

MINT DE MIE outran her field to the far turn was taken under slight restraint when LOFTY LADY assumed command, responded readily when urged and, moving into the lead at the stretch turn, drew out under pressure. LOFTY LADY took command without effort midway of the back stretch, but was unable to stay when challenged. CHEROKEE SAL improved her position on the outside, but could not threaten the first two. LITTLE CORPORAL saved ground all the way and failed to respond when shaken up. NOURRICE raced well. KILTAMOND stopped badly.

League to Meet.

New Market, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Following the recent decision of officials of the Augusta County Baseball League to refuse admission into the circuit of other than Augusta teams, President George Holtzman of the Shenandoah Valley League yesterday called a meeting of officials and fans for tomorrow night to perfect plans for the coming season.

Virginia Tech Host Today To V. M. I.

Cadet Trackmen to Invade Charlottesville for Meet Saturday.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Two baseball games and a track meet are on the card for V. M. I. varsity teams this week, and in addition the freshman track team will get into competition for the first time. Tomorrow the Cadet nine will meet Virginia Tech, at Blacksburg, in the first of the annual home and home series, and on Saturday V. M. I. will entertain the N. C. State Wolfpack on Alumni Field.

The Cadet trackmen, both varsity and freshman, will travel to Charlottesville Saturday to race Virginia's Cavaliers in a double-header meet.

Nine Broke Even.

Last week the Cadet ball players broke even, winning the opener from Vermont and losing to North Carolina. The track and field men lost by an unexpectedly one-sided score to a better balanced Duke squad.

Sophomore performers stood out on both diamond and track. Marlin Bair, of Etters, Pa., was the batting star against Vermont with two triples and a double. He will be back in the line-up this week after having doubled up as a discus thrower with the track team at Duke. Alex Neal, of Bon Air, Va., pitched in both games as a relief hurler and shows promise of developing into a regular starter.

Tayloe Won Two.

Henry Tayloe, sophomore sprinter from Middleburg, Va., matched Capt. Hill Wellford's accomplishment of capturing two races from the Duke Blue Devils. Both Tayloe and Wellford turned in good early season performances without being pressed. Tayloe was an easy winner in the dashes, and Wellford ran under wraps to annex the 440 and 880 yard runs.

Both Cadet varsities should show improvement this week. Coach Bill Raftery has been stressing defensive work, especially in the infield. Coach Son Read is giving extra work to veteran distance men and trying to bolster up weak spots in the field events and hurdles.

Romney Group Will Be Host To Presbytery

Winchester Meeting Opens Monday; Rev. McLean Speaks Tuesday.

Romney, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.). The spring meeting of Winchester Presbytery will open in the Romney Presbyterian Church Monday at 7:30 p. m.

Presbytery will be opened by the retiring moderator, the Rev. Dr. S. R. Diehl, of Martinsburg. Following the sermon the presbytery will elect officers. The Rev. J. Leo McLean, of Capon Bridge, will preach the Presbyterial sermon Tuesday morning.

The educational institutions supported by the Presbytery will be represented, and will report on their work. Dr. William Hudson, of Staunton, Va., and the Rev. P. W. Wilson, of Harrisonburg, Va., will present the work of the Massanuttan Conferences. Dr. Hudson is manager of the conferences.

The Rev. E. B. McGukin, pastor-elect of the Winchester (Va.) Presbyterian Church, will be examined and received. He will succeed the late Dr. F. T. McFaden.

Committee reports will include those of the home mission and stewardship groups.

The Romney Presbyterian Church is among the oldest in the eastern section of West Virginia, being among the original churches of Winchester Presbytery. It was organized in 1792.

4 Schools Gain Literary Finals

West Virginia Sectional Contest Is Held at Shepherdstown.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Shepherdstown, Martinsburg, Hedgesville and Bunker Hill High Schools will be represented at the State literary contest in Morgantown April 21 as a result of the sectional contest held last night at Shepherd College here.

Betty White, of Shepherdstown, won the oral interpretation of poetry event; Winston McKay, of Bunker Hill, the debate, and Helen Riner, of Hedgesville, the oration contest.

There was only one entry in the extemporaneous speech, Boyd Siler, of Martinsburg, and he will represent the Panhandle in that contest at Morgantown.

The judges were J. W. Staymen, president of Potomac State School, Keyser; Lee Bushong, attorney, of Charles Town, and B. C. Rouzer, of the Potomac State School staff.

Eckenrode Rites Set for Tomorrow

Former Carroll County Orphans Judge.

Westminster, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Funeral services for John E. Eckenrode, 86, former judge of the Orphans' Court of Carroll County and for more than 40 years engaged in business here, will be held Thursday with requiem high mass in St. John's Catholic Church at 10 a. m. The Rev. Martin P. J. Egan will officiate.

Mr. Eckenrode, who died at his home here Monday from a heart ailment, is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. John Case, Westminster, and Mrs. William E. Staup, Philadelphia; three sons, Charles, George and Vernon, of Westminster; one sister, Mrs. John Stephey, of Baltimore, and one brother, Frank Eckenrode, Reese.

In addition to being the oldest honorary member of the Westminster Volunteer Fire Department, Mr. Eckenrode was also a member of Westminster Council, No. 1393, Knights of Columbus, and of the Holy Name Society. Mr. and Mrs. Eckenrode celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last November.

Cumberland School Annex Opens April 25

Cumberland, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Work on the 20-room annex to the Alleghany High School is nearing completion, and the new unit will be open April 25. The addition, of brick and steel, conforms with architecture of the main building.

The 20 rooms include home economics rooms, a sound-proof music room, art and lecture rooms, a girls' gymnasium and manual training shop.

North Fork Autoist Held in Car Crash

Leesburg, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Wilmer Cummings, 25, of North Fork, was arrested yesterday on a charge of reckless driving following an investigation by Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher into an accident April 1, when it is alleged Cummings' car crashed into another driven by Howard E. Cole, Loudoun County treasurer.

Cole's wife and mother sustained severe injuries.

Cummings is held on a $500 bond to appear April 30 before Judge W. A. Metzger, in Leesburg.

Fiftieth Anniversary Observed.

Cumberland, Md., April 10 (Spl.). Mr. and Mrs. John Morris celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a family dinner, attended by four generations of the family.

J. M. Boswell Buried.

Moorefield, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for J. Mitchell Boswell, who died at Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser, from lockjaw. He stepped on a rusty nail ten days ago.

-:- The Federal Diary -:-

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

(Reprinted from yesterday's first edition.)

THIS is California Day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. If we'd set out to cover fully the Golden State's history and the beauties and wealth of that vast empire of today, we'd need a special section.

BAKER.

That extra space is not available, because each State is to be treated equally in the Diary's Parade. However, California personalities in Washington have not been neglected.

Little Delaware has forged in ahead of Nebraska and Wisconsin in the Parade and will appear Friday.

Tribute to California.

An Empire great and grandly flung,
Of her the entire world has sung;
About her climate, scenery, trees;
Her moving picture industries;
Her silver, copper, borax, gold,
Sodium and oil untold.
Her leadership in outdoor sports;
Her thriving factories and ports;
Fine irrigated ranches, farms;
Her citrus fruits and floral charms;
Dairies, orchards, vineyards, beets,
Poultry, truck crops, barley, wheats,
No other State can quite compare
In products varied, useful, rare
With this great Empire on the coast
Whose leadership's no idle boast.
And well may native sons hold dear
Fair California—land of cheer.

CALIFORNIA was discovered by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, a Portuguese in the employ of Spain, in 1542, while searching for the elusive "Arctic Passage." Other voyages followed that of Cabrillo, but it was not until two centuries later that Spain realized the importance of Alta California and established the first settlement at San Diego in 1769. This was done to thwart the advances of the Russians who were settling Alaska.

From 1769 to 1823 there was established a chain of missions that was the most successful project in North America ever undertaken for the uplift of the Indians. Each was the center of a large population of contented native farmers, weavers and even musicians.

Immediately after acquisition by the United States in 1848, the biggest gold rush on the continent set in. California's sunny vales and tree-covered mountains populated by a high type of Spanish were overrun by Anglo-Saxon gold seekers.

California is the thirty-first State in order of admission; the second in size (158,297 square miles), and sixth in population (5,677,251 in 1930).

The State motto is Eureka—"I Have Found It," and the State flower is the golden poppy.

Sketch of Its Industries.

Agriculture is enormously developed in California. Of the 101,000,000 acres, there are 30,442,581 acres under cultivation. More than $350,000,000 is invested in grape growing alone, the State producing more than 90 per cent of the grapes in America. The wheat harvest averages more than 10,000,000 bushels annually.

Citrus fruits yield revenues yearly exceeding $100,000,000, with oranges constituting more than half of that figure.

Gold valued at $12,000,000 is mined each year. Silver, copper and lead are mined in quantities that net millions of dollars. Petroleum and its byproducts are the biggest industry, in 1930 reaching more than a billion dollars in value.

Leader in Aeronautics.

Another glory for the Golden State is her aeronautical achievements, due partly to her wonderful climate, which is ideal for flying throughout the year. California leads the Nation in the number of licensed and unlicensed aircraft. Among the licensed women pilots of America, California has 25 per cent of the total.

The first license granted by the Aeronautics Branch, Commerce, in 1927, was issued by a California woman, Mrs. Jessie Eliot Perez, of San Francisco. Mrs. Perez also issued to Col. Lindbergh the experimental license used in his solo flight from New York to Paris.

Mrs. Perez now conducts the aircraft survey and from the information obtained compiles the Weekly Notice to Airmen, which includes all last-minute news of airport conditions, radio range beacons and other aids to aerial navigation.

Interesting Californians Here.

Anda Magnus, San Francisco, is with the Hydrograhpic Office, Navy Department.

Miss Clara Ione Carter, of San Francisco, is with the Pension Service at Fifth and F streets.

Mrs. Lucille Clarinval, San Francisco, may be found at the Federal Warehouse.

Nada Truscott Frank, Los Angeles, is with the Internal Revenue.

Maj. Philip R. Faymonville, a native son of San Francisco, is now with the Army War College.

Miss Helen Frasher, former secretary to Representative Phil D. Swing, hails from Los Angeles, and is now with the NRA, Commerce Building.

Mrs. Winifred Grant, Salinas, is with Veterans' Administration.

Irving Goodfellow, Santa Monica, is in the design division, Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Mrs. Kathleen Hackett, formerly an employe of the Utah Construction Co. in San Francisco, is now with the Postoffice Department in Washington.

Mrs. Marie H. Heath, landowner in Los Angeles and San Luis Obispo Counties, is employed at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

W. D. Johnston, of Hollywood, is with the Treasury Department procurement division, Public Works.

Miss Marjorie Mann is with the General Accounting Office.

Laura Molyneaux, of the Department of Justice, has home rights in Los Angeles.

B. A. Nelson is from Turlock and with the Fertilizer Investigation Service.

Miss Lois Oliver, of Glendale, is with the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Commerce Department.

Admiral Christian J. Peoples arrived in San Francisco with his family when he was 5 years old. Was appointed to the Navy as an ensign in the Supply Corps as a result of competitive examination, with official residence now on the Navy list as Berkeley, Calif., though with his family he now lives in Washington.

Mrs. Inez M. Pugh is with Press Relations of the Veterans' Administration. She is from San Francisco.

Beatrice V. Spasoff, of San Rafael, is with Internal Revenue.

Mrs. Katherine Stanes is with the Federal Trade Commission and comes from San Francisco.

John Spasoff is with the U. S. Patent Office. He is a University of California alumnus and is from San Rafael.

W. E. Stayton says the only reason his is not in California now is that it is too far to "commute." Residence in California since 1888, a graduate of the Los Angeles State Normal School and University of Southern California (law). Born in Santa Barbara, married in Modesto, owns home in Oakland. Is with the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Warren are from Long Beach. Mr. Warren is with the Government Printing Office.

Miss M. Louise Willcoxen is from San Francisco and is with the Bureau of Public Roads.

AN indefatigable worker is Mrs. Dorothy Harper, of Los Angeles, social worker at Welfare, Veterans' Administration.

Mrs. Harper has 6,000 people on her visiting list, so hers are busy days. She is reponsible for practically all of the preliminary work which resulted in the reorganization of the State Society, of which she is vice president. While National president of the "Eight and Forty" last year, Mrs. Harper organized and launched the National Juvenile Tuberculosis program under auspices of this branch of the Legion.

Although eligible for membership in the D. A. R. and other patriotic groups, Mrs. Harper devotes her time entirely to the welfare of former service people through the Legion and its auxiliaries.

Dr. and Mrs. William S. Cooper, both natives of Sacramento, contribute much to the intellectual life of the city. Dr. Cooper, commissioner of education, is now professor of education at George Washington University. Mrs. Cooper is president of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women.

Fishermen Know Gale.

All fishermen around Washington know Thomas C. Gale (*), Aeronautics Branch, Commerce, who is secretary of the local Izaak Walton League. Mr. Gale is from Burbank and is now assistant airway engineer. He was chief radio operator of the Navy during the World War. Mr. Gale says the fish caught around Chesapeake Bay are minnows compared to the ones hauled in off his native shores.

Miss Isabel Sweeney, of Los Angeles, chairman of the Women's Division of the Southern California Young Democratic Club, holds a position in the legal department of the Federal Deposits Insurance Corporation. Miss Sweeney has just returned from a visit with her brother in New York, which she says reminds her of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

State Society Active.

The California State Society was organized in 1893. Several years ago it became inactive, due to the relatively few Californians then here. However, during the past winter Mrs. Dorothy Harper, Veterans' Administration, led in the society's reorganization and the group again is in full swing. The society's object is "to promote friendly relations among its members and to serve the interests of the Nation and California."

Officers of the society are Admiral William H. Standley, chief of Naval Operations, president; Mrs. Gertrude Scott, Veterans' Administration, secretary-treasurer. The following are vice presidents: Representative George Burnham, Representative Frank H. Buck, Representative John J. McGrath, Representative William E. Evans, Walter C. Burke, Textiles, and Mrs. Dorothy Harper.

The board of governors consists of Representative Harry L. Englebright, Walter Measday, secretary to Senator McAdoo, and Maj. Edward E. Odom, assistant solicitor, Veterans' Administration. Dr. Anna Dixon Peck, Veterans' Administration, is historian. Chairman of committees include: Finance, Maj. Horace T. Jones, chief attorney, Veterans' Administration; constitution, Howard E. Crandall, attorney, Veterans' Administration; membership, Mrs. Walter C. Burke; entertainment, Moragne F. Hall, Veterans' Administration; friendship, Robert W. Miller, Agriculture, and publicity, Mrs. Jessie E. Perez, Aeronautics Branch, Commerce.

The board of governors has outlined a spring program and an intensive membership drive. While the Civil Service register shows about 450 Californians in Federal departments, there are many other Californians in private business and the new Federal agencies. All are invited to affiliate with the society.

Coast and Geodetic Survey is fortunate to number among its personnel attractive Miss Lois Oliver, of Glendale.

The Library of Congress is soon to lose a charming personality, Miss Elizabeth Dulin, who came to Washington from the County Library in Madera in 1919. Miss Dulin, who will retire after 15 years' service in October, is counting the days when she can return to the Golden State, where she will live with relatives in Stockton.

Robert W. Miller, Agriculture, an outstanding third generation Californian, says that the sheriff has never yet succeeded in catching up with his family.

Besides California's "Big Chief" Admiral Standley, there is Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, director of Procurement Division, Federal Service, to reflect the golden rays of the Golden State in Washington. Admiral Peoples, who is from Vallejo, also is chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts at Navy Department.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor the same day. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia ("The Sin of Nora Moran," with Zita Johann); or to Loew's Palace (second week of "Riptide," with Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery); or to Loew's Fox (stage, Jimmy Durante in person and other acts; screen, Tracy and Oakie in "Looking for Trouble"). Persons whose name appear on holidays, call for tickets the next day.

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 M. to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m. Saturday, 12 m. to 3:30 p. m.

Legal Division of PWA has a leader in educational and social service in the person of Mrs. May B. Killough(*), of Hollywood.

Walter L. Barlow, of Los Angeles, is special assistant to Attorney General Cummings. Another barrister with a great future is young John A. Rowe, jr., also of Los Angeles, who is on the legal staff at RFC.

Another recent joiner to the ranks of Californians here is Miss Ruth Lockett (*), recorder of the General Land Office, Interior. Miss Lockett has an A. B. from Stanford, has published both prose and poetry in the Gyroscope, Clay Magazine, Harper's Best College Verse and California Poets. Among her activities, she is National committeewoman of the Young Democratic Clubs of California, and vice president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

Working in the Organization Division, Comptroller of the Currency, is Miss Helen Crist, of Los Angeles, who was secretary of the committee which staged the huge celebration in honor of President Roosevelt in the Los Angeles Coliseum last April.

Harris & Ewing Photos.

A typical California girl and a distinguished naval officer lead the Golden State's part in the parade. Miss Jeanne Caldwell, of Fresno, is in Information Division, No. 6, NRA. Miss Caldwell is eligible for D. A. R. membership. Admiral William H. Standley, of San Diego, is Chief of Naval Operations.

Harris & Ewing Photos.

WALTER M. McINTOSH, JR., of Mentone, is a typical young Californian. He is with Reception Office, NRA. Mr. McIntosh is active in the American Little Theater movement and has traveled much abroad. He has studied at Georgetown University.

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Claimants Sought In West Virginia To Iowa Estate

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—A $100,000 estate in Iowa may go to some resident of this section of West Virginia or Virginia, if any descendants of the late Jacob J. Staton and his wife, Burnetta P. Matthews Staton, can prove their claims to the estate.

The real estate will go to the State of Iowa unless, within a year, some descendant of the Staton or Matthews family can prove he is entitled to the property.

The news comes from E. L. Magruder, of Maquoketa, Iowa, who says he is ready to represent any true claimant.

The two who founded the fortune were married in Virginia some time before 1855, but records are not available.

Moose Pick Staff At Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Earl A. Callahan was elected dictator of Martinsburg Lodge, No. 120, Loyal Order of Moose, last night.

Other officers are past dictator, Charles Rohrer; vice dictator, Harley—Linton; prelate, J. Russell Johnson; treasurer, Lee Rhodes; trustee for three years, William Wolfes.

Rhodes, a charter member and also a past dictator, has served as treasurer for 13 years. Past Dictator Charles Rohrer was elected delegate to the National convention in Atlantic City, with P. L. Rhodes as alternate.

EWA Takes Over County CWA Files

Shenandoah Projects to Wait FERA Action.

New Market, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Shenandoah County CWA administrative office records and files, which have been completed since the cessation of civil works activities March 31, have been turned over to Mrs. J. W. Bailey, Federal relief administrator for this district.

Personnel of the CWA offices, including County Administrator H. G. Chandler, Operations Supervisor E. B. Whelan, Disbursing Officer F. B. Riddleberger, Mrs. Carroll Coverstone and Mrs. F. E. Palmer, have not been advised whether they will be transferred to duties under the FERA.

Chandler stated that he is uninformed as to the course to be taken regarding unfinished CWA projects.

Jefferson Veterans Meet.

All-Confederate Reunion Sought

Richmond, April 10 (AP).—Heads of three Confederate organizations are trying to arouse interest in their respective bodies in the United Confederate Veterans' reunion, planned for June 6, 7 and 8 at Chattanooga, Tenn., with the idea of assuring a large Virginia representation.

The Sons of Confederate Veterans and the Southern Confederated Memorial Association will meet at the same time.

Joining in the move are Walter L. Hopkins, commander in chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans; Gen. Homer Atkinson, of Petersburg, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans, and Gen. W. M. McK. Evans, of Richmond, commander of Lee Camp, No. 1, and of the Army of Northern Virginia.

Frederick's CWA Expended $50,373

Winchester, Va., April 10 (Spl.).—Civil Works Administration expenditures in Winchester and Frederick County aggregated $50,373.12, a check by Frank W. Bailey, city CWA administrator, and Eugene Chiles, county disbursing officer, discloses.

Of the total, $39,373.12 was disbursed in the city and $10,796.09 in the county.

The report indicates large balances on several city CWA allocations, due, it was said, to discontinuance of the work March 31.

Jobs Office Put At Winchester

District Bureau Covers Group of Northern Counties.

Winchester, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Winchester will have the district headquarters office of the Virginia Reemployment Service, including Frederick, Clarke, Warren, Rappahannock, Page, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties and the Cities of Winchester and Harrisonburg. Walter M. Shade will be in charge.

Miss Leona Peer will be statistical clerk. With the establishment of the district office here, offices at Berryville, Woodstock and Washington (Va.) have been discontinued, but those at Front Royal, Luray and Harrisonburg will be kept open temporarily, it was stated.

The district office will select labor for all Public Works Administration projects and Federal aid works. It will have nothing to do with selection of employes for Federal Emergency Relief Administration projects, the labor for these being picked by the FERA organization in each community.

Other district offices in northern Virginia will be at Alexandria, Fredericksburg and Staunton.

Ira LaF. Cosby, 76, Buried in Virginia

Served as First President of Grottoes Bank.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 10 (Spl.). Ira LaFollette Cosby, 76, first president of the Bank of Grottoes, was buried today at Richmond.

A native of Chesterfield County, he came to Grottoes in 1908, where he established a milling business. He retired in 1921 and moved to Richmond.

He is survived by three sons, Phillip R. Cosby, cashier of the Grottoes branch of the Rockingham-Augusta Bank; R. Duncan Cosby and Ira L. Cosby, jr., all of Grottoes; two daughters, Mrs. Stewart F. Carver, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. W. L. Fowler, of Richmond; and one brother, Phillip V. Cosby, of Cumberland County, Va.

Jury Indicts in Gem Theft.

Charleston, W. Va., April 10 (Spl.).—An indictment charging the theft of $16,000 of jewelry from Mrs. J. Clark Dean, of Chicago, while a guest at a White Sulphur Springs hotel in 1932, has been returned by the Kanawha County grand jury against Webb Holesapple, of Charleston.

Film Version of "Men in White" Is Previewed—More Summer Theaters Planned

Play of Power Made Into Ace Screen Drama

Gable as a Young Interne; Mr. Goulding Pays Call; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

In his biannual appraisal of the Broadway stage bills, conveyed to the public through the columns of the eminent Mr. Percy Hammond in the New York Herald-Tribune at Christmastide and Easter, Prof. Emeritus William Lyon Phelps of Yale—a regular contributor to the columns of this paper, by the way—offers "Men in White" as his nomination for the best play of the season of 1933-34.

This is a verdict that probably will be extended by many to include the screen version of the Sidney Kingsley play, previewed by the dramatic desks of the local press in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday noon.

The picturized version of "Men in White" is one of the few pictures I have ever seen in which the deeply human elements of genuinely moving drama have succeeded in overbalancing the purely clinical aspects of a story that is laid almost exclusively within the walls of a large city hospital.

Suppressed Surgery.

The operating-room sequences in this subject, while no less ominous than usual, are so closely and vitally interwoven with the life problems of the young interne about whom the story revolves that their dramatic significance is never quite sacrificed to a purely technical exposition of the intricacies of modern surgery.

These scenes, it may be said, have been handled with a deftness that is extraordinary. They are intensely realistic without being, as is so often the case, unpleasantly gruesome. Softening camera angles have supplied a gracious amelioration of these habitually horrifying effects.

Although this is more Jean Hersholt's picture than anybody else's Clark Gable now and again during its action proves himself an actor of rather more emotional appeal than usual. Myrna Loy, in the role of the rich young woman to whom Mr. Gable, as Dr. Ferguson, was engaged, I thought was rather outplayed by Elizabeth Allan, as the hapless nurse, whose fate definitely determined Ferguson's future course.

Engagements Too Close.

It seems none too much a certainty that Mr. Gable will be able to elude unfortunate comparisons in this role with his recent perfect performance in "It Happened One Night." This is so much more serious and so much more somber an enterprise that a little longer interval between the engagements might have been desirable. There are times in "Men in White" when Mr. Gable is merely acting. That seemed never to be so in the Samuel Hopkins Adams fable, which he wrote under the title of "Night Bus."

It is of interest to Washington, of course, that "Men in White" was produced by Monta Bell, former local newspaperman, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Richard Boleslavsky directing.

Mr. Bell's charming daughter, now professionally known, I believe, as Consuelo Howard, was a member of yesterday's preview party and expressed herself as rather elated over the many superior qualities of her pappy's latest contribution to the screen—a view that was concurred in by a majority of those present.

And now come Elizabeth Sypher, actress and director; Margaret Yard, of the Yard School of Art, and Charles Turner, actor-playwright, with the announcement of a new professional production group which will present a summer theater in the New England manner, with plays under the direction of Anton Hardt, formerly of the Hedgerow Theater and Jitney Players. The plays, so it is said, will be put on for full-week runs, Monday through Saturday. Hugo Inden, formerly of Duseldorf, Germany, and Munich, will design the settings. A meeting will be held Saturday night to decide upon a permanent name for the new group, the final selection of plays and location of the "barn" theater, which probably will be located somewhere nearby on the Virginia banks of the Potomac.

It Happened Elsewhere, Too.

Some days ago in this space something was said concerning the unusual attendance records that had been compiled at the National Theater during the week before Christmas and Holy Week, when Katharine Hepburn and Mme. Maria Jeritza, respectively, came dangerously near cracking records despite the traditionally bad theatrical weeks in which they appeared.

Washington, it seems, was not alone in its shattering of precedent—at least during Holy Week. During this period, Katharine Cornell grossed $24,000 in Toledo, Columbus and Indianapolis, playing to houses in each city that were over capacity.

After Sixteen Years.

Basil Rathbone, Miss Cornell's British leading man, incidentally, and Patrolman Ray Turner, of the Toledo police force, met for the first time since they served together in the World War 16 years ago, when Miss Cornell and her company played the Ohio city. Rathbone was a second lieutenant and Turner a sergeant in the Liverpool Scotties of the British forces.

"You taught me all I ever knew about the army," the actor told the policeman.

"Well, you didn't know too much about it when you came to us," replied the patrolman. "I thought you were a snob until I went to you for orders that first morning and you ordered me to take a drink!"

Good-morning, Lieutenant, is there anything this column can do for you this morning?

The Troubadours of George Washington University will present "Take It Easy," an original musical comedy, with book and lyrics by Edmund Ziman, May 9, 10 and 12 at Roosevelt High School Auditorium. As in the case of past Troubadour shows, the entire production is in the hands of the students of the University. Two choruses already are in rehearsal. The board of directors this year is composed of George Wells, managing director; Samuel Detwiler, production; Dorothy Algire, costuming; Janet Young, business; Edmund Ziman, music; Betty Bacon, dancing, and Catherine Prichard, publicity.

What's in a Name?

When this column rode into Washington with him on that perambulating nightmare known as the Warner Brothers' "Forty-Second Street" Special last Inauguration Day, the matter wasn't gone into at all, but there have been so many rumblings since about it that it seems high time the question of Lyle Talbot's real name should be settled once and for all.

So here are the facts:

Lyle Talbot was born Lysle Henderson. His father was known throughout the Middle West as an actor who toured the smaller towns regularly under his own name of J. Edward Henderson.

Lyle's mother died while he was still a baby. His maternal grandmother then adopted him, giving him her married name of Talbot to use as his own. Thus he became legally Lysle Talbot.

"Hollywood."

Lyle's grandmother's name before her marriage had been Hollywood. When it came time for Lyle to launch his own theatrical career he thought for a time he would take his grandmother's maiden name as a stage name and be known as Lysle Hollywood. He changed his mind, however, and went out with his first carnival company as Lysle Talbot.

He used that name until he arrived in Hollywood and there, at the suggestion of the Warner Brothers studio executives, he dropped the "s" from the first name and became Lyle Talbot.

Meanwhile, both Lyle's father and his grandmother have remarried. The "parents" who visited Lyle on the West Coast recently were his father and his stepmother. The grandmother's name now is Hunt.

So now you know all about this complicated study in patronymics.

That threatened "Schnozzola Purse" will be run as the first race out at the Bowie track today, with Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante, appearing this week in person on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater, at the track between shows to watch the bangtails run in his honor.

A backstage visitor at the Fox yesterday, since we are on the subject, was Edmund Goulding, famous motion picture director, who came into town unexpectedly and divided his afternoon between a visit with Jimmy and a call at the M-G-M Film Exchange.

Mr. Goulding will be remembered for many fine productions, one of them being Norma Shearer's "Riptide," now in its second week at the Palace, and another being "Grand Hotel." He left on an afternoon train for Asheville, N. C., where Mrs. Goulding is convalescing from an illness.

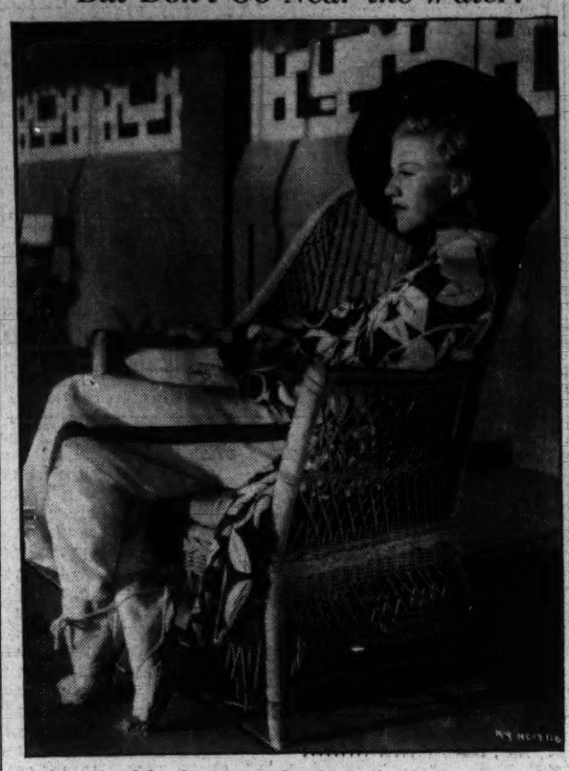

Sprig, Sprig, Beautiful Sprig!

This must be spring, because the tulips are coming up and the croci are beginning to pop out.

Right after the croci come the circi, and then there can be no fooling about it!

So what? So don't take them off too soon!

"—But Don't Go Near the Water!"

A foretaste of beach costumes for the coming season is provided by Ginger Rogers, who is here shown enjoying a moment of relaxation gayly comparisoned in white slacks, a red and white jacket, knit sandals and a red beach hat. Miss Rogers, incidentally, has come along a little more rapidly than most of the other young singing comediennes devoting their talents to the cinema. Her next release will be "Finishing School," in which Maxine Doyle also is supposed to appear.

Queenie Smith An Individual Hit in Comedy

(Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.)

"EVERY THURSDAY." Wee and Leventhal present Queenie Smith in a new comedy in three acts by Doty Hobart. Staged by Theodore Viekman. Reviewed Monday night in the Belasco Theater.

THE CAST.

Mrs. Thomas Clark.....Ann Dere
Sadie.....Queenie Smith
Raymond Clark.....Leon Janney
Fern Adams.....Tucker McGuire
Dr. Adams.....Frederick Forrester
Ferguson.....Jack Davis
Florence Amelia Elizabeth Lowell Sheila Trent

By Nelson B. Bell.

If that prodigious area of hinterland bookings, formerly known as "the road," were not so utterly defunct, "Every Thursday," the comedy disclosed to a Washington audience for the first time in the Belasco Theater last night, would be assured of a long and profitable life.

Pretending to no profundity either of idea or treatment, this new play by Doty Hobart, nevertheless, is interesting and at times keenly amusing, although not to a degree that might be said to guarantee it a career of distinguishing metropolitan longevity.

One thing, however, it makes certain. It establishes with some definiteness the ingenuous charm, the naivete and the infallible sense of both the dramatic and the humorous possessed by Miss Queenie Smith, whose celebrity heretofore has been principally founded upon a rare aptitude for the frivolities of the light musical stage. There is no music in "Every Thursday," beyond the rickety cackling of an ancient phonograph.

Appealing Character Study.

"Every Thursday" is not a story of New England village life. It is, instead, a character study of a gentle, compassionate and sensitive "hired girl," working one day a week for each of several families living in a small town not far from Springfield, Mass., who gradually comes to know a great and consuming love that is impossible of fulfillment.

She is, to be sure, surrounded by typical village types—surrounded, that is to say, up to the number of seven—but none understands her heartbreak and none does anything about it. As the final curtain falls she is left, a little bewildered, "just as if nothing had happened."

There is something of "The Lummox" in the flavor of "Every Thursday." Or perhaps just a suggestion of "Jennie Gerhardt." It is a love story from the defeatist's point of view—a love story in which it is not always possible to disentangle the grand passion from a sheer manifestation of woman's unfailing instinct to "mother" the weaker sex!

Adventurous Youth.

The entire action of the play takes place in the living room in the home of the Clarks—father, mother, and 17-year-old son. The eventual engagement of Raymond Clark and Fern Adams, the neighboring physician's daughter, is taken for granted. Then Mr. and Mrs. Clark leave Raymond at home alone while they go to the city on a ten-day visit. Master Raymond falls into unfortunate hands. The hands belong to Miss Florence Amelia Elizabeth Lowell, a shady lady known as "Flo," from the wrong side of the tracks. He is salvaged from this unhappy predicament by Sadie, the circulatory slavey. From that day—or rather night—forth, her life centers in the lad, barred from her by society's odd conventions.

Into the weaving of the tale there has been introduced much that is highly colored and extremely amusing. Sadie's quaint philosophies are scarcely less pungent than our old friend, Sis Hopkins', even if less grotesque, and Miss Lowell's frankly indicated addiction to the fleshpots is nothing if not the acme of clarity in its sexy implications.

Minus Queenie Smith, Nil.

The play, of course, is Miss Smith's. It is hers by right of superior craftmanship, superior artistry and superior resourcefulness in the pointing and timing of mood. She deserves a more opulent outlet for her rich and unique talents. Leon Janney, a juvenile familiar to picture-goers by reason of many effective appearances on the screen, plays opposite the star in the role of the junior Clark and offers a lusty and amusing study in all the exaggerated absurdities of adolescence. Tucker McGuire and Sheila Trent are in striking contrast as Fern Adams and "Flo," respectively.

George Carleton, Ann Dere, who will bring the late Blanche Friderici to the minds of many; Frederick Forrester and Jack Davis do the supporting roles sufficient justice.

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, April 9.—Moss Hart, who had considerable fun with Hollywood in his "Once in a Lifetime," and who later capitulated to movie ways and joined the cinema colony, now turns his satirical darts to Broadway, and columnists. The story goes by the title of "Miss Pamelo Thorndyke," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased it for filming.

ALICE JOYCE.

"Miss Pamelo Thorndyke" is a fictitious lady in Hart's yarn, created by three Broadway columnists who become bored with reporting blessed events. The trio of vital statisticians give Miss Thorndyke a personality and make news of her wherever possible.

Popular Pair Teamed Again.

Following their teaming in the musical film, "Stand Up and Cheer," soon to be released, Madge Evans and Warner Baxter will again combine talents for another picture. This is "Grand Canary," which Fox will produce.

Miss Evans was yesterday chosen for the leading feminine role in the drama. Others in the cast so far include Marjorie Rambeau and Zita Johann. Irving Cummings will direct, with production scheduled to start next Monday.

• • • •

Brown to Fly Far.

When Clarence Brown finishes "Sadie McKee," he plans to take his plane and fly into fifteen States and seven European countries. The director will attempt to match the Lindbergh effort by flying alone across the ocean, according to information received yesterday.

Brown, it is said, has his employer's—Louis B. Mayer's—consent to try the perilous journey. He will be away for three months, and his wife, Alice Joyce, will probably accompany him on his flights in this country.

• • • •

Bette Davis Gets Lead.

Bette Davis, blonde leading lady for Leslie Howard in "Of Human Bondage," which will be released here shortly, will return to Warner Brothers to enact one of the feminine leads in "House Wife," an original story by Robert Lord and Lillie Hayward. This is a tale about housewives who make business men successful in spite of themselves.

• • • •

Film Rehearsals Start.

Rehearsals started today on "The Merry Widow," with Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald and Una Merkel sitting in. Ernst Lubitsch, who will direct, has elected to accompany the principal players on the piano during practice on the singing numbers.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Wallace Smith has started work on the adaptation of his own story, "The Captain Hates the Sea," as a Columbia picture.

"Call It Luck" company, with Herbert Mundin and Pat Patterson, is locationing at Busch Gardens, Pasadena, while the "Now I'll Tell" company left yesterday for Zuna Beach, near Malibu.

Jackie Searle and Barbara Fritchie go into "Murder on the Blackboard." James Gleason and Edna May Oliver have the leads.

Libby Taylor, Negress, will play the role of maid in Mae West's new film.

Colleen Moore will henceforth be under the managerial eye of Mike Levee.

Robert Florey, director at Warners, sailed yesterday for the Orient, where he will photograph locales mentioned in "Oil for the Lamps of China," which he is to film. He will be gone three months and will visit Canton, Shanghai and the interior of China.

S. K. Lauren, who adapted "The Party is Over," has been assigned to write an original for Carole Lombard.

Precise Reasoning.

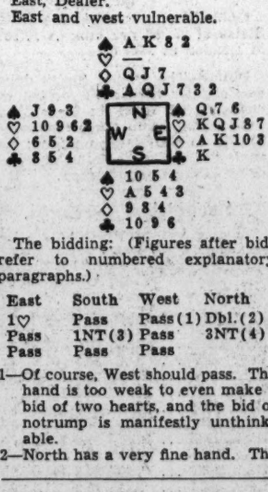

One of the beauties of the game of Contract Bridge which adds to its ever-increasing popularity is the fact that both in the bidding and play there are numerous opportunities for precise reasoning and the drawing of the most delicate and accurate inferences. Inferences, of course, are of two kinds—the positive inference based upon what partner and opponents say, and the negative inference based upon what partner or opponents fail to say.

The hand below, which was played by Mr. Alphonse Moyse, jr., in a team-of-four match recently, is a case in which he drew such an accurate inference from a pass by one of his opponents that the opposing players for a moment thought that someone had tipped him off as to the distribution. Of course, nothing could be further from the facts. Mr. Moyse's play was based entirely upon the drawing of an accurate inference from the failure of an opponent to bid.

The hand was:

East, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
1♡	Pass	Pass (1)	Dbl. (2)
Pass	1NT (3)	Pass	3NT (4)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Of course, West should pass. The hand is too weak to even make a bid of two hearts, and the bid of notrump is manifestly unthinkable.

2—North has a very fine hand. The takeout double is obviously correct.

3—South has no four-card or longer suit except the suit bid by his opponent. Inasmuch as he holds a stopper, one notrump is no doubt the best bid.

4—Perhaps a somewhat strong bid in view of the distribution, but north and South knew that their team score was bad and needed some unusual result to bolster it up. Hence North decided to conceal his club suit and hoped that the club King either was held by Mr. Moyse or could be captured on a finesse.

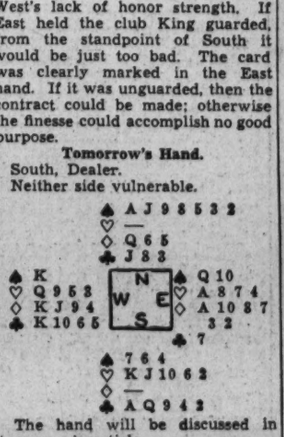

West's opening lead was the heart 2, indicating the probability that he held four of the suit. Mr. Moyse won the trick with the Ace as there was no purpose whatever in holding up with his rags. Obviously, East, vulnerable, who had opened the bidding, had entry cards in other suits and could not be shut out in any event. In addition, there was a real danger of a shift to the very weakly protected diamonds. Having won the first trick, Mr. Moyse saw, of course, that if he captured the club King, his contract was assured, as the heart trick together with the Ace and King of spades and six club tricks totaled nine.

Hoping for but really not expecting a cover, he led the club Ten, and naturally West played low, whereupon Mr. Moyse went into a long huddle with himself, finally emerging with the correct solution. West, he reasoned, held four hearts. He could not in addition to holding four hearts have also the King of clubs, as otherwise he would have made some response to his partner's vulnerable opening bid. Therefore the club King must be with East and if that was true there was not a thing to gain by a finesse. The one chance of running the club suit was to find the King a singleton with East. Scarcely hoping for any such good fortune, Mr. Moyse played the Ace, and when the King dropped, the opponents felt that the play bordered on the miraculous. Obviously, there is no method of knowing that the King is a singleton, though North's unbalanced distribution suggests a similar lack of balance in other hands, but whether the King is a singleton or not, the line of play adopted by Mr. Moyse is absolutely correct and based entirely upon a correct decision as to West's lack of honor strength. If East held the club King guarded, from the standpoint of South it would be just too bad. The card was clearly marked in the East hand. If it was unguarded, then the contract could be made; otherwise the finesse could accomplish no good purpose.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Knee Joint.

The knee joint is subject to a variety of disorders. It is a favorite location for the most important form of rheumatism—acute articular rheumatism. It is generally involved to some degree in the several forms of chronic arthritis.

In buying a horse or a mule we get a pretty good notion as to the amount of service that is left in him by noting how much he is sprung in the knees. We can form a fair idea of the age and senility of a man by noting how much his knees are bent as he tries to stand upright. One of the earlier signs of that form of arthritis that seems almost physiologic, in that it gradually stiffens us as the years go by, is a mild creaking in the knee joints.

This joint is subject to various kinds of infective forms of rheumatic arthritis. Of this, tubercular and gonococcal arthritis are two of the most important. It was the often fatal and always serious results following operations and injuries of the knee joint that caused Lord Lister to apply the principles of Metschenkoff and to invent antiseptic surgery. The good which grew out of that need can not be calculated.

The knee joint is subject to a line of minor disorders that occasion considerable inconvenience. Among these are broken cartilages, loose bodies, torn ligaments, ganglia, and water in the joint.

Of all the joints of the extremities except those of the hands and feet, the knee is the only one where the joints are not mortised in some way. The ankles and wrists are regular interlocking jigsaw puzzles. In the hip and shoulder the long bone fits into a well developed socket. In the elbow the funny bone is a splint that braces the joint and holds the bones in position. In the knee the thigh bone sits squarely on the top of the tibia.

To hold the bones of such a joint in position many ligaments and tendons, capsules and cartilages, and much packing are required. The minor ills now referred to are those which result from breaking off of tabs of packing; tearing of tendons, ligaments, and capsule; and breaking of the cartilage pads between the bones.

A man is walking along in an orderly way, his knee gives out, and he drops. A woman in her kitchen turns about, her toe catches in a break in the linoleum, she feels something happen in her knee joint. This type of injury is very inconvenient. It may cause discomfort or pain. It may be acute or it may be chronic. The effect seems so out of proportion to the cause, or the degree of mechanical breakdown is so difficult of explanation, that the subject is puzzled and sometimes mystified.

Dr. Kellogg Speed says that in such cases the trouble may be due to breaks and tears in the cartilage pad, to loose bodies in the joint caused by breaks in the cartilage tags of fat, displacement of some of the packing; or the fault may be due to spurs of bone caused by chronic arthritis, or to tears in the ligaments or the capsule.

Some of these conditions get well without treatment. Some do not cause enough inconvenience to demand treatment. Some are serious Some call for casts and splinting. Some require operation.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Look Out Blackie; Mr. Man Is Mad!

When Rover Dog got home from his high dive, he was about as wet and cold as a dog can get, and he was both scared and mad. He ran into the kitchen and crawled under the stove where it was warm, but he was shivering so that he shook the pans on the shelf.

Mrs. Man wanted to know what was the matter with him, and he told her somebody had thrown him into the creek and nearly drowned him, and he believed it was Blackie Bear. Besides being wet, the bamboo vine had scratched Rover pretty badly, and he was in right bad fix, and he wiggled and whined a sight.

Mrs. Man was sorry for him, and she fixed him a good warm dinner and then made a bed for him close to the stove. It wasn't long before Mr. Man came home for his supper, and when Mrs. Man told him what had happened to Rover Dog he was certainly mad.

Mr. Man Voices Threat.

"Well," said Mr. Man, "I have stood this just as long as I can, and I am going to get that black rascal tomorrow. I will get my gun and take Rover Dog along and we will hunt till we find him. You may get your pot ready to cook bear meat in it for supper tomorrow night."

All during supper, and till they went to sleep, Mr. Man and his wife kept talking about the way Blackie had been cutting up for so long, and they were fully decided that it was time to stop him.

"Eats my pigs and chickens and lambs, and then he tries to drown my dog, and there's no telling what he will do next if I let him alone. But I won't let him alone. I'll get him tomorrow," and Mr. Man kept right on mumbling until his eyes closed and he was asleep.

The next morning wasn't a bit nice, for it was cold and drizzling rain, and Rover really did have a dreadful cold from getting wet the day before, and he sneezed and coughed so that Mr. Man told him he might stay there by the stove, and he would go alone and get Blackie. He took his lunch along, for he thought he might be gone all day, and went down the creek in the direction that Rover said Blackie had thrown him into the water.

Hunts in Bushes.

He hunted in all the thick bushes and trees for a long way down the creek, but he didn't find even a bear's tracks. It was nearly lunchtime when he heard a loud "Gobble, gobble, gobble," and when he stopped and peeped through some bushes he saw a big wild turkey gobbler and three or four turkey hens eating berries. They saw or heard him, and were just rising to fly away when he shot both barrels of his gun and killed the gobbler and two hens. When he got the turkeys he decided that he had as much meat as he could carry home, and so he would have to leave Blackie till tomorrow, and then maybe Rover Dog would be well enough to go with him.

By this time Mr. Man was pretty tired and hungry, and so he stopped at the first spring he came to and ate his lunch. After lunch he pulled off his hunting jacket that had all his shells in it, and laid it down beside his gun and turkeys, and then he lit his pipe and leaned back against a tree to enjoy a good smoke. It wasn't long before he had dozed off, and he was sound asleep when Jay Bird happened to fly by. And you know Jay Bird never keeps any news from the other Creek Folks.

Stocks Regain Recent Losses In Heavier Sale

Brighter Outlook Cheers Traders; Dealing Rises to 1,417,722.

New York, April 10 (AP).—Stocks today more than recovered their losses of the two previous markets.

Share traders found cheer in a number of quarters. Settlement of the motor products strike, a substantial gain in March shipments of the leading steel producer, optimistic comment of executives at some annual stockholders' meetings, additional improvement for metal prices, a good report on last month's automobile production, the Senate's elimination of the extra 10 per cent income tax and additional tempering of the regulation bill were prominent items on the market's bill of fare.

Activity increased to 1,417,722 shares.

Motors Lend Upturn.

Motor company equities led the upturn, which netted many gains of fractions to a couple of points throughout the general list. Nash was an exception in its division, losing about 2 points on news of the dividend omission, though its extreme loss was reduced. General Motors, Chrysler and Hudson looked fairly strong.

Utilities held back, obviously because of the State Senate's change of heart with respect to Gov. Lehman's power program, but there were no special casualties. American Telephone, which has been drifting lower since the Splawn report was published, rallied more than a point. Alcohol issues improved and rails firmed, Santa Fe's 2-point rise being prominent.

Mining shares developed few features, though Kennecott and Anaconda rose in response to copper's improvement. American Can, Goodyear, Motor Products, Chrysler, General Motors, Evans Products, Austin Nichols, Armour of Illinois Preferred, A. M. Byere, Wilson "A," National Distillers and Union Pacific ranged about 1 to 2 higher at the close.

Aid From Meetings.

Corporation meetings which helped provide a background favorable to rising prices included the gathering of Bethlehem's stockholders who were told by President Grace that he hoped the second quarter would show a profit.

Operations of the steel companies are again expanding, although business is being done without benefit of the new prices. Costs in the current three months are bound to be higher; on the other hand, tonnage is expected to increase.

Automobile output is now around its seasonal top, having been held back by labor controversies and mechanical troubles with new models. The estimate for last month placed output 49 per cent above February and 208 per cent over a year ago; incidentally, the manufacturers are giving employment to more workers than at any time since September, 1929, and unfilled orders are substantial. The outcome of the tool and diemakers dispute is a matter of considerable importance to the industry at this time.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Treasury Is Experiencing Marked Success in Its Current Offer to Exchange 12-10 Year 3¼ Per Cent Obligations for Liberty 4¼s.

By Ralph West Robey.

Preliminary reports on the progress of the current refunding operation of the Treasury for the Liberty 4¼s indicate that the offering is being well received. The total amount involved, it will be recalled, is approximately $1,250,000,000. This is made up of about $1,000,000,000 of Liberty 4¼s which were called last October as of April 15 and some $225,000,000 of Treasury notes maturing this month. For all of these the Treasury is offering to exchange 12-10-year bonds bearing 3¼ per cent.

The offering was announced a week ago this morning. By the close of business on Saturday well over $500,000,000 had been offered for exchange. Under more or less any condition this would be considered a favorable rate of conversion. In the present instance it is unusually so because of the large volume of these Libertys that are held in small lots by individuals. The Treasury has every reason to feel pleased at the success it is enjoying in this refunding.

British Borrowing Provides An Interesting Contrast.

An interesting contrast with this financial operation by the United States Treasury is the refunding loan floated by the British Treasury last week. It was for 150,000,000 pounds, or approximately $750,000,000. The obligations bear 3 per cent interest and are due in 1969 and callable in 1959. They were priced at 98. This operation marks the completion of the program designed by the British Treasury to get its debt in better shape. The program started in July, 1932, with the conversion of the 2,000,000,000 pound 5 per cent War Loan. With the current operation out of the way there are no further debt maturities of significance until 1938.

In spite of the success which our own Treasury is enjoying in its conversion loan, therefore, it is obvious that as yet we are unable to do as well as the British Government. For 10-12 year maturities we are paying 3¼ per cent. England on 35-25 year maturities has to pay only 3 per cent.

Ordinarily such a difference would be looked for in the relative supply of capital available for investment in the two countries. In the present instance, nevertheless, this is a secondary consideration. In fact, we have far larger unused lending power in the United States in relation to the capital market than is the case in England. One must look to other factors, accordingly, to explain the difference in the rate of interest.

Two Financial Policies Have Been Most Important.

Most outstanding in this particular have been the financial policies of the two governments. On this the record of the two countries has been about as different as it would be possible to find. England made a vigorous fight to maintain the gold standard and suspended it only after pressure became so great that it no longer could be met. Since the suspension, in October, 1931, the most conservative financial program has been followed as a guard against the tendency toward inflation during the period of inconvertible currency. This conservatism has been evident both in the credit policies of the banking system and in the fiscal affairs of the government, the British government having just ended its fiscal year with a surplus of $150,000,000.

In the United States, in contrast, we suspended the gold standard after the pressure had been relieved. On top of this we made one move after another in the direction of inflation and have had an incessant attempt on the part of Administration officers to get our banks to pour out funds. Then, as though this were not enough, we adopted a policy in the handling of our fiscal affairs which scarcely could have been better devised to raise questions as to the desirability of United States Government bonds as long-term investments.

In the face of these differences the surprising thing is not that England can borrow at a lower rate, but that our Treasury can do even as well as 3¼ per cent.

Curb's Tone Firm as Gains Mark Trading

Metals, Oils and Specialties Rally; Sales Rise to 282,000 Shares.

New York, April 10 (AP).—A firmer tone prevailed in curb exchange dealings today. Utilities and alcohols closed about unchanged, but metals showed fractional improvement while some of the oils and specialities rallied more vigorously.

Gulf Oil gained 2 points and Humble rose 1 in an active flurry. South Pennsylvania Oil also added a point. Novadel Agene soared more than 4 in a nominal transfer. Schiff Co. and Aluminum Company of America were up 2 each, while issues finishing substantial fraction to a point or so higher included Newmont, Lake Shore, Fisk Rubber, Libby McNeil, Automatic Voting, Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, and U. S. Foil Co.

Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Standard Oil of Indiana, Hiram Walker, and Swift & Co., all finished with scant changes. Transfers approximated 282,000 shares compared with 227,000 for Monday.

Bank Stocks Stage Further Advance

New York, April 10.—New York City bank stocks registered a further advance during the past week, the aggregate value of the 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, amounting to $1,556,967,000 as of the close April 6.

This total compares with $1,495,744,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $61,223,000, or 4.09 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.14 per cent compares with a yield of 5.35 per cent at the close of the previous week. The current market value is now 1.31 times their known book value, against 1.26 times on March 29. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 11.8 times their known earnings, against 11.4 times on March 29.

Bond Market Again Drives To New Highs

Rails and Industrials in Lead; Sales Rise to $17,191,000.

New York, April 10 (AP).—Led by the rails and industrials, bonds continued to mark up "new highs" today in broad and active trading.

Transfers totaled $17,191,000, par value, against $13,877,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced two-tenths of a point, to 86.6, another top since 1931.

The market appeared to be pleased by the adjustment of the major Detroit labor troubles, the spurt in steel production and a substantial gain in the March motor output. A rally in stocks was also a cheering factor.

Easy Money Rates.

Further evidence of easy money rates, and the plethora of idle funds, was seen in the discounts at which the latest issues of Treasury bills were absorbed.

Ninety-one-day bills were placed at an average discount of 0.07 per cent, while bills running for twice that period were discounted at 0.18 per cent, the lowest on record for Treasury loans.

Among the best rails, up fractions to around 2 points, were some liens of Alleghany Corp., Baltimore & Ohio, Central Pacific, Chesapeake Corp., Chicago & Alton, St. Paul, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, M-K-T, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Wabash, and Western Pacific.

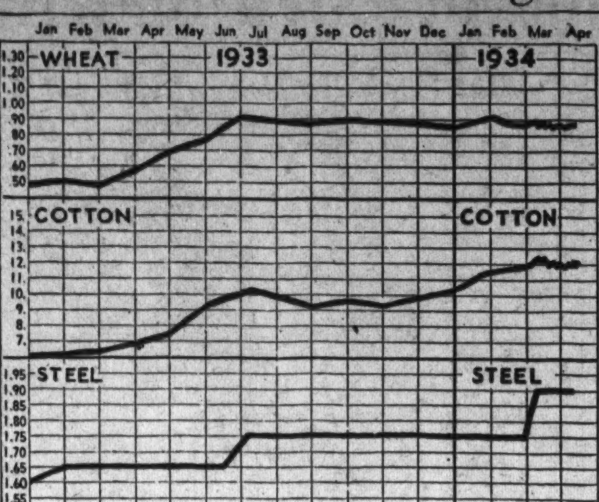

On Gaining List.

Both Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s were up around 2 points each. McKesson 5½s gained 3, Chile Copper 5s advanced 3, and others, up moderately, included loans of American I. G. Chemical, Armour & Co., Postal Telegraph, Richfield Oil, Warner Quinn and Texas Corp. The utilities were somewhat hesitant.

U. S. Government securities were a trifle mixed, as were foreign obligations.

Bonds of Argentina spurted 2 to 5 points to new high levels for the past year or more, but the Germans were again reactionary.

Erie Railroad 1st Quarter Net Halts Losses

Northern Pacific's Profits for March Make Jump Over '33 Period.

New York, April 10 (AP).—Charles E. Denney, president of the Erie Railroad told the annual stockholders meeting today that net income in the first quarter would aggregate $592,698 compared with a deficit of $1,677,792 in the first three months in 1933.

President Charles Donnelly stated at the annual stockholders meeting of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. today that gross revenues in March were estimated to be $700,000 greater than in the same month last year. He estimated net operating income was higher by about $865,000 in March over a year ago.

The annual report of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad for 1933 shows net loss of $7,790,452 after taxes and charges compared with net loss of $14,081,054 in 1932. The figures include operations of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad.

Weibel Brewing Co. of New Haven, Conn., reports net earnings, after all charges, for the period May 10 to December 31, 1933, of $128,406, equal to 40 cents a share on the 320,450 shares of common stock outstanding.

San Francisco, April 10 (AP).—Associated Oil Co. and subsidiaries show a consolidated net income for 1933 of $3,093,644, or $1.35 a share on outstanding capital stock. In 1932 net was $3,434,727, or $1.50 a share. The company is a subsidiary of Tide Water Associated.

President W. F. Humphrey said earnings for the first half year, when the market for crude oil and products was broken down, amounted to little over a half million dollars.

Los Angeles, April 10 (AP).—The regular quarterly cash dividend of 25 cents a share, payable May 10 to stockholders of record April 19, was declared today at a meeting of the board of directors of the Union Oil Co., of California.

Net profits of the company for the three months ended March 31—after all charges, including depletion, depreciation, drilling expendtiures, general expenses, taxes and interest—amounted to $500,000, equivalent to 11 cents a share on 4,386,070 shares outstanding. During the first three months of 1933, there was a net loss of $1,100,000. Cash resources were reported as being 2.3 times current obligations.

Wool Market.

Boston, April 10 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Extremely dull trading and the weak sentiment in the wool market caused some easing in nominal quotations on Ohio fleeces. While there was not enough business to definitely establish market prices, it was the consensus of opinion that most holders of Ohio wool were willing to consider bids at 34@35 in the grease in fine Ohio delaine, 35 on strictly combing 58s, 60s, ½ blood; 40@41 on strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood, and 39@40 on strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Quieter conditions prevailed on the stock exchange today. West African gold mining shares rallied after early profit taking. German bonds were quiet on Dr. Schacht's statement at Basle. Giltedge securities, transatlantic issues and industrials were supported and Argentine rails were firmer on loan redemption news. The market closed irregular.

Paris—After early heaviness, caused by traders' inactivity, demand for rentes and Citrogen shares lifted prices on the bourse. The closing was firm.

Berlin—The decline in unemployment figures and more favorable business reports had no influence on the boerse, which was very quiet. The closing was more cheerful.

Reichsbank Statement.

Berlin, April 10 (A.P.).—The Reichsbank statement as of April 7 shows the following changes in reichsmarks: Gold and bullion decreased 6,438,000; reserve in foreign currencies increased 1,876,000; bills of exchange and checks decreased 252,186,000; silver and other coins increased 59,273,000; notes on other banks increased 5,126,000; advances decreased 73,659,000; investments increased 8,105,000; other assets increased 24,208,000; notes in circulation decreased 199,591,000; other maturing obligations decreased 45,354,000; other liabilities increased 11,250,000.

Total gold holdings, 230,698,000.

Note coverage, 6.9 per cent.

Grace Finds Trend Of Steel Improved

Bethlehem Head Expects Profits During Second Quarter.

New York, April 10 (U.P.).—The "trend of business is encouraging" Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said at the annual meeting of the corporation today, where it was announced current operations are at 52 per cent of capacity.

"I am hopeful that the second quarter will show a profit," Grace said. He said he believed business in the second quarter would go a long way toward earning the preferred dividend and that March business would show some balance. Resumption of the preferred dividend will be made as soon as possible.

A protest against salaries and bonuses paid to executives was made by one stockholder, who said there was no reason why Charles M. Schwab, chairman, should receive $250,000 annual salary. Grace said no bonuses had been paid to officers since 1931.

Cotton Prices Climb Under Trade Buying

May Closes at 12.04 as General Market Rises 10 to 15 Points.

New York, April 10 (AP).—Cotton advanced today on trade and commission house buying which was based on Washington reports on proposed silver legislation and prospective action on the Bankhead bill. July contracts sold up to 12.18 and closed at 12.16, with the general market finishing steady at net advances of 10 to 15 points.

Opening prices were 6 to 9 points higher. There was a moderate commission house demand, along with buying for Liverpool and continental account.

Demand for contracts broadened as prices worked upward during the morning. After showing net gains of 12 to 15 points, which carried May up to 12.09 and October to 12.32, trading tapered off and prices reacted some 5 or 6 points from the best in a comparatively quiet early afternoon market.

Selling Pressure Develops.

No selling pressure of an aggressive character developed, however, and there was a renewal of demand in the late trading, probably encouraged by the tone of the grain and stock markets. Closing quotations were within 2 or 3 points of the best on most of the active months, while May closed at 12.05, or 5 points off.

Trading interest focused largely on the news from Washington and the possibilities of silver legislation received a good deal of attention. May liquidation continued during the day, but was absorbed by the trade, with considerable switching reported from near to late months.

Exports today, 11,293, making 6,298,219 so far this season; port receipts, 15,949; U. S. port stocks, 3,062,675.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firmer today on increased covering and commission house buying, promoted by the advance in cotton, reports on poor seed conditions in the South and the higher lard market. Final prices 7 to 9 points net higher. Sales were 104 contracts, although 70 were in switches, largely from May to September at 43 points. Bleachable spot nominal; may closed 5.36, July 5.69, September 5.80, October 5.88.

Weekly Food Prices Decline Another Cent

New York, April 10.—Following a drop of 2 cents in the preceding week, a further drop of 1 cent took place in the Weekly Food Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., marking the fourth consecutive weekly decline in this series. This continued weakness in foodstuffs has brought the index to $2.10 for April 3, the lowest point in two months and has canceled almost half the gain registered from January 1 to the beginning of March. The latest index, however, compares with $1.58 at this time a year ago, or a gain of 32.9 per cent.

The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Food Index of wholesale prices (the sum-total of the price per pound of 31 articles in common use) compared with preceding weeks and years is given herewith:

Puerto Rico Sugar Exports Increase

New York, April 10.—Raw sugar shipments from Puerto Rico to the United States from January 1 to April 7 totaled 291,571 short tons, an increase of 35 per cent when compared with shipments of 216,011 during a similar period last year, according to cables to the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

Refined shipments amounted to 35,050, a 7.7 per cent increase over the 32,545 ton total for the 1933 period.

Shipments of raw and refined together for the week ended April 7 amounted to 22,649 tons against 24,694 in the same week last year. About 36 per cent of the total available for the U. S. of the 1933-34 crop has been shipped to date.

Motorization Is Help To Germany's Railways

The motorization of railroad vehicles, together with the expansion of highway transport services by the Federal Railroad Co., is regarded by many persons as of utmost importance for German national economics, according to Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin, in a report to the Commerce Department.

This development, Miller points out, has been the result of reduced traffic in recent years and increasing competition from private truck operators and airplanes, which forced the railroad company to use smaller transportation units more frequently. The only possibility of fulfilling these requirements was seen in the operation of self-propelled cars for passenger traffic and motor truck service for freight traffic.

Wheat Values Advance on Crop Report

Government Places Yield 13,207,000 Bushels Under Estimates.

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—Evening up for the United States Government crop report, together with big export purchases of Canadian wheat, helped today to strengthen wheat values here.

The Government crop report, issued after trading was at an end, suggested the 1934 yield of domestic winter wheat would be much less than was generally expected, totaling 491,793,000 bushels, whereas the average of latest unofficial estimates indicated 505,000,000.

Price upturns for wheat were also stimulated by Senate Agricultural Committee approval of a silver purchase bill.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled, ¼ to ½ higher than yesterday's finish; corn, ⅛ to ⅜ up; oats, unchanged to ¼ advance, and provisions, unchanged to a raise of 5 cents.

At one stage, wheat prices in Chicago climbed to above 87 cents for May contracts, the first time since March 26. Above that price, the market ran into selling orders, but the undertone was noticeably firmer than of late.

Contributing to the upward trend were prospects that the Rome wheat conference would vote to reduce flour extraction to 64 per cent, a rate 8 to 10 per cent less than formerly and pointing to much enlarged use of wheat in various countries.

Canada's Overseas Sales.

Estimates from Winnipeg were that upward of 2,000,000 bushels of wheat from Canada had been bought today for shipment overseas, and that there were orders to purchase 2,000,000 bushels additional.

Meanwhile, the Liverpool wheat market was reported as decidedly stronger, with a better demand evident, and the Rome conference exerting a bullish influence. Green bug complaints from the Southwest, especially central Kansas, were also given considerable attention.

Corn and oats borrowed strength from wheat. Industries were absorbing Chicago receipts of corn.

Wool Futures Prices Climb; Trading Slow

New York, April 10.—Prices of wool top futures closed the past week with an advance of 6 to 11 points. The larger gains were in the nearby months. Trading continued rather slow but was fairly well distributed over the nearby and fall months.

The Boston spot price of the exchange standard top held unchanged at 111.0 cents. Business in that market, in both raw wool and top, is still very dull.

Futures abroad were also up somewhat from the previous week's close. At Antwerp prices were up an eighth to three-eighths of a penny, while at Roubaix they showed an advance of 40 to 60 centimes. Bradford spot quotations, however, were unchanged to off a quarter of a penny from the close of a week ago.

D. C. Bankers Select Leaders For Program

The importance of the program to be presented at the coming convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 27-30, is evidenced by the selection of program committee members, all of whom are past presidents of the association.

In addition to Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Hamilton National Bank, the chairman, the other members are Victor B. Deybar, president Second National Bank, vice chairman; Francis G. Addison, jr., president Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Robert V. Fleming, president Riggs National Bank; Howard Moran, vice president American Security & Trust Co., and M. D. Rosenberg, president Bank of Commerce & Savings.

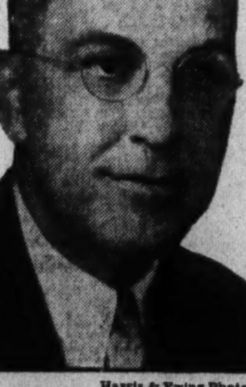

At a meeting yesterday, it was decided that the program would deal with such topics as current legislation and its effect upon banking practices, interest problems, constructive customer relations, accounting and analysis of accounts, safe deposit methods and savings department details. One feature of the program, it is said, will be the opportunity for general discussion of the topics presented.

The selection of the speakers has not yet been made as it is the purpose of the committee to secure men best qualified for the various subjects to be considered. It is the intention of the committee to make each day's program of outstanding interest and to eliminate the reading of perfunctory reports which may be printed in the records of the sessions.

Every indication points to an unusually large attendance at the coming meeting which will require only two days actual absence from business, the first day being Sunday and the last being the usual Memorial Day holiday.

Local banks yesterday pledged full cooperation with the United States Treasury in reaching individual holders of the called Fourth Liberty loan bonds. The action was taken by individual banks, as well as by the District Bankers' Association, in response to a telegram received this morning from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Improvement Is Noted In British Coal Exports

A slight improvement was registered in British coal export trade during the first two months of 1934 as compared with the corresponding period of 1933, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner James Somerville, jr., London. The 1934 export figures, however, still remain below those for the first two months of 1932.

Total cargo and bunker coal shipments from Great Britain during the January-February periods of 1932, 1933 and 1934 were, respectively, 9,026,692, 8,352,932, and 8,681,095 long tons.

World Cotton Consumption Sets Record

Spinners Use More Bales Than in 3 Previous Seasons.

New York, April 10.—World cotton spinners consumed approximately 2,684,000 bales of all kinds of cotton during February, as compared with 2,222,000, revised, in January, 1,993,000 in February last year, 1,933,000 two years ago, 1,830,000 three years ago and 2,118,000 four years ago, according to a report issued today by the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

The decline of 138,000 bales in consumption from January to February this year was slightly more than seasonal.

On a percentage basis, the decline in the use of all growths was 6.2 per cent, as compared with an average decline from January to February in the past six years of 4.9 per cent.

U. S. and Foreign Cotton.

World consumption of both American and foreign cottons registered slightly more than the usual seasonal decline from January to February.

Consumption of American cotton declined 7.2 per cent this year, as compared with an average decline of 5.7 per cent in the past six years, while consumption of foreign growths declined 5 per cent, as compared with an average decline of 3.9 per cent.

During the seven months of this season from August 1 to February 28, spinners of the world used 14,827,000 bales of all growths of cotton as compared with 13,998,000 in the corresponding portion of last season, 13,631,000 two seasons ago, 12,809,000 three seasons ago, and 15,102,000 four seasons ago.

More Cotton Used.

"All of the major divisions of the world cotton spinning industry used more cotton in February than in February a year ago," says the Exchange Service, "and all divisions except Great Britain used more than two years ago. Domestic mills consumed 478,000 bales of all growths of cotton during February as compared with 441,000 in February last year, 451,000 two years ago, 434,000 three years ago, and 495,000 four years ago.

British spinners used 214,000 bales as against 205,000 last year, 229,000 two years ago, 157,000 three years ago, and 222,000 four years ago. Spinners on the Continent consumed 668,000 bales as against 640,000 last years, 634,000 two years ago, 597,000 three years ago, and 721,000 four years ago.

The Orient and minor consuming countries used 724,000 bales as against 707,000 last year, 619,000 two years ago, 642,000 three years ago, and 680,000 four years ago."

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, April 10.—WHEAT—Shipments from elevators, 27,012 bushels. Stock in elevators, 962,503 bushels.

Opening prices were: No. 2 red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 91¼; April delivery, domestic, 91¼.

CORN—Receipts, 1,429 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 2,475 bushels. Stock in elevators, 13,709 bushels.

Receipts of corn from the nearby sections have recently been running light. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair domestic demand.

COB CORN—Quoted at 3.00 per barrel for carloads prime nearby yellow on spot. Offerings more than ample for present needs. Demand limited.

No. 2 yellow corn (old) arriving here by car quoted at 64@65 per bushel, with transit billing.

Receipts of oats show some increase here. Demand is fair in a jobbing way. Choice, heavyweight oats command a good premium over the average run and lighter weights.

No. 2 whie oats, 45@49 per bushel, as to weight and location.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1½c per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 32,751 bushels, including 28,000 bushels afloat and 4,751 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 50 bushels. Stock in elevators, 200,435 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. Supply ample. On good timothy and clover mixed prices range from 12.00 to 14.00 per ton. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

Improvement Is Noted in Shipping Lines

Idle Steam and Motor Vessels Decline to 2,819,000 Gross Tons.

At the beginning of the current year, the report shows, there were 8,891,000 gross tons of shipping laid up in the principal maritime countries, which represents a reduction of 3,809,000 gross tons, or nearly 43 per cent, as compared with January 1, 1933.

This reduction, it is pointed out, is the result both of scrapping and reemployment, although the exact ratio of each factor is indeterminable at this time. In the United States, however, most of the reduction is attributed to reemployment.

Idle steam and motor shipping of the United States on January 1, 1934, including Shipping Board and privately owned vessels, totaled 2,819,000 gross tons, compared with 3,243,000 tons on July 1, 1933, and 3,588,000 tons on January 1, 1933.

The corresponding figures for Great Britain and Ireland were, respectively, 2,045,000, 3,207,000 and 3,096,000 gross tons; for France 831,000, 940,000, and 931,000 tons; for Germany, 523,000, 703,000 and 1,103,000 tons; for Norway, 448,000, 743,000 and 635,000 tons, and for Italy, 441,000, 512,000 and 619,000 tons.

Farm Products' Price Changes Are Small During First of April

Cotton Market Is Quiet and Nearly Steady; Most Value Shiftings in Grain Are Upward; Live Stock Trend Is Irregular, With Slight Declines.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.)

Price changes on leading farm products were mostly small during the first ten days of April. Cotton markets were quiet and nearly steady. Most price shifting in the grain market was slightly in the upward direction and demand was active for some lines of cash grain. Recent advances for bran and the feeds were maintained.

Trend of live stock was irregular with small declines on hogs, sheep and lambs and a fairly steady cattle market. Prices of butter, cheese and eggs weakened a little with increasing supply. There was little change in the poultry market. Potatoes generally have held most of the preceding recoveries from the slump of last month. Apple markets continued fairly steady. Many lines of vegetables are showing irregular declines as the shipping season moves northward.

Cotton Price Changes Slight.

Cotton prices changed only slightly during the first week of April, maintaining the small advance of the week before. The cotton markets were reported awaiting progress of measures to contral market production. Domestic and foreign inquiries increased.

The volume of sales of spot cotton reported by leading markets was nearly double the small volume of the previous week, but slightly less than for the corresponding times last year.

Increased inquiries were reported in the Memphis territory and covered extra white middling and strict middling in the lengths 1⅛ to 1 3-16 inches inclusive for shipments to Carolina mills. Increased inquiries for cotton in the lengths 1 inch to 1 1-32 inches for tire fabrics were also reported. Cloth markets were reported slightly more active. Total exports to April 6 were only about 15,000 bales smaller than a year ago.

Cash Grain in Good Demand.

Marketings of wheat were only moderate. Milling inquiry for spring wheat improved with some broadening in domestic flour trade. Inquiry for durum wheat slackened. Foreign markets were fairly steady.

Moderate to generous rains or snows in the spring wheat territory and additional moisture in the Central and Southwestern States improved domestic wheat prospects. The prospective increase in the winter wheat crop is about offset by smaller stocks.

Rye markets held firm with light receipts in active demand. Corn turned firmer, influenced by light country markets and small remaining farm stocks available for market. Growers were not selling freely. Corn planting was in progress in Oklahoma and southeastern Kansas and had advanced locally in the Southeast as far north as North Carolina. The oats market continued weak and featureless.

Offerings were light, but demand was limited with the result that prices held about unchanged. The barley market was rather weak and unsettled. Choice malting barley was in good demand, but offerings of malting types were scarce. Inquiry for feed barley was dull and prices were slightly lower.

Feed markets were sharply higher during early April, but the situation was rather unsettled since demand from feeders and industries slackened with advancing prices. Reduction of spot supplies was the principal strengthening influence in wheat feeds. The advance in prices of bran and middlings was reflected in higher quotations for concentrates. Corn feeds, alfalfa meal and mixed feeds were mostly steady, but demand was only moderate. Feed prices advanced about 4 per cent, as compared with the average of the month before.

Live Stock Supply Moderate.

Receipts for the first week of April at 11 important market centers showed decreases in the aggregate approximating 11,000 cattle, 20,000 hogs and 19,000 sheep and lambs, as compared with the week previous. Veal calf marketings showed further slight seasonal gain. The extreme Chicago top on hogs at $4.40, compared with $4.05 during the corresponding week a year ago and $4.60 the same week two years ago.

Declines on most classes and grades of cattle early in the month were followed by improvement later. Weighty slaughter steers were on fully as high a basis as at the close of the month previous. Extreme top at Chicago for the first week of April was $7.65, paid for long yearlings and best medium-weights. Choice veal calves held about steady, but liberal receipts of light vealers cashed largely at a 50-cent decline.

A huge tonnage of beef has moved into consumption the past few months, yet slaughter steers are now selling irregularly but sharply higher than at the turn of the year. The advance has been most pronounced on weighty steers, the market for which at Chicago being $2 to $3 per 100 pounds higher than at the early winter low spot. With moderate marketing, the fed lamb trade staged a comeback. Packers and shippers were paying upward of $9.40 and the bulk of the more desirable fat lambs cashed around $9.25. Buying of light spring lambs on Greek Easter account stimulated the trade on such kinds, and most native springers sold at Chicago from $10 to $13.

Eastern shipments of California new crop lambs attained fair volume, but the peak movement for the season from that source is still estimated to be several weeks away. Declines in matured sheep values of 25 to 50 cents during the week, Chicago basis, was not an unexpected or unseasonal development, as demand for mutton invariably weakens with the advent of warmer weather.

Despite some weak spots, a substantial proportion of the remaining supplies of last year's wool clip was held to the top asking prices realized in central markets at any time within the past two months. Weakness in the market was most in evidence on medium grade fleece wools as new wools are available at prices considered below the parity of current quotations on graded Ohio and similar wools of last year's clip.

Fruit Growers Get Loans for 1934 Crop Aid

Hagerstown, Md., April 10 (Spl.).—There have been 122 applications by fruit growers for loans in District No. 2, of the East Central Fruit Growers, Production Credit Association, it was announced today.

Most of these applications have been acted upon favorably and many of the growers already have received part of their loans.

Virginia led the five States in the district with 60 applications, Pennsylvania had 25, West Virginia 18, Maryland 12, and Delaware 7.

D. C. Seeks No Aid.

No applications were received from the District of Columbia or Puerto Rico, both of which are in District 2.

Of the applications in Virginia, 17 have been closed, with money already in the hands of orchardists, 18 are in the hands of attorneys and 20 others are in the Intermediate Credit Bank. Five applications are in the hands of inspectors.

In West Virginia 13 have been closed, 3 in the hands of attorneys and 2 in the hands of inspectors.

In Pennsylvania, 16 are closed or in the hands of attorneys, 4 are in the Intermediate Credit Bank, and 5 in the hands of inspectorr.

In Maryland, 8 are either closed or in the hands of attorneys and 4 in inspector's hands.

In Delaware the 7 applications for loans are either closed or in the hands of attorneys.

Applications favorably acted upon call for part of the loan immediately, which will be used for dormant spray for scale and aphis and for fertilizer. After June 1 an inspection of crop conditions will be made and if there is an indication of a normal crop, the applicant will receive the full amount of the loan originally granted. If the inspections show that there will not be a normal crop, the loans are reduced accordingly.

Baltimore Tobacco.

Baltimore, Md., April 10.—LEAF TOBACCO—Maryland—Receipts for the past week were 204 hogsheads, while sales were 504 hogsheads, most of which was of the 1932 crop. Most grades of the 1933 crop continue in good demand.

U. S. Exports To Europe Rise Sharply

February Shipments Climb to $82,182,000; Nearly Doubles Imports.

(Associated Press.)

Exports to Europe in February increased to $82,182,000, as compared with the previous February's $51,093,000, and were nearly double the total of imports, $44,756,000, as compared with $26,790,000 for the same period of 1933.

These figures were issued today by the Commerce Department in a tabulation by countries which showed the grand totals of exports and imports for the month at $162,805,000 and $125,292,000, and the totals for the month at $162,805,000 and $125,292,000, and the totals for the first two months of the year at $335,026,000 and $254,068,000, compared with $222,104,000 and $179,754,000 for the first two months of 1933.

Daily Oil Yield Is Increased 41,632 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., April 10 (AP).—A 41,632-barrel increase in Texas was responsible for the greater part of an advance from 2,380,937 to 2,427,982 barrels in daily average crude oil production of the United States last week, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

With east Texas furnishing almost half the total output, Texas production increased from 1,018,720 to 1,060,352 barrels daily. The east Texas increase was from 488,455 to 528,220 barrels. Oklahoma production dropped from 461,475 to 460,505 barrels.

Wabash Line Loadings Drop to 12,283 Cars

New York, April 10 (AP).—Revenue freight car loadings on the Wabash Railroad for the week ended April 7 amounted to 12,283 compared with 13,231 in the previous week and 10,571 in the same week last year.

Loadings on the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad for the week ended April 7 were 12,383 compared with 13,581 in the previous week and 9,883 in the same week last year.

Wall Street Briefs.

Sales of G. C. Murphy Co. in March totaled $2,246,133, an increase of 70.9 per cent over the same 1933 month.

Samuel Messer, president of the Quaker State Oil Refining Co., says that sales of quality motor oil and lubricants in the first quarter showed the largest gain in the past four years, rising 25 per cent over 1933, an improvement greater than had been anticipated. Reports from dealers served by the Quaker State Co. reflect "growing optimism."

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation had awarded to Austin Nichols Co. a contract for 128,000 pounds of cocoa to be shipped to Puerto Rico for distribution to the island populace.

Members of Commodity Exchange, Inc., have circulated a petition asking the board of governors to discontinue Saturday trading from June 15 to September 15.

Pure Carbonic Co. of America, subsidiary of Air Reduction Corporation, has bought the fixed assets of the American Dryice Corporation and has formed a company to administer the business.

Favorable dividened changes in the past week totaled 23, the same as in the previous week, says Standard Statistics Co. Ten resumptions, four increases, seven extras and two initial payments were reported. Ten unfavorable revisions compared with seven the week before.

March sales of S. H. Kress & Co. were $6,330,749, an increase of 54.9 per cent over 1933.

S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, says in a current monthly business review that the immediate outlook for industry in the Dominion is "the brightest since the beginning of the depression," notwithstanding slight declines previously noted in some basic industries. Steel, newsprint and lumber output dropped in February and early March, although the showing was better than a year ago. Canada's February export trade, Mr. Logan asserts, declined at a greater than seasonal rate.

California to Make 60,000,000 Gallons of Wine During 1934

New York, April 10.—California's wine industry, an unorganized and restricted business at the repeal of prohibition last December, now represents an investment of $425,000,000, with operations 25 per cent beyond the production in the pre-prohibition year of 1918, the Bank of America, Pacific Coast branch banking system, reports in its weekly comment on Far Western business.

"Naked wine" and brandy produced in 1933 are valued at approximately $28,000,000, compared with about $27,000,000 on a slightly larger vintage in 1918. Sales were brisk until January 1. Then they dropped off, but since March 1 the demand has been active.

Growers have received about $10,000,000 on the 1933 crop. Vineyards today are valued at $300,000,000, wineries at about $50,000,000, and inventories at $75,000,000.

Actual vintage in 1933 was approximately 40,000,000 gallons, but some 23,000,000 gallons on hand brought the total available for market up to 63,000,000 gallons. This compares with a yearly average of 45,000,000 gallons marketed in preprohibition years.

The probable annual production for 1934 will be approximately 60,000,000 gallons. The State had 722 wineries in 1918 and 422 today, but several very large wineries are included in the current figures.

March Steel Shipments Pushed Higher

(Associated Press.)

Shipments of finished products of the United States Steel Corporation in March totaled 588,209 tons, compared with 385,500 in February and 256,793 in March, 1933.

The March shipments, which were 202,709 tons higher than in February, reflected a continuation of the increased demand for steel products that has been going on almost uninterruptedly since January 1. For the first three months the corporation shipped 1,305,486 tons, compared with 817,860 tons in the first three months last year.

A substantial gain in shipments had been expected, since operations increased last month. Also, March had four more working days than February.

Output of the steel industry diminished late last month and early in April, but more recently there has been renewed expansion as a result of steel price increases.

Meade Reelected By Tobacco Group

Danville Body Reports Uncertainty on Bright Leaf Control.

Danville, Va., April 10 (Spl.). John S Meade was today reelected president of the Danville Tobacco Association and Thomas S. Williamson vice president.

The Board of Trade, after a spirited fight, amended the constitution so as to make the post of supervisor of sales, now held by H. W. Stigall, elective by the executive committee instead of the general membership.

Reports on the bright leaf industry reflected considerable uncertainty over the result of Federal crop control and reduced production next harvest, but reports indicated a wide response to the AAA plan for a 30 per cent acreage cut, which is expected to increase the price per pound to the farmer.

Germany's Textile Industry Climbing

Numerous factors have combined recently in improving conditions in Germany's textile industry, according to Acting Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin, in a report to the Commerce Department.

The greatest impetus, it is pointed out, came from orders placed by the authorities and the labor provision measures of the Government. The chief item was the dress uniform for the labor front. Furthermore, the firm price trend on the markets for spinning materials stimulated the purchasing activity, especially since the supplies held by the trade were in general so small as a result of the crisis that stocks urgently needed replenishment.

A greater degree of confidence and further improvements of economic conditions induced consumers to make speculative purchases in excess of immediate requirements. The first two months of the current year compared with the corresponding period of 1933 showed a considerable improvement.

Walt Mason, Himself

Moving.

It's a weary job, this moving, and our morals aren't improving when we look upon the wreckage of the chattels that we prized; everything's mislaid or broken, every keepsake, every token, it's a job that wrings the bosom, it's a job to be despised. All the books we want are missing, all the treasured works of Gissing, all the works of Lang and Barrie and a lot of gifted dames; and the chromos that we cherished, they've been knocked about, they've perished, there are holes in costly canvas, there are dents upon the frames. Now the cook can do no cooking, she's beshrewing and gadzooking, for the implements she's needing, they are stolen, lost or strayed; she is feeling lost, forsaken, for she can not find the bacon, and she can not find the ketchup or the soup or marmalade. I behold the women weeping, they would like to do some sweeping, but the brooms are left behind us, in the barracks that we left; we've been moving, and we're hunting for the curtains and the bunting, everything is gone to thunder, and our spirits feel berett.

SAXON WEAVE SUITS

FOR MEN AND YOUNG MEN

made by the makers of Knit-tex Topcoats

($30) and Worsted-tex Suits ($42)

Saxon-Weave Worsted, $35

LIKE fine clothes, but haven't the purse to just buy without thinking of cost? Then you're the man for Saxon-Weave . . . the suit tailored expressly for men who want fine clothes, who won't wear anything but fine clothes, but want them at a moderate price.

A NEW development in fabric, as new as the season's stream-lining in motor cars. Woven of 100% virgin wool . . . bound to fit perfectly and never to lose its smart "new" look.

SINGLE-BREASTED, double-breasted . . . the new Eze-Swing sports-back models included. The very suit for the man who sits hunched at his desk or who tramps the streets in all weathers. In either case you'll find your Saxon-Weave more than able to "stand the gaff."

PATTERNS? Well, at $30 you'll find a mighty fine choice . . . sturdy cheviots swinging again into vogue . . . sporty flannels and very fine Saxonies.
